Ohio on negro suffrage:—

"Fourth, That, imbused with the spirit of true democracy, and believing that the powers necessary for the purpose of attaining the ends of government ought not to be restricted to a privileged class, but should be vested in the whole people, without unjust or odious distinctions, or qualifications not equally attainable by all; and further, believing that these sentiments are in strict accordance with the spiri and tendency of modern civilization, we place our selves on the simple and broad platform of impartial manhood suffrage, as embodied in the proposed amendments to the State Constitution, appealing to and confiding in the intelligence, justice, and patriotism of the people of Ohio to approve it at the ballot-box."

The Cincinnati Commercial (Republican) com-plains, under the head of "Too Much Committee," about the bungling manner in which the canvass has been managed in Ohio by the Republican Committees. Itsays:-

publican Committees. It says:—

"How not to do it with a great deal of pretense of doing it seems the study and achievement just now, not only of the Republican Campaign Committee of Hamilton county, but of the Republican State Central Committee. They certainly are not bringing up their work with the aleriness, vigilance, energy, and vim that the occasion demands. It is a peculiarity of the State Central Committee that its chairman is one of the defeated candidates for the Gubernatorial nomination, and it is remarkable that in the opening of the canvass he caused the loss of two important weeks of the campaign in a squabble about a soldiers' claim agency at Washington, that we have no doubt an attorier could have attended to as well as he did for a small fee. Complaints as to his management are universal in the State. Everything has been bungled from the beginning."

The following report of the speech of General Grant's father, at a Democratic meeting in Cin-cinnati lately, is published in a Cincinnati

"Gentlemen-The lateness of the hour prevents me from making a speech. Between the two candidates for Congress, Mr. Smith and Mr. Carey, I will only say that you can judge them by their record. While one opposed the war, and did everything he could against it, the other favored it and did everything he could for it. If this is a Democratic meeting, I advise to the latter than the could for it.

fairs-Congressman Washburne's Exposition of General Grant's Political CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 6 .- At the Jo Daviess

cunty Republican Convention, h ld yesterday at Galena, Illinois, Hon. E. B. Washburne made a very succinct speech on the political ques-as they would upon a civilian and a politician, and even a candidate for civil office. They would seem to demand that he should make known his political views on the hustings and through the newspapers, with all the arts of the common demagegue. The public had no more right to expect General Grant to speak out than they had to expect Lieutenant-General Sherman, General Meade, General Sheridan, or General Thomas to make public their political General Thomas to make public their political views. The General was not in the habit of proclaiming himself to the world by words, but, like a wise man, had always made his record through his acts. Though not speaking for the public, no man was more frank in expressing his views on all public matters. He was raised in the Whig school of politics. His venerable father, so well known in Galena, was always an active and influential member of the old Whig party, and, after it went out of existence, of the Republican party. The General was always a Whig.

and, after it went out of existence, of the Republican party. The General was always a Whig, so far as he was a politician at all, and never belonged to or had any sympathy at all with the so-called Democratic party.

Hed General Grant been a member of the Democratic party, he would have been in the same position as he now is, and the same as all the most loyal and patriotic men who were in that party now occupy. Though not a voter in lilinois in 1860, yet, after Mr. Lincoln's administration commenced, and after the firing upon Sumter, there was no man who gave a more earnest support to that a ministration. General nest support to that administration. General Grant was among the first to comprehend the results that would grow out of the Rebellion, and the country will not forget that, as early as 1863, he wrote a letter saying that, auxious as he was for peace, he did not wish to see it esta-blished until slavery was wiped out. In 1864 he was profoundly anxious for the re-election of Mr. Lincoln, and no man more fully comprehended the great fact that upon his re-election hinged the success of our cause and the sup-pression of the Rebellion.

He so far departed from his usual course in such matters as to write and permit the publication of a letter in which he briefly and emphatically summed up the whole question. The letter was published by hundreds of thousands by the Republican Congressional Committee, and exerted great influence in the country. He was openly and strongly for both the Constitutional Amendments, and he halted the Reconstruction act of the Thirty-ninth Congress as the solution of our difficulties, and he entered upon the discharge of his duties under that act with zeal, vigilance, and fidelity. Sympa hizing with Congress in its action, and appreciating the importance of its being in session, he urged and advised such action as would secure an extra session, if necessary. When that session came, he expressed the most serious tears of the effect of a long adjournment, and with a far-reaching sagacity, anticipating the precise such matters as to write and permit the publicafar-reaching sagacity, anticipating the precise state of things that has occurred, he used all his influence with Senators to have them adopt the House provision of the amended bill requiring the assent of the Senate to the removal of the district commanders. Favoring the Reconstruc-tion acts, no effort of his has been wanting to secure their enforcement in the letter and spirit, to the end that the Union might be speedily and fully restored. He believes there no protection or safety to the colored people and the loyal white people in the Rebel States, except through impartial suffrage.

The Reconstruction acts having recognized the entire equality of all American citizens in the states lately in rebellion, he believes that con-sistency, as well as impartial justice, demands that there should be no discrimination against any class of persons in any of the States. His sympathies, his convictions, and his hopes are now, as they always have been, with the great patriotic and loyal people that carried the country through the war. He is in favor of uphold-ing the honor and credit of the national Government, and holds that all our obligations must be discharged in conformity to the terms on which they were contracted. He thinks there should be exercised by Congress and by all departments of the Government a more rigid and searching economy in the expenditure of the public money, and wherever he has had control he has struck off every useless expense, and reformed every abuse. General Grant occupies at the present time the position of Secretary of War ad interim in the Cabinet of Mr. Johnson. His action in accepting the position had been the subject of a great deal of comment, and excited the fears of many good and loyal men. It invoked the denunciation of enemies, and brought forth the excuses of friends. He accepted that position, not, as has been alleged, in obedience to the ommands of a superior officer, but from the stern sense of duty to his country. The President had determined to remove the Secretary War at all hazards, and without excuse or jusdification.

The President thought to relieve himself from the odium of Mr. Stanton's removal and draw attention from that action by offering the place to General Grant. What was to Should the General step into the shoes of Mr. Stanton, and wield all the legitimate powers of the department in aid of reconstruction and in support of the district commanders? In the management of the Indian war and the supervision of war contracts, should he be there to resist the raid of the thieves and plunderers and war claim agents whom Stanton had held at bay, and who were waiting to thrust their arms into the Treasury to flich untold millions of the public money? Or should he refuse, and per mit that most important position to be filled by a Copperhead and a Johnson man, who would hinder reconstruction, who would demoralize the army, who would sanction trandulent and bogus claims of Rebels and bring reproach generally opon the public service? General Grant did not therefore, hesitate to accept the position and all its responsibilities, and his action had the concurrence of Mr. Stanton. Indeed, no steps were taken in that whole business except upon full consultation and understanding between those two distinguished men under such circumstances. The loyal men of the country would have had good cause to censure Genera Grant had he received the position, men who had censured him most for taking it would now have been censuring him for not taking it. They would have said that, professing to be in sympathy with loyal men, and in favor of reconstruction, he shrank the responsibility of a place of the proposition. from the responsibility of a place offered to him in which he could have been of inestimable service to the country, and by such refusal the War Department went into the hands refusal the war Department went into the hands of an enemy. But the General wants no other vindication for his action than will be furnished by his record when it shall see the light, and by his official acts. He can afford to wait. In con-clusion Mr. Washburne said he was not speaking of General Grant as a candidate for the Presidency, for he had no right to speak for him in that regard. He had spoken as he had because so many of his fellow-citizens had asked him in relation to the position the General occupied on questions of the most overwhelming public imortance, and what were his views, sentiments, and convictions touching matters in which all good sitisens feel so deep an interest.

Conflict Between Insurgents and the Papal Troops-Proclamation of Garibaldt. LONDON, Oct. 4-Midnight.-The latest despatches received from Italy, though conflicting, are highly important. A message has just been received from Florence announcing the clash of arms. The insurgent troops, holding a strong position near Bagnarea, in Viterbo, were attacked by the Papal forces. A short, sharp fight ensued, which resulted in the defeat of the attacking party, who were obliged hastily to withdraw. The losses in the engagement are not

The effect of this victory is very inspiriting to the Party of Action. A public meeting of the friends of Garibaldi was held at Turin yesterday. Revolutionary speeckes were made by many distinguished persons. Great crowds of people were present, and the enthusiasm was unbounded. Meetings of a like character are in contemplation in other cities of Italy.

Though a prisoner at Caprera, General Garibaldi has issued a stirring address to his followers, which is published to-day all over Europe. He recites at length the grievances of Italy, and asks his countrymen to redress them now. He appeals strongly to their patriotism, and urges all his friends to march forthwith to

FROM WASHINGTON TO-DAY.

[SPECIAL DESPATCHES TO EVENING TELEGRAPH.] WASHINGTON, Oct. 7. The Mission of General Sherman-President's Last Stroke of Policy. The friends of Johnson deny that Sherman was ordered here to take the War Office from Grant, but pretend that he comes simply to talk about Indian matters with the President. No one here who reads the signs of the times believes a word of this explanation. Johnson is too shrewd to proclaim his plans in advance. and this story that Sherman is here for an Indian talk is only a blind to conceal the real object of his visit. If the elections to-morrow in Ohio and Pennsylvania result in a victory for the Republicans, then Sherman will be ordered back to his post, but if they go the other way then look out for Grant's removal, and Sherman as his successor. This is the whole scheme, and nothing else can be made out of it.
