AMUSEMENTS.

ARCH STREET THEATRE, Mr. Edmund Fal-coner and Miss Kate Reignolds in the beautiful new Irish patriotic play of Innisfallen, assisted by all of the company favorites.

Mrs. John Drew will shortly produce the new comedy of American life, by Miss Olive Logan, called Surf, which will be produced with entirely new scenery.

Nobody's Daughter, the very popular dramatization of Miss Braddon's last novel, "Diavolo,"

AT THE CHESNUT Mr. James E. Murdoch appears in Beaumont and Fletcher's comedy of the Elder Brother.

AT THE WALNUT Miss Charlotte Thompson will appear in her great role of "Amric," in Little Barefoot. This is Miss Thompson's last week, and she presents her finest character. AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC the Black Crook, as usual, with Pepita, Betty Rigl, and Autoneno in new divertissements. This is the last week of the Black Crook. Ristori will appear at the Academy, on Mon-day next, as "Elizabeth," Seats and tickets for the season and for a single performance, can now be secured at Trumpler's, No. 926 Chesnut street. On Tuesday, Mary Stuart; and on Wednesday, Marie Antoinette. AT THE AMERICAN, Mr. Frank Lucey, Mad'lle Bertha, and Miss Florence Reynolds are the latest additions to the company. A first-rate entertainment every night.

The Programmes for Mr. Theodore Habel-man's two Concerts (to-morrow and Wednesday evenings), at Horticultural Hall, are unuaually attractive. Mr. Habelman will be assisted by a pupil (tenor), M'me Bertha Johannsen, and Mr. Jean Louis. Mr. Carl Sentz will lead the orchestra, Tickets at Trumpler's to-day.

THE GREAT APOCALYPSE. - One of the most magnificent works of art ever yet exhibited in our city may be witnessed on Tuesday night at Concut Hall. This is a series of tableaux, the subject of which is the visions of Saint John on the Isle of Patmos, as described in the book of Revelations, the superior excellence of which is alterether. is altogether unprecedented. Indeed, the sub-ject is one calculated to inspire any arist, and the manner in which it has been illustrated in the present instance, proves the truth of this. "The very nature of the exhibition," says the Syracuse Daity Standar of December 3, 1866, "is enough to place it above any ordinary public amusement of the day, and ensure for it the patronage of every man, woman, or child, regardless of precon-ceived ideas or theories." The paintings are by the eminent artist, Hammatt Billings, Esq., and were produced from original designs.

What the Late Elections Have Decided. From the N. Y. World.

They have, of course, decided very little, unless other elections, yet to be held this fall, shall be of like tenor. But of this it is not passible to doubt. The result in Pennsylvania and Ohio, fellowing the results in Connecticut, California, and Maine, confirms the impression that a great reaction is in progress; and by the natural influence of elections upon each other, these successes will give to the reaction a new impetus. Men change sides with facility when multitudes go with them. It is as good as certain, therefore, that the Democratic party will do much better in the November, than they have done in the October elections. The returns will be all in before Congress meets next month, and there can be little hazard in predicting their consequences.

First, the elections knock the bottom out of the radical reconstruction bucket, and spill all the centents. The miscarriage of the reconstruction scheme is certain, be the action of Congress what it may. To say nothing of the stunning and paralyzing effect of this great revulsion upon Congress, the reconstruction scheme will be defeated by the action-or rather by the stubborn inaction-of the South. Even if Congress should be equally stubborn, it will not shake the determination of the South. The Southern people would sooner wait four or six years for the election of a new Senate, than return under the proffered conditions. A number of leading Southerners have indeed counselled submission; but the argument has been, "Let us accept these harsh conditions because they are inevitable;" or, "Let us take these lest we get worse." Thenceforward, white Southerners will scorn to use this kind of reasoning, or to listen to it. They will fall back upon their rights, and decline all action under the reconstruction laws. If new Governments are organized, it will be the sole work of the negroes; and Congress, with its brief lease of power, will not dare to recognize negro Governments pure and simple, especially since negro suffrage has been signally and indignantly rejected in those elections by the only Northern State that had an opportunity to pronounce upon it. With what issue, then, will the Republican party go into the Presidential election? Never were all the plans of a party so shattered and upset. The Republicans have, in a thousand and a thousand ways, so committed them-selves to their present scheme of reconstruction that they cannot retreat from it without a total rout; but they are exposed to still greater disasters if they try to maintain their ground. With what face can they stand by this scheme of reconstruction, after negro suffrage, its central principle, has been scornfully rejected in the North? How incensed must be the thrice-insulted South at any further attempts to force upon them an innovation which is confessed to be intolerable by the Northern States! If the Republicans persist, their ranks will be thinned by desertion. Ruin stares at them on every side. If they lower their standard and profess moderate principles Wendell Philips and the intense radicals will run a separate candidate for the undisguised purpose of punishing the party for deserting its principles.

The Republican party made a fatal mistake in putting a wilfully dishonest interpretation on the elections of last year. They asked the people to inforse the pending Constitutional amendment, and as soon as they got the indorsement, they treated it as authority to kick the very thing indorsed, that is, the Constitutional amendment, aside, and substitute for it a plan totally different and infinitely more harsh and humiliating. To fling the judgment of the people thus back into their faces; to reject a plan the moment the people had signified their approval of it; and with enormous lying impudence pretend they had indorsed something they had never thought of, was as insulting a fraud as it would be to procure a man's signature to a note of fifty dollars, and then immediately efface the substance of the note by a chemical process, and write over the name another note for fifty thousand. Multitudes voted with the Republicans last year who did not really approve of the Cons itational amendment, because they thought it the specifiest way of settling a question which had been, even then, too long kept open. They were too impatient to have the country tranquillized, and supposed that a strong Northern vote endorsing the amendment would cause its immediate ratification by the South. This proved a mistaken calculation. But if the South stood out against the amendment, with all the Northern States voting in its favor, what chance is there of their succumbing to the reconstruction scheme, infinitely harsher and more objectionable, with the Northern States voting

Another Republican project made abortive by the elections is the impeachment of President Johnson. The impeachment project has

The Republicans are reduced to such desperate straits that an active use of the Government patronage might be deemed by them im patronage might be deemed by them important as a means of influencing the Presidential election; and Mr. Wade in the White House would wield the patronage for their advantage. But when it is considered that all the offices are at present filled by Republicans, it is not easy to see that it would signify much to depose the President for the sake of controlling the patronage. It is now certain that they would not be supported in this extreme measure by the public opinion of the country. The attempt would recoil upon its authors, and greatly accelerate the reaction against the Republican party. They will no longer think of braving the public indignation, and the growing strength of a formtdable opposition, by a reckless attempt to unseat a President because he refuses to follow them in innovations upon the established interpretation of the Constitution.

These elections, moreover, settle the question of pegro suffrage as forming part of any system of reconstruction to be hereafter adopted. We do not assert that they settle it in the estimation of Republicans, but that they settle it in fact. Whatever the radicals may continue to think, the general sense of fairness will revolt against thrusting upon the South a measure which is repudiated by the North. If it is repulsive and odious to the North, how much more so must it be to the South! Shall Gentiles force Jews to eat pork when they reject it from their own tables? It would not be merely glaring inconsistency, but wanton tyranny. Besides, in the North, negro suffrage is really of little consequence, the blacks being so few; while it would change the whole character of Southern poli-It would be compelling the South to eat as food what is too nauseous for us to swallow as medicine. Justice and common sense rebuke such despotic insolence. Reconstruction on the negro suffrage basis may therefore be regarded as defunct. Another matter of some political interest decided by the recent elections relates to a prominent candidate for the Presidency. The election in Ohio foredooms Chief Justice Chase. So important was it to his prospects that the State should be carried by the Republicans, and especially that it should ratify negro suffrage, that he spent several weeks in Ohio counselling his friends and manipulating the wires. Under any circumstances, a candidate who cannot carry his own State has a slim chance in a nominating convention. But when the principle with which he is most identified has just been overwhelmingly repudiated by his State, and the whole party has been deeated on the extreme ground he occupies, here is an end, we suppose, of all his

On and after the 1ath of October, 1807, a light will be exhibited from the east pier of Ramagate harbor, at an elevation of about twelve feet from the pavement of the per or twenty-five feet above high water mark. The light will show a radius of 244 degrees from the 13th Bopy round to the centre of the Basin Gates of the west entrance of the inner harbor.

The character of the light will be a white scintillating one, as affering so much true either a fixed or revelving one, and it will be shown from an iron pillar or local. The apparatus will consist of four or five orisms, revolving round an argand immp at equal intervals of five seconds' light and five seconds dark and such as will be readily distinguished from the mass of town lights in the rear.
