FROM OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25, 1867. Dear Editor:-The President to day called General Grant's attention to the petition of some citizens of Georgia, in which they complain of General Pope. It is not the first time these Georgia gentlemen have complained of General Pope. About six years ago, down the Mississippi, a delegation waited upon him with a speech, wanting to know what "you uns come down here to trouble wee uns for; wee uns never went to you uns." The Secretary of War returned the paper to the President, saying that he would write to Pope himself, and see what the trouble is. I think there is a great deal of the Napoleon about Grant, particularly as to his desire to sustain the temporal power of the Pope. (N. B .- If you think this a good joke, don't be afraid of putting it in the paper; it may be new to some of your readers.) Everything is very flat down here just now, us you Ward used to say, poor fellow ! Some little sensation is occasioned here in the golden circles by the report of the suspension of S. M. Clark, Superintendent of the Printing Bureau of the Treasury Department. Several reporters who attended the conspiracy trial were down here, but left in disgust when they found he was only going to be suspended from the performance of his official duties, instead of from a platform. This kind of Capitol punishment they see every day.

will see by this letter: "nuther goak," as Mr.

To-day they are putting down the new carpets on the Senate floor, and for once,

GENTLEMEN HAVE THE PLOOR, of adverse political opinions, without being called to order by the chair. On putting down the new carpet reference will be had to the fitness of the times in its color; consequently it will be blue. Any member who treads the floor the next session will feel blue.

There will be a pickle tub in the office of

THE ROD IN PICKLE

The Hall of the House of Representatives is now cleared of its desks, chairs, and sofas, preparatory to laying down its new carpet. Indeed, the gallery is cleared at last, which the Speaker a year ago threatened daily and hourly to do, but never did. The House of some others yet to hold their elections, the green, to represent the position of those free

The Supreme Court will be thoroughly overhanled and refitted. This it wants badly enough. Two or three of the dummies ought to be taken down off the bench, dusted, varnished, and sent to auction, and some live figures put in their place. This I don't suppose will be done; they will be merely taken down and whitewashed, and set back again.

All through the entire Capitol, carpenters, painters, upholsterers, and plasterers are busy. New lights are being put in the Capitol, which will be an improvement; new coloring given to many of the acts of the last Congress, and the plasterers will leave a quantity of slack on hand for the use of the new members. The upholsterers will stuff the members with every subject except which will not be brought into use except for the purpose of pulling it over the eyes of the minority. So everything that art can do will be done for the next Congress.

General Butler's Committee on the Assassination was to have met yesterday, but none of the members have arrived. If there ever was a sassy nation, it is this.

THE ORDNANCE COMMITTEE

was also to have had a sitting yesterday, to see about the cannons changing their breeches for the approaching winter.

The Impeaching Testimony is in the hands of the compositors at the Government Printing Office, and they are setting on the case. About one witness is set up in ten days, and is then locked up and put in the vault. The "Chase" used in this trial is the same as that used in the conspiracy case, 24 by 38, made of wrought iron. The Government printer regards the President's case in the "form" as dead matter, and expects to distribute it as soon as they can get the time.

General Grant has so far recovered from his indisposition as to attend to his duties. He has been much indisposed to do that heretofore, so the President told me.

Governor Ward, of New Jersey, arrived this evening. Secretary Seward acknowledged him, and introduced him to the other foreign visitors here, including Mr. Romero, the Mexican Minister.

The White House was well attended to-day with visitors seeking interviews with the President. The President's views of things are generally of the stereopticon nature-double.

The Postmaster-General has issued proposals for carrying the mails to Sitka. Next spring he will issue proposals to the different shipping houses to carry the females there YOUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

THE MAID IN THE "NECK." Of a "trucker's" maid I now will sing-Down in the Neck she dwelt, Her heart much felt for others' woes, (Her hat was made of Felt.)

Her toilet was of simple kind, And so it came to pass, She had no mirror-she herself Was a good lookin-g-lass.

She sold the sweetest violets, And roses white and red, And every kind of savory herb -That's how she got herb bread ! At early morning in the street

Her cheery voice did reign, While other people cried for loss, She only cried for gain.

And though the sale was rather slow, And folks were very funny, Yet, being sage, she all the time

Did make a mint of money. An undertaker lived a-near, A man of poor degree,

And though he was robust and strong, A nailing man was he; And every morning when he heard

The maiden's tender ery, He said, "Oh, would I were a bird, From woody ware to fly !"

And still he long delayed to ask If she with him would wed; His head was turned by love, and so He turned it in his head.

Yet oftentimes a pleasant chat Did he contrive to gain; And when at last he owned her sway, Then first she owned her swain.

So in the ripening Autumn month This Bartlett pair were wed; And then she no more walked the streets A-crying for her bread.

So her "Sweet William," proved a "pink," A "balsam" for all ills; And, if for more particulars,

You'll have to see "small Bills." [ADVERTISEMENT.]

A First-class Ruler!" Who shall satisfy the want, is the question just now being discussed among the various Grant Clubs. The latter part of the "adver," though, is rather a stunner. How anybody can want "three girls to feed" just in the face of approaching winter, and business dull, we cannot imagine. "Let me write the songs of a nation," said Fuller, "and I care not who makes its laws," would in our day be varied to read, "Let me write the 'advers' of a people, and I care not who reads them; they'll be none the wiser."
