Will the Decemviri Resign?

Tus Board of Directors of Girard College conaists of eighteen members. Ten of these gentlemen have, in a manner at once outrageous in its disregard of courtesy, and inexcusable because of the absence of an alleged cause, expelled President Richard S. Smith and elected Professor William H. Allen. Immediately upon the fact being made public, the press of the city, with an unprecedented unanimity, and entirely of its own free will, united in denouncing the action of the "ring," and in demanding that Mr. Smith be retained. The City Councils interfered, and adopted resolutions of investigation, and from all sides comes the voice of indignant condamnation. Not deterred, however, in their desire to effect their object, the ten were proceeding to carry out their plan of inaugurating Mr. Allen, and would have done so in defiance of delicacy and justice had not the Court interfered. But though the unanimous verdict of public opinion could not restrain them, yet they felt compelled to give some color of justice to their proceedings, and accordingly published a card denouncing the President of the College in the most unmeasured terms. We have no space to devote to an extended examination of that curious dosument. It alleges that the action of the Board is justified by the fact that President Smith refuses to be ejected, and adds: - "Perhaps no better illustration of the capabilities of the present incumbent could be given than the utter indelicacy and want of dignity which marks this clinging to office."

The ten lecturing President Smith on "indelicacy" is rather rich! If a rude expulsion, with insult and without complaint, is not "indelicate," pray what is? And if there is "indelicacy" in a gentleman not being willing to bow his head and lose his reputation at the will of one politician, then we cordially approve of his being indelicate. We say one politician, for it was by the vote of one politician that this insult was heaped upon him. The change of one vote would have nullified the whole proceeding. With the exception of the charge of indelicacy there is nothing special alleged against Major Smith; but the ten deal in generalities, and a fearful picture they draw of the condition of the College. If what they say is true, President Smith is to blame to a certain extent; but these ten are to blame a hundred times more than the President. If, as alleged, they have power to remove at pleasure, then they are guilty of criminal neglect, and, indeed, collusion, to allow such infamous wrongs to be perpetrated for four years. They selves unfit for their trust, but are unfit for decent Christian society. In the effort to injure President Smith they make the charges rebound with tenfold force on themselves. But the whole of their charges are not worthy of the least credence. The statement throughout is full of palpable errors. They say they have borne this state of affairs "for four years," yet six of the ten have only been in the Board sixteen months, or just one-third of the time which they swear they have endured the alleged cruelties perpetrated by the President. With such palpable falsehoods, what reliance can be placed in the remainder of their statements? Some of the "children of fathers who fell in defense of the nation" are dragged in for the sake of effect. This ex parte and insidious attack en the character of an honorable gentleman is signed by ten members:-James J. Boswell, Robert T. Gill, William C. Haines, Cyrus Horne, Robert M. Foust, John Fry, George Remsen, Joseph R. Rhoads, Albert C. Roberts, and George Truman, Jr.

The Board of Directors consists of eighteen members; the remaining eight refused to sign, and voted in favor of President Smith-They are:-Charles E. Lex, John M. Butler, Thomas M. Coleman, Augustus Heaton, Christian J. Hoffman, Horatio Gates Jones, Joseph Moore, and Thornton Conrow.

How do these names compare for reliability with the ten? Can we not take the word of such men as Charles E. Lex and Horatio Gates Jones, in opposition to some of the politicians who signed the opposite call? Yet one vote would have made the whole attempt a nullity. We would prefer to take the words of Messrs. Lex and Jones against the whole of the decemviri. Yet we do not think that all thirteen gentlemen really acted in opposition to their consciences. A few, three or four at most, are the prime movers, and the rest assented through delusion or thoughtlessness. And as most of them are seldom seen within the College walls, they had to take most of the statements made to them on the faith of a few designing political wirepullers. But the eight gentlemen who did not sign owe it to President Smith and themselves to contradict the statements made by the ten. They lay under grave imputations, and all that is necessary is a denial to secure full faith and credit to their version; for they speak from knowledge, and with high personal reputation, and the people have confidence in their words. So far as the effect of the onslaughts made by the ten are concerned, it is waste of paper and temper. It is so violent and ungentlemanly as to be entirely beyond credence, even did it not abound in self-evident contra-

In regard to the legal power of the Board to remove, without cause assigned, there seems to be but little doubt.

The Board of Directors is a body organized under ordinance of the City Councils, and created as trustees of the authority vested in the city by the will of Stephen Girard. By that will the noble charity now bearing the donor's name was created, and the municipal government appointed what is legally termed the Visitors. The duties of the Visitors, by common law, are in fact to see that the behest of the donor is carried out, and to correct deviation from the purpose of will. The office is entirely subservient to the directions of the creator of the charity, and any power which it may attempt to exercise in opposition to his expressed wishes, will be nullified by the Courts. Consequently, the City Councils, when they adopted a law making all the officers of the College removable at the "pleasure of the Directors," in opposition to the command of Girard, that the offices should not be obtained by "intrigue," acted in opposition to the spirit of the will, exceeded its powers as visitor, and laid itself open to an injunction from the Court of Common Pleas. In conformity with the power vested in it, the Court very properly granted a preliminary injunction, and the proceedings were stayed.

Under the circumstances, with the unanimous condemnation of the press and public, with the scheme checked by legal interposition, and themselves convicted of open misrepresentation, what is the duty of the decemviri to the public? It is clearly for them all to resign the positions they have proved themselves unfitted to fill. If the charges are true, then they should resign because they have not applied a remedy before. If they were false, then the morals of the public will be contaminated by their continuance. Under anys circumstance, it is the duty of Messrs. James J. Boswell, Robert M. Foust, John Fry, Robert T. Gill, William C. Haines, Cyrus Horne, George Remsen, Joseph R. Rhoads, Albert C. Roberts, and George Truman, Jr., to resign from their positions as Directors. Will they do their duty to the city by so doing? The public demand an affirmative response.

The Veracious Voorhees on Rebel Disfranchisement.

Dan Voorhees, of Indiana, a Democratic stump speaker, widely known for his devotion to truth and virtue, averred the other night at a mass meeting in New York, that by the Reconstruction act "nearly one million of white men were deprived of suffrage." As the Reconstruction act disfranchises only those who, in an official capacity, had taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and afterwards broke their oaths and went into the Rebellion, the above figures given by the veracious Voorhees show to what a fearful extent both office-holding and perjury must have prevailed among the Rebels.

There is, however, one little difficulty with Voorhees' statement. It is this-the total vote of the ten unreconstructed States in 1860 -and they have never cast so heavy a vote since-was only, in round numbers, seven hunnot only, by their own words, adjudge them- dred thousand! Where, therefore, are the "nearly one million" perjured and disfranchised office-holders to come from? Allowing that every white man in the unreconstructed States had been an office-holder before the breaking out of the Rebellion, we are still some three hundred thousand short on the count!

The above is a very fair sample of the intelligence and truthfulness displayed by ninetenths of the Democratic politicians when they attempt to speak about the Reconstruction acts. They are both ignorant and extravagant. They indulge in the wildest statements without regard to facts or figures. The truth is, that not to exceed ten thousand persons in all the Rebel States are disfranchised by the acts of Congress. There are many more who. by their own folly and obstinacy, are not on the registry lists, but that is not the fault of Congress.

The Indian Treaties.

OUR Commissioners at Medicine Lodge, Kansas, have succeeded in making treaties with all the Southern Indians. The most of them have consented to be located on reservations, which will remove them from the more immediate neighborhood of the whites. The Cheyennes, however, the most warlike of all the Southern tribes, will not agree to be confined to a reservation, and have maintained their right to hunt between the Arkansas and the Platte as long as the game shall last. Some of the Kansas people, we observe, do not think that these treaties will amount to much; and we regret to see that ammunition was given to the Indians among other presents. We confess that we have no faith in the Cheyennes, and shall not be at all surprised to see them on the war-path again in the spring. However, the two railroads which are being built across the plains will soon simplify the Indian problem, and render it more easy of solution. The vicinity of these roads will soon be settled by our hardy Western emigrants; the buffalo and other game will fall back from the approach of civilization, and the Indians will follow.

REFINED LANGUAGE .- Hon. James T. Brady, a leading New York Democrat, and hitherto supposed to be a gentleman, in a recent speech in New York spoke of Charles Sumner and Thaddens Stevens as "the miserable, dirty dog Sumner, and the superannuated fool Stevens."

The World and other conservative journals should now give their readers some more nice little homilies on the extravagancies of language indulged in by Governor Brownlow and Mr. Hunnicutt of Richmond.

THE WRATHER.—The first snow of the season commenced falling at St. Paul, Minnesota, on Tuesday morning. The storm reached Madi-son, Wisconsip, about noon the same day, and Tuesday morning. The storm reached Madison, Wisconsip, about noon the same day, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon it was snowing quite fast in Chicago. In the latter city, only four days since, the thermometer stood at 80.

The National Banking Question.

Ws take great pleasure in making room today in our crowded columns for the following letter from one of the most prominent bankers of Buffalo to Jay Cooke, Esq., our patriotic townsman, whose recent circular on the National Banking system has attracted such widespread attention:-

Buffalo, Oct. 31, 1867. Jay Cooke, Esq.—Dear sir:—I have read your printed letter to the National Bank Presidents at Sandusky. Your argument in favor of the system of National Banks is able and conclu sive. It comes in a good time, and I trust will have due weight with Congress and the people. You are entitled to the thanks of the banks. the Government, and people for so clear an ex-position of the mutual advantages resulting to all of them in the establishment and maintenance of this great system of national banking, and it seems very clear to me that any material tinkering with the National Bank act would be very likely to produce disastrous consequences to the finances of the country. Under the wise policy of the Treasury Department, we are working steadily towards specie payments, and I hope that Congress will be quiet on this subject and let well enough alone.

I think that Secretary McCulloch and Comptroller Hulburd have both done well. I concur fully in the financial policy of Mr. McCulloch, and think he should be sustained. I look for able annual reports from both these gentlemen, nance of this great system of national bankable annual reports from both these gentlemen, and trust that their views will have an important influence in keeping the finances of the country steady and uniform. We want very little legislation on this subject, and if the politicians will stop agitation, we can resume specific payments within a year after the next Prosipayments within a year after the next Presidential election. Yours truly, E. G. SPAULDING.
