THE DAILY EVENING TELEGRAPH-PHILADELPHIA, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1867.

support.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

EDITORIAL OPTHIONE OF THE LEADING JOURNALS UFOR OURBERT TOPICS-COMPILED HVERT DAY FOR THE EVENING TELEGRAPH.

About Grant Clubs. From the N. Y. Tribune.

"The king is dead; live the king !" The Republican ascendancy having been designedly, purposely broken down by professed Republicans, they are now busy telling us how it may be restored. All we have to do, in their view, is to say no more of Republican principles, but go it blind for General Grant as next Prosident.

We have an abiding conviction that our ablest and most worthy statesman is Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase. And we hold conceded ability, wide civil experience, and eminent private worth, qualities that the people appreciate and take pride in. We deem no man entitled to the Presidency, and do not desire Mr. Chase called to it for his own sake. He has a great office now-one in which he is eminently useful and honored. The same is true in equal measure of General Grant. If either of them shall be summoned from his present to the one higher station, it must be because the place needs him, and not he the place.

General Grant we esteem by no means a great man, nor even a very great General. Yet he has, in every position he has filled, evinced a modest good sense, a practical, un-ostentatious sagacity, which have justly won for him a large measure of public confidence. He is not by training a statesman; yet his negotiations with General Lee and the terms of capitulation conceded by him at Appomattox evince a wisdom and breadth of view which few among our statesmen could have equalled, and none of them has surpassed. We do profoundly honor and esteem him that he has never uttered one syllabel that savored of exultation over the defeated Rebels, or called down vengeance on their heads. The blood-and-thunder policy of execution and confiscation, which we intensely loathe, has had no more effective opponent than this taciturn, reticent first soldier of the Union.

Let it be forever understood, then, that our preference of Governor Chase is based on no dislike to General Grant, nor even a low estimate of his abilities. We presume he has no judicious friend who would pronounce him equal in capacity or experience, as a civilian, to the Chief Justice; we trust no friend of the latter will fail to render the General a hearty support should he be made the standard-bearer of Republican principles in the great struggle now opening. We, at all events, shall not hesitate, in that case, to do our utmost for his election.

But our interest in the success of any candidate will be based upon and measured by his devotion to impartial liberty; and here is where we think those who are now grooming General Grant for the Presidential race are atterly mistaken. We can elect no Republican on the spontaneous combustion principle. We can only triumph by the systematic and thorough enlightenment of the masses, who always vote for what comes to them labeiled Democratic, unless a good reason is shown them for voting otherwise. The war being over, we can no longer carry elections by reading bulletins of Union victories and exhorting the people to "rally 'round the flag." And those who are pushing General Grant for President will land just where the Whigs did with Scott in '52, if they are allowed to have their own way. They utterly mistake the time of day The Republican party rests under two great and solemn obligations. The first is to the freedmen; the second, to the national creditors. It is bound, by every consideration of honor and good faith, to go to the very extent of its power in protecting the blacks in the full enjoyment of their rights as freemen and citizens, and to take care that every one who loaned his means to the Government to sustain and prosecute the war for the Union shall be paid, principal and interest, to the last farthing. If the blacks are to be reduced again to vassalage and semi-slavery, or if the national creditors are to be defrauded, that result must be reached over the Republican party, not through it. Defeat may be misfortune, but it is only misfortune; while infidelity to the blacks or to the national oreditors would be crime and immeasurable infamy. We cannot betray the blacks. To do so is to compact the entire South in solid phalaux against us. The moment we assent to reconstruction on any basis which recognizes the black man as entitled to fewer rights than the white, we consent that every State shall be locked and chained to the car of our adversaries as Kentucky and Maryland now are. And to say that we are for manhood suffrage in the South, but not in the North, is to earn the loathing contempt and derision alike of friends and foes. We have thus, thank God no choice but to stand fast by our principles, our allies, and the inalienable rights of man. We may be beaten in this position, but defeat is the worst fate that can befall us; while, if we recoil, we shall certainly be at once disgraced and ruined. If we are "between the devil and the deep sea," we shall brave with stont heart the perils of the stormy main. We object to the Grant movement that it is of the nature of the ostrich's simple strategy, that deceives only himself. There are times in which personal preference and personal popularity go far; but they are not these times. Does any one imagine that General Grant, supported by the Republicans, would carry Maryland or Kentucky under her present Constitution against Seymour or Pendleton? He could not carry either State even against Forrest, Semmes, or Quantrell. We are involved in a great struggle, and must conquer or fall and pass away. If our principles do not sustain us, we must go down. And, if we shall attempt evasion or concealment, we shall deserve to go down. Any candidate who represents our principles glories in avowing them we shall most heartily support, whether it be Chase, or Grant, or Colfax, or any other. If it were possible that the Republicans should discard their plain obligations, and start on an unprincipled race for victory, we should feel little interest in their success. But this they will never do.

reconstruction under the law will be used as an assurance of its ultimate failure, and per-haps of very serious trouble between the whites and the blacks. And the check which the Republican party has received wherever it has submitted negro suffrage to the popular vote, will be represented as evidence of hos-tility on the part of the North to the principle of the measures which Congress is forcing upon the South. We consider it certain that these endeavors, however vigorous and persistent, will fail to accomplish the purpose intended. Congress will continue its course. It will adhere to the law as it stands, and will do whatever may seem necessary to render it effective. Nothing has occurred to warrant any expectation of change in the will of the majority of Republican Senators and Representatives. If indi-vidual utterances elsewhere than at Washington, and the unvarying tone of the party press, form any fair oriteria by which to judge of probable party action, we must conclude that the determination to enforce the law as it is, remains as strong as before the verdict of Ohio and Pennsylvania had been pronounced. Extreme projects no longer obtain favor. The impeachment scheme is no more encouraged. Confiscation is mentioned only to be hooted down. And the neglect exhibited by Congress towards the material interests of the country-the indifference shown to the demand for retrenchment and a revision and reduction of taxation-forms a subject of complaint, and an assigned cause of disaster. But so far as the reconstruction policy is con-cerned, not a single sign of concession is apparent in any quarter.

The obstinacy of the Southern whites furnishes a plea for firmness, not for compliance with their wishes. And the enfranchisement of the negroes is justified as the creation of a loyal bulwark, and an act of justice which is in no degree impaired by the refusal of Northern States to establish impartial suffrage within their own borders. These reasons and purposes may or may not be good. For the moment, we have no hing to do with their expediency or their reasonableness. We simply eproduce what we know to be the prevailing feeling in the Republican party, from which we infer that there is no probability of any material modification of the Congressional plan during the coming session. In our opinion, there will be no surrender, no yielding on any essential point. On the contrary, we expect to see the entire work pushed for ward energetically, with a view to the earliest possible reorganization of the Southern States. and their readmission to Congress on the basis laid down.

These anticipations are not incompatible with a recognition by Congress of the temper indicated by the elections. Their lesson, as we understand it, is favorable to general moderation in the application of Union views-not to the pretensions of those who were engaged in the war against the Union. It suggests the exercise of no more severity than may be necessary to secure the results achieved by the war, as against the harshness and intolerance of those who would add to the horrors of conflict the penalties of spoliation and proscription.

The stage at which Congress may be appealed to with the greatest probability of success will not be reached until the preliminary proceedings now in progress shall have been ompleted. The elections as held in Louisiana, Virginia, Mississippi, and Arkansas must be respected, and the elections ordered in the other States must go on. The Conventions will follow as a matter of course, and we may assume that the constituencies represented by the delegates will, in the main, uphold their work. The several Constitutions will come to Congress for its approval, and then will arise the opportunity for profiting practically by the moral of the Northern elections. It will then be the duty of Congress to exercise its discretionary authority in the interest of moderation and conciliation. There is undoubtedly danger in the spirit which will actuate the majority of delegates to the Conventions. The passions and prejudices of the people they represent are not unlikely to be reflected in their proceedings. We may apprehend provisions of an intolerant and procriptive character, framed in the name of loyalty against the great body of the white citizens. We may look for disfranchisement and disabilities, and for other provisions at variance with the "harmony and prosperity of the South. Against everything of this nature Congress ought to take a determined stand. It will be bound, as well by considerations affecting the future of the Republican party as by others suggested by the events of this fall, to supplement the fact of reconstruction with acts securing adequate protection and equal rights to the whole Southern people. Having secured the foundations of State reorganization, it cannot wisely acquiesce in measures that have no necessary relation to that object. Some of its most prominent members have more than once disclaimed the purpose of maintaining the disabilities now in They have said that the penalties enacted shall be revoked so soon as they cease to be requisite. That time will surely come when reconstruction shall have been so far perfected as to secure the organization of the loyal elements of the South, with ample guarantees for their strength and safety. From that moment, penalties imposed on account of the Rebellion will be inexpedient. They will be irritating as well as useless. And by guarding against their introduction in any shape into the new Constitutions, Congress will effectually outflank the Southern malcontents, take from the Democrats one of their most potent weapons, and respond satisfac torily to the all but universal desire of the Northern people. The magnanimity of which we sometimes hear can take no better form. nor any one more calculated to secure the permanence of Republican reconstruction.

diabalief.

In one sense it may be allowed that, if the French people like this sort of government, it is no one's business but their own. If they like to have a chain about their necks, let them have it. If they like to have their preas gagged, their freedom of speech taken away if they relish being perpetually watched in their houses, dogged in the streets, questioned for every act, called to account for their comings and goings, told what they may read, and what they may not read, what plays they may see acted, and what songs they may sing-if a nation be sunk so low that it can love such things, for God's sake let it hug this loathsome corpse of life in peace ; we can hold our noses and keep to the windward. Meanwhile it is not a little absurd to hear such a nation forever bragging of its high civilization, and claiming the right to lead the world of ideas as well as the world of national progress. But bragging, though offensive, hurts nobody, and France may be permitted to grovel and to brag unquestioned within her own domain. It is only when "this vice of kings, this pick-purse of the empire and the rule,' steps out of his own kingdom and undertakes to set straight the affairs of other nations as he has done those of his own, that we have a right to complain; and Louis Napoleon has now reduced his meddling to such a system that there cannot be a movement for liberty in any part of the world that he does not send his armies to crush it, if possible, at the very least to hinder it, by every cruel, desperate, and insulting means.

And so completely has his will domineered over the rest of Europe, that until Prussia rose and confronted him there was no power to say him nay, or that even dared hint displeasure at his acts. England lies at his feet cowering like a threatened hound; her only conquests of late are over the wretched Fenians, whom her own laws have made beggars and exiles, over Indian savages whom she frightens by a bloodthirstiness more awful than their own, over the merchant vessels of a nation with whom she is at peace. Austria, whose simple-minded heir has been inveigled by his cunning arts into a shameful death, makes haste to Paris to kiss the hand that shed his blood; Russia sends her Emperers to eat his salt who has brought her to open shame, and for a whole summer kings, princes, and nobles from every land that is owned by them have made crowns and coronets as familiar in Paris streets as the citizen's hat.

When we were in the mortal agony of our civil war, this man put all his infernal engi-nery at work, and tried both to secure our ruin and to destroy the life of a great neighboring State. Gladly would he have done both, and long and hard he worked to accomplish his purpose. It was a bitter day for him when he found that Americans are not Frenchmen, and that Mexicans are not Italians; a bitter day when the bone to which he had set his teeth was snatched from his paws, and he was beaten to his kennel. But Louis Napoleon learns no lesson. Made the laughingstock of the world by his disgraceful defeat in Mexico, sneered at for a prophet, scorned for a promise-breaker, he tried again to meddle, and this time with Prussia. All the world knows the end of that meddling, and perhaps there never was a jest so relished by the world as Napoleon's defeat by Bismark. It might almost seem as if fate were bent on forsaking her favorite, if his heel were not still planted on the neck of England and on the head of Italy.

Three times now has this man, acting from his own selfish desires to be thought the controller of events, and driven by his own fears of liberty, prevented Italy from ordering her Government as she thinks best. When he first set his blood-hound army at the throat of this fair fugitive from tyranny, all the world cried out at the enormity of his crime. But he defies the conscience of the world, as he defies God and justice, and sat for fifteen years by the side of prostrate Italy holding her chains, and threatening her with his sword. Since then the world has watched, heart-sick and weary, waiting for the time when he should release his hold, and lend an ear to the mingled threats and pleading of the world. But we wait in vain. While this man draws his hated breath Italy shall not live, nor her children draw a free breath. Coward that he is, he has at last found one nation too weak to shake off his bonds, and the luxury of tyrauny is too great that he should easily forego it. Thwarted in Mexico, snubbed in Prussia, kept in order by America, uneasy at home, he has of late been stinted in his craving for meddling, and must bully Italy while as yet she has no friends to stand up for her. How long shall Napoleon rule to hinder Europe in her yearning for unity and freedom ? How long must the world be obliged to sit in patience while one man thwarts the will of millions, and by the mere virtue of a name quenches every noble aspiration of the peoples of Europe, and make them his own slaves ?

not strenghten our doubts or drive us into | tarmine upen a total change in their recent. policy.

The great counter-revolution commenced in Connecticut, when the Republicans, confident in their supposed strength, made a nomination disgraceful to any party, for the important office of Congressman, in defiance of common decency and the duty they owed to the public. They were properly rebuked at the polls; their boasted power was broken, and their whole State ticket was dragged down by the dead weight of their Congressional nominee Since that time they have gone on from bad to worse. California, Maine, Ohio, Penusylvania, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and New York have, each in their turn, declared against their violent, destructive, and revolutionary policy, and either driven them from power, or so reduced their large majorities as to show that the whole country repudiates their doc-trines and refuses them its confidence and

The lesson to be learned from these recent elections is easy and plain. It means that the people condemn the Military Reconstruction laws, the Tenure of Office bill, and all the violent coercive measures of the last and present Congress, and declare that all such legislation shall be swept away. It means the repudiation of both the Copperhead and Jacobin factions, and a determination to take a new departure with new men and a new line of policy. It means that while the loyal men of the North demand the full consummation of the freedom of the negro race, and favor their enfranchisement under State laws, with a property qualification, as in the Northern States, they also demand the instant abolition of mili tary governments in the Southern districts, the generous treatment of the white citizens of the South, and their speedy restoration to their lost rights. It means a reform in our whole financial system and a reduction of the national expenditures and taxation.

There is but one way to insure that the copular will shall be fully carried out, and that is by the immediate nomination of General Grant for President of the United States by a grand popular movement, independent of all parties, oliques, and factions. Let the people of New York, of all shades of politics, call at once a great public meeting for this purpose, and thus form in the commercial metropolis, whose voice is loudest against radicalism, the nucleus of a Grant party which shall spread all over the country. Under such a leader success is assured. Grant's whole career in the war and since the war proves that the principles endorsed by the popular voice are those which actuate his course of life. As a soldier he was brave and determined, as a conqueror reasonable and liberal, and as a public officer in time of peace he has established a grand reputation for economy, retrenchment and executive ability. the principles he has contended for during the war and since its close assure the country that reconstruction on a fair and liberal basis. and the reduction of the national debt by two hundred and fifty millions the first year, would be the immediate fruits of his election to the Presidency. While he is dumb to the persuasions and blandishments of the politicians, he would respond to the voice of his countrymen, appealing to him without distinction of party, and his words would be such as to show that the confidence reposed in him would not be misplaced. Let such a movement as we indicate at once be made in New York, and the new party, with Grant, retrenchment, and reform for its watchwords, will carry the whole of the States from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and sweep into the two oceans every vestige o Copperheadism and Jacobinism, with all their stock in trade of secession, African barbarism, national banks, class legislation, and enor mous taxation.

The Fature. From the N. Y. World.

The zeal with which the World has labored in the canvass dispenses it from any necessity of saying how deeply it is gratified with the auspicious result. It may therefore proceed at once to state its views of the new situation. It is of the first consequence that the Democratic party, in the position of influence it now assumes, should neither misconceive the causes nor miscalculate the consequences of these great successes. It will not do to assume that we have won by a simple exertion of our own party strength. The fact is true, whether we recognize it or not, that we are indebted for this magnificent and manifold triumph to citizens who have not, for the last few years, acted with the Democratic party. In this city and in the neighboring towns of New Jersey, to our knowledge, Republicans have voted the Democratic tickets; and we suppose we must have had more or less assistance of this kind in all parts of the country. But a larger proportion of Republicans have staid away from the polls and lent us indirect aid almost as valuable. Our success in the future and will depend upon the continuance of this cooperation; we shall be fatally blind if we do not cultivate and keep it. It is our true policy to render it easy, or at least not difficult, for liberal Republicans to act the same part in the Presidential election which they have acted in so many State elections this year; a result which an attempt to revive the identical politics of 1798, or 1832, or 1856, will have no tendency to accomplish. Whatever was good in the Democratic policy of those saveral eras, and pertinent to the situation of the nate. country, can stand on its own reasons without opening any venerated coffins to find pre-cedents. It is not expedient to brandish winding sheets in the eyes of living men who may have a superstitious antipathy to the habiliments of the grave, especially if asked to use them as ordinary wearing apparel. We suspect that the living generation may object to wearing not merely the grave-clothes, but even the coats of the generation that is past. Our garments must be made to our measure; fitted to our form; even though of the same material. Nor would it be disrespectful to tainable on any other our predecessors to change the cut and the more to say on this sub fashion if case of movement, or grace of apgestions being rather th pearance may be thereby promoted. Our tune. political institutions, like our garments, are worn our for comfort, and intrinsic fitness INTERNAL needs explore no old wardrobes to keep itself in countenance. Our predecessors were wise, but we, with the advantage of both REVENUE their experience and ours, ought to be wiser. We owe them manly appreciation, not super-stitiovs servility. If each living generation is not wise enough to manage its own affairs, PRINCIPAL the Democratic theory is all wrong. It would he better to accept of hereditary rulers who NO. 57 SOUTH THIS live with the generation they govern, and thereby know something of its wants, than to A LIBERAL DISCOUNT take for our governors even the wisest of the Orders or Stamped Checks dead. They knew nothing of our times, howwith despatch. ever well they understood their own. Sense Orders by mail or expres and self-reliance, not servility to obsolete precedents, is the spirit of a people truly demo-1 20 tf JA The great merit of our fathers con cratic. JOHN CRUM sisted in the self-reliant courage with which they broke loose from inapplicable precedents; OARPENTERA and if we act in their spirit we shall make SHOPS: NO. 215 LO. some precedents, break soms, follow some; NO, 1748 CMEM and act equally upon our own judgment in doing either.

FINE OLD RYE WHISKIES IN THE LAND IS NOW POSSESSED BY HENRY S. HANNIS & Nos. 218 and 220 SOUTH FRONT STREET,

WHO OFFER THE SAME TO THE TRADE IN LOTS ON VERY ADVANTAGEOUR

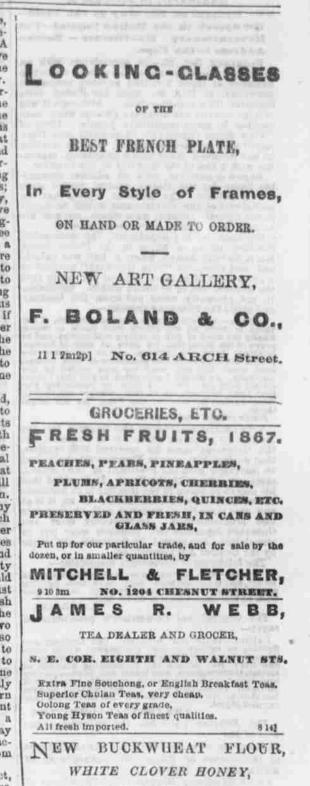

TERMS.

Wheir Stock of Hys Whishies, IN BOND, comprises all the favorite brands extant, and runs through the various months of 1865,'66, and of this year, up to present date. Liberal contracts made for lots to arrive at Fennigivania Railroad Depet: Erricsson Line Wharf, or at Bonded Warehouses, as parties may elect.

It is not merely courtesy to acknowledge, but polite to appreciate, the aid we have re-ceived in these elections from Republicans. A few Republican politicians and presses have covertly aided us as a means of facilitating the nomination of General Grant by their party. The reasoning of these schemers has been ourrect, but their influence very slight. The great body of the people do not enter into the spirit of finessing tactics. The Republicans by whose assistance we have won these great triumphs have acted from more simple and straightforward views. Their sense of fairness has been violated by the domineering and extortionate policy of their party leaders; and it is chiefly in the interest of fair play, according to their sense of it, that they have given us their cooperation. It is a repugnance to extreme measures, a desire to see these agitating controversies settled on a basis just and moderate enough to secure general acquiescence, and therefore likely to be enduring, that has led some Republicans to vote with us and more to abstain from voting against us. But they will no more follow us to extremes than follow the radicals. But if we do not stupidly insist on cutting a winter coat from summer cloth, and fitting it to the measure of a past generation instead of the present, they will have no great objection to wear the uniform of our regiment and continne the march.

We stand on a strong vantage ground, which may be cut from under us if we fail to 'understand our epoch,'' and to seize events by the forelock. If the people entrust us with the government of the country, it will be because we convince them by a large, liberal spirit, and a broad grasp of the situation, that we are capable of devising a policy which will settle public tranquillity on a solid foundation. The people covet national harmony; harmony between the different races in the South; such a settlement, in short, as will prevent either the Southern blacks or the Southern whites from constantly recalcitrating against it and appealing to one or the other political party in the North to disturb and upset it. It should be obvious to all thinking men that we must have more harmony in the North to accomplish this desirable result. The breach which the Republican party has opened between the two races in the South can never be closed, so long as one of them can confidently appeal to half, or nearly half, the Northern people to support them is an effort to have things one way, and the other race can as confidently appeal to half, or nearly half, the Northern people in an effort to have things in a different way. Whatever the united North (bating a powerless body of radical factionists) may agree upon as a final settlement, will be acquiesced in by both races at the South from the sheer impossibility of changing it. Now the assistance, direct and indirect, which Republicans have given us in this election, is quite a step towards that unity of feeling which alone can South and durable trang At least half the Repu behind those who have a away from the polls. W barter, or negotiation, a political dicker, both as and as recognizing the claim of political leader people. The thing for to do is to form a correct tion, and plant itself on that situation and just done, and done promptl can party is floundering defeat, we shall have mous support of the part of the people. does not lie in the sp n ideas which hit the ideas so obviously just match the situation, that own light, with little aid is by such ideas that th harmonized; and puts them forth is the A broad, robust, coura exerted on the actual of piddling refinements of nor stupid adherence dents, is the source fro living ideas are to come; tune is struck, the dans places. The patriotism the craving for tranquil exist in the hearts of t a soil in which the se By these elections the reconstruction is a dem no policy can be a suc recognize what is true a rations of large masses it is only by satisfying can be tar enough harm half of its people being to mutiny by either th race in the South. W ment is substantially North, both races in the abide by. Nor is a d

FOR SAL

FIRST OF THE SEASON.

Congress and the South-What Shall be the Policy!

From the N. Y. Times.

As one of the results of the elections, we may look for an organized effort to induce Congress to modify its plan of reconstruction. Northern men and Southern men will combine to effect a change in the conditions prescribed, and a stoppage of the proceedings by which the negro element has obtained the mastery. The grounds on which these appeals will rest may be easily conceived. The refusal of the Southern whites to participate in the work of 1

How Long, O Lord ! P.om the N. Y. Tribune.

It is within a month of sixteen years since Louis Napoleon struck liberty an assassin's blow and laid her dead upon the soil of France. He stole upon her in the night, while she watched with faithful eyes the land she had redeemed, and her mortal blow came from the hand of him whom she had set to guard the ates against the foe. Never was there a worse treason since the world began; never was there a treason so little looked for; but never was there one so successful. From that day to this, one of the most cunning, coldlooded, unserupulous of tyrants has held his throne, not only against all foreign foes, but against murmurs, discontents, and warnings from his own people, and there seems no rea-son why he should not keep his grip upon the sceptre until death and old age come hand in hand and lead him softly to a peaceful grave. Such lives as his, such deaths as his may be, put to shame all the accepted theories of Providence; to a casual eye they show a God to whom the evil and the good are one; and it is not possible to explain the existence of such unmixed evils, working widespread ruin and misery unchecked and uncontrolled, by any dogmas of any sect. Before such mysteries we can only stand in silence, happy if they do

The Counter- Revolution and its Result -Organization of a Great Party. From the N. Y. Herald.

The political tempest that has swept over every loyal State of the Udion this fall, uprooting and scattering the enormous Republican majorities that have prevailed since 1860, might readily have been predicted by any one curious enough to study and intelligent enough to understand the indications of the political atmosphere for the past two years. When the way closed the loyal people expected at once to reap the advantages of peace in the restoration of the Southern States as productive and industrial portions of the Union, the decrease of national expenditures and taxation, and the restoration of commercial and social intercourse between the several sections of the country. It was thought that when the Rebeis had acknowledged the defeat of their cause and conformed to the new order of things resulting from the war, all serious difficulty in the way of reconstruction was at an end. But the trickery and dishonesty of the oliticians on both sides soon dispelled these illusions, and the disgraceful quarrels that sprang up between the Executive and Congressional ranches of the Government threatened to undo all that had been accomplished by the Union armies, and to plunge us into as serious omplications as those from which we had so recently escaped. The loyal States, although not wholly satisfied with the part taken by Congress, supported the reconstruction policy of that body, as embraced in the constitutional amendment, with singular unanimity; and if the Republican party had adhered to that set-tlement, there would have been an end to the matter. But the radicals, who had obtained the position of leaders in the organization, drove their party into subsequent attempts to force negro supremacy upon the South at the point of the bayonet; and these acts, with their terrible blunders in questions of finance and taxation, have brought about their present reverses. For a year past the people have been growing more and more dissatistied with radical misrule, until the gathering clouds of doubt and discontent have at last burst into a storm that threatens to sweep the whols Re-publican party from existence unlast that do publican party from existence unless they de-

owards that unity of	FIGST OF THE BEASON,
bring harmony to the	ALLERT C. ROBERTS,
fuillity to the country.	Dealer in Fine Groceries,
assisted us by staying	1172rp Corner FLEVENTH and VINE Sts.
Ve are opposed to any
and to every sort of	FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES
s degrading in itself, nauseous and absurd
rs to traffic upon the	C. L. MAISER.
the Democratic party	MANUFACTURES OF
t estimate of the situa-	FIRE AND BURGLAB-PROOP
a a policy adapted to in itself. If this be	SAFES,
ly while the Republi-	LOCKEMITH, BELL-MANGER, AND DEALER IN BUILDING BARDWARE.
in the confusion of	65 NO. 484 BACE STREET.
the almost unani-	TIDOR LOCODENIEUE OF STOR
sound and moderate . True leadership	A LARGE ASSORTMENT OF FIRE and Burgias-proofSAFES on hand, with inside loors, Dwelling-house Safes, free from dampues, Prices low, C. MASSENFORDER, pirit of intrigue, but	oors, Dwelling-house Safes, free from dampness,
e wants of the time.	6 5 No. 422 VINE Street.
t, which so perfectly
t they shine by their d from argument. It	WINDOW BLINE'S AND SHADES.
the country must be led	831. CHARLES L HALE, 831.
e party of the future.	(Late Saleaman and Superi stendent for B. J. Williams)
ageous common sense	NO. 831 ARCH STREET, political metaphysics	MANUPACTURER OF
to inapplicable prece-
om which such fresh,	VENETIAN BLINDS AND WINDOW SHADES.
; and when the right cers will fall into their	Largest and fluest assoriment in the city at the
, the honest feeling,	LOWEST PRICES. [3 23 2m8p
llizing justice, already	UPHOLSTERING IN ALL ITS BRANCHES, he people, and furnish ed will quickly germi-	B. J. WILLIAMS & SONS,
e Republican policy of	NO, 16 NORT & SIXTH STREET, ionstrated failure: but	MANUFACTULERS OF
ceess which does not	VENETIAN BLINDS
ind honest in the aspi-	AND of the people, because these that the North	and the second state of th
onized to prevent one-	WINDOW SHADES.
a perpetual incentive	Largest and finest assortment in the city at the e black or the white	LOWEST PRICES. Repairing promptly attended to.
hatever just arrange- agreed upon by the	STORE SHADES made and lettered. 9 25 2msp South will accept and
lurable settlement at-	COPARTNERSHIPS.
basis. We shall have	NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE
be key-note than the	IN Copartmenship lately existing between J. WIL- LIAM JONES and WASH'N REECE BAKER, under the firm of J. WILLIAM JONES & CO., Im-
at any aver that the	under the firm of J. WILLIAM JONES & CO., Im-under the firm of J. WILLIAM JONES & CO. Im- portors, Manufacturers, and Daalers in Dye Woods, Lye Stuffa, etc., is dissolved by mutual consent. All debta owing to the said partnership are to be received by the said J. William Jones, and all demands on the said patmership are to be presented to him for pay- ment. J. WILLIAM JONES. WASH, REECE BARER. WASH, REECE BARER.
REVENUE	by the said J. William Jones, and all demands on the
STAMPS	ment. J. WILLIAM JONES.
	Philadelphia, Nov. 1, 1867. 11 2 61*
E AT THE
introdu un com sint	THE BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE WILL BE continued at the old stand, No. 37 N. FRONT Street, by J. William Jones, Louis I. Housed and Gazare V.
AGENCY,	Knorr, who have this day formed a Copartnership
ID STREET, PHILA.	Continued at the data and the string to string the set of the set
TATIONED	Philadelphia, Nov. 1, 1667. GEORGE F. KNORH.
T ALLOWED.	TISSOLUTION,-THE FIRM OF IONES &
is received, and delivered
s promptly attended to.	by metual concent. The business will be continued, and the accounts of the firm settled, by WILLIAM W. JONES No. 510 MINOR Street, 116.25
COB E. HIDGWAY.	November 5, 1867, 11.6 H
	The second se
Reates at and ports !	UNION PASTE AND SIZING COMPANY
ND BUILDER:	hangers, Shoemakers, Pocket-book Makers, Hill
DGE STREET, AND	ready for use. Herer to J. H. Lippincoit & Co., Devar
NUT STREET,	Harper Brothers, American Tract Society, and others.
PHILADELPHIA	A Paste for Box-makers, Hookbluders, Paper- hangers, Shoemakers, Pocket-book Makers, Hill Posters, etc. It will not soue. Is cheap and always ready for me. Refer to J. H. Lippiccoit & Co., Devar & Keller, William Mann, Philadelphia Begiver, Harper Brothers, American Tract Society, and others, Sole Agents, J. L. CRAGIN & CO., NO, SD COM- MERCE Sizvet, 98