GARIBALDPS ARREST.

The General in the Hands of the Italian Boldiers-How the Act Was Accomplished - Protest of Garibaldi's Friends.

FLORENCE, Nov. 5 .- A number of friends and champions of Garibaldi, including the Deputies Crispi and Guerzoni, have drawn up a solemn protest against the arrest of the General at Figine. The document is as follows :--

Notwithstanding the statement, several times repeated, of General Gari-baidt, that he was failined, ill, exhausted by averal days' privation, and that he could not endure the sectous trial of a fresh journey, the colonei remained inexcorable. Four carabineers approached the Gene-ral, and the non-commissioned officer by whom they were commanded invited him in the name of his superiors to follow. The General, persisting in his first determination, was lifted up by the Carabineers, carried from the spot where he was seated in the waiting from, and thus transported, amid the most alemne alience of his friends, to the carriage des-tined for him. Deputy Crispi, in the name of all pre-sent, energetically protested against this violation of the law and the insult thus offered to the greatest dit. zen of Lialy. ### Statement of Shephard, the Wife Murderer. From the Worcester Spy, Nov. 20.

James E. Shephard, who shot his wife in this city last week, and who was arrested in Can-terbury, Conn., on Monday, reached this city yesterday by the half past two P. M. train from Norwich. Quite a large crowd of spectators assembled at the depot to see him, and the police office was also crowded. Shephard ap-neared perfectly gool and unconcerned and peared perfectly cool and unconcerned, and bore the scrutiny of the curlous crowd without

He was arraigned before the police court dur-

He was arraigned before the police court durs ing the afternoon, M. J. McCafferty, Eq., ap-pearing as his counsel. Shephard pleaded not kully and waived an examination, and was fully committed to await the action of the Grand Jury on the third Monday in December. He was taken to jail last evening. Bhephard apsears quiet, and seems perfectly willing to converse in regard to the murder, and does not manifest any particular emotion. He says it is all the work of his wife's mind against him and separated them. He said he killed ner because he loved her more than his own life; that her friends would not let her live with him, and rather than see her in the pos-session of anether he killed her. His intention was, if he had found her alone, to kill her and session of another he killed her. His intention was, if he had found her alone, to kill her and lay down beside her, with her arms around him, and shoot himself; but, said he, "It would have done no good; her friends would not let me sleep in the same grave with her if I had; they spite me too much for that, so it makes no difference." He expresses regret that he did did not kill himself instead of going away after the murder. He says he has never spoken a hard word to his wife, and has always sup-ported her when he had means, and that she left him against her own will. He said, "I have done what I wanted to to her, and now I suppose the law will do what it

He said, "I have done what I wanted to to her, and now I suppose the law will do what it wants to with me," He is very severe in his conversation in regard to the mother of his wife, saying that when he is dead he will come back and haunt her; that she shall have no peace on earth. When told that if he is hung it cannot be for a year after he is convicted, he taid, regretfully, "Then she will have a year of peace, but when I am dead I will haunt her." He says that on Friday night, after the mur-der, he walked to Oxford Plain and slept in a sawmill just below the plain, near where the road goes under the railroad. Heate a little on Saturday morning, at Mr. Watson's, in Web-ster, and slept that and the next night in barns. He also ate a little on Sunday morning, but, with these two exceptions, he had no food from Friday morning till on Monday, after he was arrested. He had no definite end in view in travelling, but went first one road and then another, just as it happened.

travelling, but went first one road and then another, just as it happened. He does not appear like a desperate man, and those who have known him for years say he is not "smart." He can be easily imposed upon, and is usually good-natured, but has a subtle spirit at bottom, and is inclined to revenge. He was in the 15th Regiment, and on his return from the war was married to a woman named Bonzey, from Milbury, but left her almost im-mediately, and subsequently obtained a divorce. He has been twice married to his victim, and, taking all his matrimonial adven-tures, has had but a sorry time of it. He is evi-dently carcless of his future, and has no especial desire to live: but his course after the murder, and his conversation and manner, give an im-pression that he has not firmness enough to pression that he has not firmness enough to take his own life.

CHARLES DICKENS.

His Nocturnal Reception in Boston-He Comes from the Cunarder in a Tug, and is Welcomed at Long Wharf-His Rapid Ride to His Residence, Pro Tem. From the Boston Post (semi-Dickens), Nov. 21.

The announcement published in yesterday morning's papers to the effect that Charles Dickens was to arrive in Boston some time during the day created a great anxiety on the part of his most intimate friends in this city and to extend to him such courtesies as they might be able to do under the circumstances incident to an uncertain hour of arrival This anxiety was not alone confined to his inti-mate personal friends and business associates, but extended to others whose readings have made them carnest admirers of the dis-tinguished novelist; and many were the inqui-ries made at the reading-room and other depots of intelligence, respecting the arrival of the Cuba. But during the afternoon, and even up to six o'clock, the only, and under the circumcould be obtained was duly bulletined—"The could be obtained was duly bulletined—"The Cuba has not been signalled." As the steamer was fully due at three o'clock, and as the weather was quite fair, her non arrival natu-rally created considerable anxiety on the part of his triends and at an o'clock private of his friends, and at six o'clock private despatches were forwarded to New York to the effect that there were well-grounded fears that some serious accident had happened. But at some serious accident had happened. But at about eight o'clock news was received that the steamer had been signalled some fifteen miles off Hull, which intelligence created great re-joicing among the various circles of friends in waiting the late disastrous tornado in these falands. The Porvenir of Porto Rico of the 31st of Octo-ber says:--- "At the late bour at which we write it is impossible to judge of the great terror which prevails, resul ing from the horrible effects of the burricane of the night before last. The great fall of rain, the force of the wind, the simost complete darkness, produced in the minds of the people a condition verging to-wards insanity. In the early hours of the night the Capital of Porto Rico bore altogether the aspect of a deserted city; at 5:45 the storm commenced, and at 8 15 the hurricane was at lis height; at this hour the baroometer marked 20:00. During the prevalence of the hurri-cane has immoniated a multitude of vicinus, destroyed or very badly damaged." The Porvent of the 3d inst says:--The hurri-cane has immoniated a multitude of vicinus, destroyed houses, desolated plantations, swept away fields of erain, and deprived thousands of poor in one night of their means of livelihood. At St. Thomas the damage was very great in-deed. In the Island of Tortola the destruction has been truly lamentable. From what we can learn there is not a single bouse standing on the Island; the plantations are literally swept elear: hundreds of lives have been lost; in shor, it is impossible to judge of the destruction at this moment. On the Island of Vieques the effects of the

on the Island of Vieques the effects of the storm are almost equally noticeable. Most of the vessels lying near the island were de-stroyed. To add to the terror with which the storm filled the bearis of the inhabitants, a fearful conflagration broke out while the hurcicane was at its height, and occasioned new disasters. In the Cidra we learn that 96 houses were destroyed and several lives lost. In Loizs 27 houses were destroyed and several lives were lost.

It is impossible as yet to estimate the number of lives lost, or the amount of damage done to property. We have reports of English, French, and Spanish vessels of large tonnage which have been swept away by the force o. the storm.

The Porvenir of the 6th of November contains additional accounts of the disastrous effects of the hurficane. As the mail is just closing, I must defer fur-ther particulars of this most disastrous calamity.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 21 .- A terrible accident occurred this morning on the Cincinnati, Hamilton, and Dayton Railroad. The broad guage express train, due at 6 o'clock, was detained at Lockland by a freight train coming south. While the express train was waiting for the freight train to take the siding, another freight train, that had been following it, ran into the rear of the express, before a man could get out to flag them. Four ladies and one man were burned to death, and nearly all the train burned to ashes. The rear cars were the Toledo train that the express takes at Dayton, the last car being the sleeping car from Toledo. The names or residences of the victims have not been ascertained.

At the first opportunity numerous financial resolutions and bills will be offered, looking to the 'suspension of contrac-tion,' or the 'enlargement of the currency,' the effect of which will be to make gold solive and stocks lively. As the Treasury has no fixed policy, but changes its action as the Secretary is influenced by popular sentiment, financial affairs, until the adjournment of Congress next summer, will be in confusion. Great efforts will be made to defer resumption. As there is no excuse for issuing more Legal-tenders, it is not casy to see how the inflationists are to obtain. casy to see how the infationists are to obtain relief.
