The Chorus Singers in Revolt-Scener at their Favorice Restaurant-A Babel of Many Broken Tongues-Cavatinas, Scenas, Ariettas, and Rondos,

The chorus at the Academy of Music are on a strike. Yes, for forty-eight hours they have struck, and to-day they say they are determined to continue striking until the last armed Maretzek expires, not for their aitars and their fires, but for bread and cheese. As the case at present stands the prospect for future operations rather slim, unless Manager Max and recalcitrant chorus singers come to a pacific arlooks rather slim, unless Manager Max and recalcitrant chorus singers come to a pacific arrangement. The chorus singers, to the number of fifty have been employed since the beginning of the opera season at the rate of of twenty doltars a week for five performances, including attendance at mid-day rehearsals, for which it has not been the custom of opera managers to pay, as rehearsals were always supposed to be part of the performance. The details of the strike which were given in yesterday morning's World exclusively it is only necessary to refer to. A few minutes before the time assigned on the bills for the performance of the opera of Romeo and Giuletia to begin, the chorus singers assembled in solemn conclave behind the mystic curtain of the Academy and there and then resolved, with many high and there and then resolved, with many high asservations, that they would not join in the gladsome chants assigned them, unless that impressario Max in vulgar terms came down and paid to them sums of filthy lucre or base greenbacks to the tune of fifteen dollars per uman being of the chorus, male and female And with many high oaths and with solemn purpose engraved on the salients of each Italian, French, German, and Spanish face, did this band piedge themselves to be true, bold, and firm "until death do them part," or Max Maretzek gave in and acknowledged the corn, the audience in the meanwhilewalting pattently in the auditorium for some signs of life from the in the auditorium, for some signs of life from the dumb orchestra. But no sign came, for Maret-zek, fearing that if he gave way to the demand of the chorus singers for services performed at rehearsals he would then have to comply with the prospective demand of the orchestra, who were waiting in the leash, to strike like the chorus singers, for the green graves of their sires. He therefore refused to comply with the demand most vigorously, but offered as a soothing compromise, to each and every chorussinger, the sum of five dollars in the current greenbacks of the season, for the labor at rehearsals performed by them. Then did the chorus singers threaten the lives of any chockets. rus singers threaten the lives of any choriaters who, untrue to their most solemn league and who, untrue to their most solemn league and covenant, would dare to accept the base five dollars from Maretzek. The audience were turned away, their money being refunded, and "Romeo" failed to carol his passionate feelings to Miss Hauck, the "Juliet" of the evening. Last night the opera of the Favorita was announced to be sung, but the chorus, in the language of the venerated P. B., did not come to time. The Three Menof Grutti, at the Bowery Theatre, could not be more immovable than they were. Nearly all the seats for Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings had been disposed of, and as the money had to be refunded, there was at once a net loss of six thousand dollars to Mr. Maretzek, who has labered under great difficulties in producing the new opera, with costly scenery and appointments, besides the money which was to have been received additionally for tickets and reserved seats. And thus stands the case at present: No Chorus, no Opera. Chorus, no Opera.

Last evening our reporter visited a saloon where these chorus singers do most congregate—a wine shop and restaurant in the Third avenue, near the Academy—no matter where. It is kept by an Italian, and with the warm, passionate love of dirt and grease common to some persons who hall from that land of song and maccaroni, the salcon was in an admirable state of confusion and oleaginous disorder. There were portraits of the various operatic celebrities of confusion and oleaginous disorder. There were portraits of the various operatic celebrities hanging around the walls, Alboni, Grisi, Miolan-Carvalho, Roger, the great tenor, Rubini, Karl Formes, Jenny Lind, Mazzoleni, Piccolomini, and many more birds of song. A few tables, with dirty lable cloths, around which squads of the chorus singers sat, some eating and drinking, some partaking of the festive if not intoxicating Lachryma Christi and Vino Vermouth at seventy-five cents to a dollar a bottle, others playing cards and dominoes, with guiteral exclamations in a foreign tongue, and several others regaling themselves and their listeners with snatches of operatic melodies. The keeper of the wine shop dispensed now and then to his customers, as the orders came, eatables and drinkables with gusto and alacrity, and a sickening soupy smell came from the kitchen. Four men sat around a deal table, on which a sickening seupy smell came from the kitchen. Four men sat around a deal table, on which was placed a huge turkey boiled in oil, flanked by a smoking turcen of soup, in which substance floated square cut particles of coarse bread. Of these four one or two were Italians from the sunny town of Naples, with fine mustaches, black eyes, tawny skin, and seedy clothes, well greased according to the Italian standard. The third was a Frenchman, bald headed, his forchead extending from the eyebrows to the rear portion of his skull, between the ears. The third was a German chorus singer, originally from the pleasant little town of Hocksmockunatertugvelam Rhine. These four men comprised the Party of Action of the four men comprised the Party of Action of the chorus singers. As our reporter entered, the festive German, who had the air and manner of a reformed rough, took a piece of bread in his fingers (gazing at it with profound emotion, and after a few moments contemplating it, puts it to his mouth, and the bread disappears) and commenced the song of "Glaucers" in force commenced the song of "Glaucus" in Ione, in which the Party of Action joined as they came to the chorus. Reformed Rough (with wine-glass uplifted):— "Never mind Mareizek, let a kieine bit; Come on! interweave for me a wreath with grapes and vine leaves!

And of the ire and havoc of the warlike God,
I fight but amongst the beauties, and surrounded by

I fight but amongst the beauties, and surrounded by gobbets
I choose to fall drunk, but not dead.
When I hold the jug in my hand, I cannot envy the sceptre of a king.

"I tell ye, boys," said the reformed rough, "we ka-a-nt stand this theory of tel dollars a week. If the American pe-e-ple won't stand by the Eytalian Operer why d-o-o-n't they s-a-a-y so and giv it up? That's wat I want ter know?"
"Ah, Ciel!" said the little Frenchman, "in le grand ville d'Autriche in Vienne it was mooch

(Chorus in the back part of the room, the singers coming forward joyously, with greasy cards in their hands, singing).

Au diable la consigne!

Et vive l'amour!

Taut pis! en ce jour

Bravons is consigne.
Obelssons a l'amour!

Big Eytosilan sings (his voice resounding throughout the lofty, bat greasy apartment). Where can Signer Cospetto be gone. We sent him to have the grand explanation with Marctzeck an hour ago, (sings, bis eyes filled with tears, wise cup, covered with vine leaves, upheld.—

His does not return!
Alas! in its auguish

My poor heart is sinking.

My soul's fill'd with terror.

Will he ne'er return?

Ah, where does he wander;

Whilst ionely I ponder?

I dare not compials.

But I call in vain!

Alas! where now does he wander!

While he ne'er return?

In grief I'm concealing
This desointe feeting.

Did he know my woe—

Venus and Bacchus are our gods.

(Chorus without)—
Venus and Bacchus are our gods.
We gather the bloom of life.
Hymns and pertune to Venus and Bacchus!
Long live the Rudesheimer! Ten dollars a weekBah!

At a late hour, when our reporter left, the strikers were still quading the golden Falernian and cheap Rhine wein, resolving to deprive the great American people of operatic music sooner than accede to Maretzek.—N. F. World yes-

THE NEW YORK OPERATIC STRIKE. | IMPORTANT FROM EUROPE.

The Emperor's Speech.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—The Senate and Corps Legislatiff assembled yesterday. The Emperor Napoleon made the following speech:—

The necessity of resuming the discussion of important laws has obliged me to call you together earlier than usual. Recent events have further caused me to experience the wish of availing myself of your sagacity and your assistance. Since you separated vague disquicturies have arisen to affect the public mind of furope, and restrict the movements of industry and commercial transactions in all quarters. Notwithstanding the declarations of my government, which has never varied from a pacific attitude, the belief has been spread that a modification in the internal system of Germany must become a means of conflict.

This procertainty could not exist longer. It is not

This uncertainty could not exist longer. It is ne-cessary to accept frankly the changes which have taken place on the other side of the Rhine, and to taken place on the other side of the Rhine, and to proclaim that so long as our interests, or our dignity shall not be threatened, we will not interfere in the transformation effected by the wish of the population. The disquiet that has been displayed is difficult of explanation at a period in which France has offered to the world the most imposing spectacle of conciliation and peace. The Universal Exposition, where nearly all the sovereigns of Europe have attended, where the representatives of the laboring classes of all countries have met, has drawn closer the ties of fraternity between the nations.

It has disappeared, but its traces will leave a deep impression upon our age, for, after having majestically risen, the exhibition has not only shone with a mo-mentary brilliance; it has destroyed a host of preju-dices and of errors, the shackles of labor and intelli-gence, and the barriers between the different peoples, as well as the different classes of international batreds, as well as the different classes of international batreds. These are what the Exhibition has cast behind it; but these incontestable pledges of concord do not allow us to dispense with improving the military institutions of France. It is the imperious duty of every government to follow progress, independently of circumstances, in all the elements which constitute the strength of a country and it is format accountry. country, and it is for us a necessity to bring to perfec-tion the military organization, as our weapons are the army and navy.

The project of law presented to the Legislative body divided equally between the citizens the charges of recrnitments. That system had appeared so absolute that measures have been adopted to diminish its bear-ing. Since then I have thought it advisable to submit the important question to your further consideration. In fact this difficult problem cannot be too carefully In fact this difficult problem cannot be too carefully investigated, as it touches great and contradictory interests. My government will propose, now, arrangements, which are only simple modifications of the laws of 1832, but which achieve the object I have always had in view—the reduction of the effective strength of the army during peace, and its increase during war. You will examine this as well as the organization of the National Guard Mobile, under the impression of that patriotic idea that the stronger we are the more certain will be the assurance of peace. The efforts of us all to preserve peace, seemed, for a moment, in danger from the revolutionary legislation prepared in broad daylight, which threatened the Papal States. The Convention of September, not having been carried out, I have been compelled to send again our troops to Rome, to protect the power of the Holy See from Republican invaders. Our conduct could not partake of anything hostile to the independence of Italy, and that nation, for a to the independence of Italy, and that nation, for a moment surprised, has not been long in understanding the dangers these revolutionary manifestations caused to monarchical principles, and the European order and calm is now almost entirely re-established in the States of the Church, and we may calculate the proximate time when our troops will be recalled. For us the Convention of September, 1815, exists, so long as it is not repealed. The relations of Italy to the Holy See interests the whole of Europe. We have proposed to the powers to settle these relations at a conference, and thus prevent new complications.

Attention has been turned to the Eastern question, from which the conciliatory spirit of the powers removes the irritating differences of opinion that ex-moves the irritating differences of opinion that existed between them in the pacification of Crete. I am happy to announce that they have agreed on two principal points, the maintenance of the integrity of the Ottoman Empire, and the amelioration of the condition of the Christians. Since the last session universal suffrage has been called upon to elect a third of the members of the Council Generaux. These elections have been carried out with calmness and independence, which have everywhere demonstrated the good feeling of the population. The journey I have made with the Empress to the east and north of France has afforded the opportunity for manifestations of sympaths which opportunity for manifestations of sympathy which have touched me profoundly. I have been able to sweetain that nothing has been able to shake the confidence the people have placed in me, and the attachment they entertain towards my dynasty. For rachment they entertain towards my dynasty. For my part, I labor incessantly to anticipate their wishes. The completion of the connecting roads was required by the agricultural classes of whom you are the enlightened representative. It was an act of justice—I should almost say of gratitude—to satisfy this want, and an inquiry on a large scale is preparing, its sointion will be cared for by you in concert with my government to assure the success of this great measure, though the situation is undoubtedly not free from embarrassments. Industrial and commercial activity has slackened, uneasiness is general in Europe, and is in great part due to apprehensions which the good understanding prevailing between the powers. good understanding prevailing between the powers.

good understanding prevailing between the powers.
will cause to disappear.
The harvest is not good; dearness is inevitable, and free trade can alone secure supplies and lower prices.
But if these causes prevent the revenue completely balancing the estimates of the Budget, the provisions of the laws of finance should not be modified, and we may foresee the period when a reduction of taxation may be taken into consideration.
The session will be divided by the examination of laws, of which I took the initiative in January last.
The time that has elapsed has not altered my convictions respecting the utility of these reforms. Doubt-tions respecting the utility of these reforms. Doubt-less the introduction of new liberties exposes the pub-lic mind to excitement and dangerous impulses; but to render them powerless, I count at the same time upon the common sense of the country, on the pro-grees of morality, in firmness of suppression when repaired, in the energy and authority of the ruling Dowers.

Let us, then, follow up the works which we have undertaken together. For filteen years we have shared the same idea—to uphold, above controversies and hostile passions, our fundamental laws which the popular voice has sanctioned, but at the same time to to develop liberal constitutions without weakening the principle of authority. Let us not cease to spread around us the comforts of liberty, the prompt com-pletion of our means of instruction, to render access to justice less expensive by simplifying legal pro-cedure, and to adopt every measure that will render prosperous the social condition of the great masses. If with me you become convinced that this path is that of real progress and civilization, let us advance in that agreement of views and sentiments, which is a in that agreement of views and sentiments, which is a precious guarantee of public welfare. You will I trust, vote laws which will be submitted to you that will contribute to the greatness, wealth and happiness of the country. For my own part you may rest assured I will uphold firmly the power conferred on me, for no obstacle nor unjust opposition will shake either my courage or my faith in the future.

would call attention of the public to bis
NEW GOLDEN EAGLE FURNACE.
This is an entirely new heater. It is so, constructed as to at once commend itself to general favor, being a combination of wrought and cast from. It is very simple in its construction, and is perfectly atright; self-cleaning, having no pipes or drums to be taken out and cleaned. It is so arranged with upright flues as to preduce a larger amount of beat from the same weight of coal than any furnace now in use. The hygrometric condition of the air as produced by my new atrangement of evaporation will at once demonstrate that it is the only Hot Air Furnace that will produce a perfectly healthy atmosphere.
Those in want of a complete Heating Apparatus would do well to call and examine the Golden Eagle.
