THE MORRISITES.

Spiritualistic Mormonism-The Spirits of the Old Prophots Reappearing on Earth-A Poor Weman Believes She is From the Catro Democrat, 14th.

A new and strange sect, fiolding to a higher order of spiritualism than the Andrew Jackson school of Spiritualists, was founded by Joseph Morris, an Englishman, in the town of Weber, near Salt Lake City, in the year 1860. The creed is sometimes called Morrisism, and is substantially as follows:—That the spirits of the old prophets, commencing with Seth (who according to Morris, was afterwards Moses). and running through the regular lineage of Melchisedeo priesthood—Enos, Cansan, Ma halaiest, Jared, Enoch, Methuselab, Lameth, Nosh, and so on down through Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Jesse, David, Solomon, et al., to Jesus Christ, the last of the regular priesthood, in all Christ, the last of the regular pricethood, in all about 144,000—are now reappearing upon the carth in the flesh; that he (Morris) was Seth, the first of the priesthood, and that Joseph Smith was the second, having preceded him, as a forerunner, to establish Mormonism.

The work of Morris was called by himself "The Fulness of the Gospel," Mormonism being only the gospel in part, The object claimed by Morris was to establish a universal tangent of the garth in accordance temporal kingdom on the earth in accordance with the prophesy of Daniel, that in the last days the God of Heaven on earth would break in pieces all other kingdoms and governments, and be an inheritance of the people of the Saints of the Most High, which people these Morrisites claim to be.

Upon one occasion Morris called on Brigham Young, and told him that he was his (Brigham's) superior, and that God had sent him to take control of the Mormon Church. indignantly denied the justness of the claim. telling Morris to go back to the God that eent him, and request that God to "kiss his foot," Morris then went to Weber, thirty-five miles west of Great Salt Lake City, and there catahimself. In the course of fourteen months he had gathered around himself about seven hundred men and women, composed of the brightest intellects in the Mormon Church, some of the leaders being profound scholars. So rapid was the increase of this sect that Brigham Young became alarmed, and sent out an army of about one thousand soldiers, with five pieces of artillery. This force came before the camp of the Morrisites on the 13th of June, 1862, and began a bombardment. On the third day Morris surrendered, and, marching out, laid down his arms. After the capitulation, the leader of the Mormon rabble, Bobert T. Burton, sheriff of Salt Lake county, deliberately shot down Morris, and also a woman who interceded for his life. The Morrisites then dispersed, some going to Nevada, some to California, some to Idaho, and others to Montana, being protected in their escape by United States troops, under the command of General Conner.

A lady went with that portion of the Morris-ites who fled to Idado, and was persuaded by her husband to abandon her Church and return to the States; but the old faith clinging to her mind, she, in turn, endeavored to convince her mind, she, in turn, encessored to convince her husband of the correctness of her singular re-ligious notions, and to induce him to espouse and promulgate them from the sacred desk. His refusal probably unsettled her mind, and it is now thought that she has yielded to an irre sistible impulse to go abroad into the world, and, by preaching, endeavor to propagate the religion of her prophet, Morris.

From the same, 17th.

In our issue of last Thursday we noticed the mysterious disappearance of a lady, who, hav-ing become a convert to Morrisism-spiritualistic Mormonism-endeavored to induce her husband, now in this city, to undertake the task of converting the world to the new religion; and failing in this, lost her reason. The last seen of her was at Mound City, from whence she travelled on foot in the direction of the Junction. One remarkable fact connected with this strange of the last the last reason. this strange affair is that the lady firmly believes her husband is even superior to Merris, and many of the Morrisites entertain the same belief. In one of his revelations—for he re-ceived and recorded the Words of God, Morris prophesied that his mission would not be of long duration-that be would come to a sudden and violent death. The prophecy was fulfilled. But he also declared that a greater than he would come after him to accomplish the work of the Latter Dayst and establish and confirm, for all time, "the fulness of the gospel," and erect, for the people of the Saints, a universal temporal kingdom. This prophecy has not yet been fulfilled; but most of the Morand erect ristes, who are fanatics of the most decided description, believe that the husband of the Lost Woman is their "Coming Man." His wife insist that he is Adam and she is Eve, and that he was Gabriel before he was Adam. The gentleman says he might have been induced to believe the new religion had it not been for this attempt to make him a grand dignitary in the Church of the Saints of the Fullnes of the Gospel. He is too modest to accept the prof fered honor, and too weak to carry the load, even if he bad sufficient assistance to induce him to attempt the task. He says he is almost sure he was not Adam, and he is willing to be sworn that he never was Gabriel. He is of the opinion that, when he becomes crazy enough to believe that he was ever anybody else than he is, he will be just the man to lead the Morrisites and he will then take up the rod of authority and proceed to his allotted task.

Fashions for November.

From Le Follet. The cold weather we have had lately has been the signal for the appearance of thoroughly winter toilettes, so that their form, material, and style may be considered as perfectly decided on. As far as in-door dress is concerned, the materials are much the same as those worn last month; but the walking costumes have a much more wintry aspect than they presented even a few days ago. Both woollen and silk reps, serges, cloths, poplins, thick silks, satins, moires, and velvets are much worn.

The velours Anglais—or, as we say, velveteen—will be much worn, but only in first-class qualities. No material is more suitable for a short dress, and, perhaps, no costume can be prettier, than a short black velveteen skirt over a colored silk petticoat with plaited flounce. Black velvet paletot, with long hanging sleeves, lined with silk like the petticoat.

No one will, of course, attempt to wear an outof-door dress, either short or long, without a small crinoline. For ballroom-wear some ladies have a multiplicity of white flounce muslin petticoats, though, in most cases, they are only worn to disguise the very small crinoline which is worn to support them. With short dresses a perfectly round crinoline is worn, while trained skirts require long and trained crinoline; but in all cases they are very much diminished in cir-cumference, being now woru merely to support and not distend the skirt.

The large open sleeves will be very fashionable in rich materialss, but are considered only suitable for handsome dresses. For others, the small coat sleeve, or even the quite tight one, closed at the wrist, will be preferred.

The high bodies are made quite plain, and fitting to the figure; some few have basques, but sashes, of which there is an endless variety, are most in favor at the present moment. These sashes have generally a small button or hook underneath, which serves to fasten up the skirt for out-of-door wear,

The long skirts are still made with a very decided train, and so gored as to be nearly, quite, plain at the top. The front is always quite plain, the back sometimes put in large gathers, though this style is hardly so suitable for velvets, moire, satins, or poplins, as it is for thinner materials. Some of the short skirts touch the ground, others are a little way from it; but no one with the least pretension to good style wears them so as to show the top of the

Mantles are worn in endless variety of forms and sizes, fitting tight or loose, with tight or loose sleeves. Bonne is are much the same size as those lately worn, but several new shapes have appeared. It is as yet too early to speak decidedly as to the form likely to be preferred. The "Fauchon" shape is the most prominent; it has not increased in size, but generally has a fall of lace or not scarf over the back, which is brought round and fastened under the chin. This is considered more suitable for the winter than to have the back hair quite exposed.

There is very little variety in the form of winter bats; they, of course, do not revive the wide brims necessary in summer. The bronze hats are becoming common, and our elegants are wearing grey straw, with feathers to match, completed by a bunch of scarlet berries or holly

The crossway bands or rouleaux are still in great favor for trimming dresses, and are made either in the same material or in silk or satin Many silk dresses are trimmed with rouleaux of satin the same color, the difference in material being quite sufficient to produce a good effect. Handsome fringes are also very much worn, and the reappearance of flounces will bring broad We have seen some black dresses, both in velvet and silk, trimmed with gold braid and fringe. If sparingly and judiciously used, this has a most elegant effect. We select one black silk dress for description:—A pairow flounce, about two inches wide, was pinked at one edge and fluted on the skirt straight along the front; at each side it was carried up and formed two deep points, and then straight again at the back to imitate a tunic; above this were two rows of gold braid, about half an inch wide, worked with little tufts of apple green floss silk; these rows were about three inches apart. The body of black silk had a corselet of black silk with two points at top and bottom, both in the front and at the back, trimmed with a flounce of black silk and one row of the gold and green braid. The sleeves were open quite to the arm-hole, cut in three points, and trimmed to corres-pond with the skirt. Under these were tight
