THE FINANCES.

Important Statement of the Views of Chief Justice Chase.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25 .- In the present uncertain condition of the financial and business interests of the country, it is important to bring to light the judgments and opinions of those whose past experience, official positions, and recognized ability in financial matters give weight to their views on the leading questions of the hour, viz .- those relating to the public debt, faxation, and currency. Feeling that the country would regard with special interest the views of Chief Justice Chase on these questions, your correspondent has taken occasion to consult him on one or two points, of course leaving many portions of the general subject untouched, which, if clucidated with equal clearness, would doubt-less prove of great interest at the present juncture. The work of Secretary Chase, though it is generally conceded among intelligent men to have been conducted with an ability exceeding that which characterized any other phase of our war history, has not been generally under-stood. It may be stated under three heads:— I. To establish satisfactory relations between the public credit and the productive industry of the country -in other words, to obtain supp The suspension of the backs put an end to first and most obvious resort, loans of gold, and made new methods indispensable. Then the Secretary resorted to legal-tender notes, made them a corrency, and borrowed them as cash. The patriotism of the people came in aid of the labors of the Treasury and the legislation of Congress, and the first great object was made secure.

II. To provide against disastrous results on a return of peace. This could only be done by providing a national currency. There were about 1500 State banks in existence, which wanted to make their own paper the currency of the country. This the Secretary resisted, and conuned his leans to greenbacks; but he did not drive out their currency, nor indeed did he think it exactly honest to so deprive them of it, without giving any equivalent. To neutralize their opposition to a national currency and make them allies as far as possible, instead of enemies, in his endeavors to secure such reults he proposed the national banking system, and before he left the department its success

The national banks were certain to be useful in many ways, out the Secretary's main object was the establishment of a national currency. This, Mr. Chase remarked, saved us from paule and revulsion at the end of the war, and is of inestimable value to men of labor and men of business—indeed, to every class.

III. The third division of his labor was to provide a funding system. It was unavoidable during the Rebellion that every means of credit should be used. He borrowed money every way he could at reasonable rates. The form that suited one lender did not suit another; and the army and navy needed every dollar that could be raised in any form. Hence temporary loans, certificates of deposit, certificates of indebtedness, 7:30 notes, compound interest notes, Treasury notes payable after one and two years, etc.

necessary to have funding loans, into which all these temporary loans could be ultimately merged. To this end the Secretary established the 5-20 loan and the 10-40 loan. His belief was that after the $514,000,000 of the 5-20 loan had been taken, the additional amounts needed could be obtained by the 10-40 loan and the temporary loans; but the Secretary was ready to resort to the 5-20s in case of emergency. He did get $73,000,000 in the 10-40 toan, and his suc cessors got about $120,000,000 more, at par. And Mr. C. has never been able to see any good reason for making the 7.30 notes subsequently issued convertible, at the holder's option, into 6-20s instead of 10 40s. Lenders, of course, preferred the former, bearing 6 per cent, in gold, to the latter, bearing only five per cent.; and lenders were rather more favored after he left the Description. the Department than before—and so, indeed, were brokers, for Mr. Jay Cooke got nearly or quite twice as large commissions under Fessen-den and McCulloch as Secretary Chase allowed

It is easy to see how Mr. Chase's funding system worked, by examining the last statement o the public debt. The condition is something like this: $1,200,000,000 5-20s; $200,000,000 10-40s; $200,000,000 '81s payable now after 14 years, which can then easily be put into 10-40s; other loans (all temporary), say $500,000,000, of which three-fourths consist of 7:30s, convertible, and certain to be converted into 10 40s and say $400,000,000 greenbacks, including fractional corrency, making the debt of 000,000. So, it may be seen, the whole debt except 81s is already funded, or sure to be funded in 5-20 six per cents, or 10 40 five per cents.

Can there be a better funding system? Mr. Chase says there cannot. Yet there is talk of a new funding loan!

The object is to catch gudgeons by apparently yielding to the popular clamor for taxation on

The scheme is to offer a new six per cent. loan, with reservation of a right to tax not exceeding one per cent.; in other words, a new non taxable 5 per cent. loan; and it is proposed to make this a long loau—say 30 years, 'It will be magnificent," Mr. Chase remarks, "for brokers, bankers, and lenders, but death on the people," Of course, such a loan can be negotiated; for a 6 per cent. 30-year loan, untaxable, is worth more in the market, be cause it will collect more out of the tax-payer for the bondholder than any loan now outstanding; and nothing is more certain in the future than that Government will be paying, within five years, 5, 10, and even 15 per cent, for the privilege of paying its debt before maturity.

The Secretary concedes it may be well enough to make the loan in the form proposed, if the clamor for taxation will be satisfied by it; but why make it for twenty years or thirty years, instead of adhering to the ten-forty plan, by which the debt is redeemable at any time after ten years, and thus kept under the control of the people? The Secretary has no doubt that, if our finances are properly nanaged, we can borrow within ten years at 4 per cent. or 5—with right to tax at one-fifth as we can now borrow at 5 or 6, with right to tax at one-sixth. Why bind ourselves to pay either rate of interest for thirty years. when it is not only unnecessary, but certain to entail a heavy additional expense in the form of premiums for redemption?

When Secretary Chase negotiated at par the $73,000,000 of 10-40 five per cents, the currency was much less inflated that it has been ever since and is now. The issues of the greenbacks and the indisposition of Congress to tax the State bank currency out of circulation, State bank currency out of circulation, caused almost all the inflation that took place under Mr. Chase's administration. The ate inflation does not seem to him required by public exigencies. The greenback, he declares, should have been retired nearly or quite pari passu with the issues of national bank notes and the equilibrium preserved.

The comparative inflation will appear from a statement of the circulation on the 30th of June, 1864, when Mr. Chase left the Department, and the 30th of June, 1866:-

Suspension of the President Pending Impeachment - Opinion of Sonator Johnson.

Hon, Reverdy Johnson, of Maryland, has pr pared an appendix to his pamphlet upon "The Dangerous Condition of the Country," in which he alludes to the position held by Mr. Stevens and others, that the President can be suspended during the pendency of impeachment. Mr. Johnson, in this appendix, says:—

"Since the first edition of this pamphlet the writer has been informed that some of the mem-bers of Congress profess to be of opinion that that body can, by statute, declare that pendency of an impeachment of the President stall conatitute a disability on his part to perform the functions of his office. It is supposed that by such legislation be may be brought within the meaning of the clause in the first section of the second article of the Constitution which provides for his removal for, among other causes, his inability to discharge the powers and duties thereo. The answers to the proposition are several, and conclusive:-

1. The clause does not contemplate a mere suspension or temporary removal. The re-moval provided for in such case is the same as that which is to result from conviction upon impeachment, or from death, or resignation, which, of course, is not a temporary but a permanent one. The removal on conviction is, also, not only permanent, but is followed by the further judgment of disqualification to hold any other office under the Government. It will hardly be maintained that Congress can, statute, create a greater punishment than this, or make it less. The subject was evidently not designed to be submitted to the discretion of Congress. This being so, for the same reason Congress is not intrusted with the power to declare any other judgment in the case of removal from 'inability' than the one which is o ensue the happening of either of the other vents mentioned in the clause.

2. The inability mentioned is such an inability as renders the President permanently incapable of discharging his duties. Any other interpre tation would give to Congress the authority to provide that temporary absence from the seat of rovernment, or temporary sickness, or any other vent, should constitute an "mability." is, also, no judicial judgment to be pronounced in such a case. The removal, as in the case of death or resignation, is to take piace the moment the contingency happens, and the duties of the office instantly devolve upon the Vice-President.

3. As the judgment, on impeachment, inflicts no personal punishment, as the trial may go on as well without as with the presence in the conate of the President, and as that body has no huthority to compel his attendance, it is obvious that he is just as capable during the trial to perform the duties of his office as he is before or after a judgment of acquittal. Under the power to pass all laws necessary and proper to execute the powers granted, no such authority as the one in question belongs to Congress, no legislation being necessary to effect the object of the clause—that being accomplished the moment the event occurs of an "inability" within the constitutional meaning of that term.

DENNY & REILLY, for Petitioners,

Connerr's Love Making .- I sat in the same foom with her for about an hour, in company with others, and I made up my mind that she was the very girl for me. That I thought her beautiful is certain, for that I had always said should be an indispensable qualification; but I saw in her what I deemed marks of that sobriety of conduct of which I have said so much, and which has been by far the greatest blessing of my life. It was now dead of win-ter, and, of course, the snow several feet deep on the ground, and the weather pieroing cold It was my babit, when I had done my morning's writing (he rose at 4 o'clock), to go out at break of day to take a walk on a hill, at the foot of which our barracks lay. In about three mornings after I had first seen her I had, by an invitation to breakfast with me, got up two young men to join me in my walk, and our road lay by the house of her father and mother. It was hardly light, but she was out on the snow scrubbing out a washing-tub. "That's the girl for me," said I, when we had got out of her hearing. They were engaged; but, after a time, the artillery went to England from Canada, and she along with them. Cobbett and saved £150, and this he sent to his "little brunette" before she sailed, desiring her not to spare the money, but buy herself good clothes and live without hard work. It was four long years after this when Cobbett's regiment returned to England, and "I found," he says, "my little girl a servant of all work (and hard work it was) at five pounds a year, in the house of a Captain Brissae; and, without hardly saying a word about the matter, she put into my hands the whole of my hundred and fifty pounds unbroken."

NOTICE.—THE UNDERSIGNED
would call attention of the public to his
NEW GOLDEN RAGLE FURNACE.
This is an entirely new heater. It is occonstructed as to at once commend itself tegeneral favor, being a combination of wrought and cast from It is very simple in its countruction, and is perfactly airtight; self-cleaning, naving no pipes ordrams to be taken out and cleaned. It is so arranged with upright dues as to produce a larger amount of heat from the same weight of coal than any furnace now in use. The bytrometric condition of the air as produced by my new arrangement of exaporation will at once demonstrate that it is the only Hot Air Furnace that will produce a perfectly heating atmosphere.

Those in want of a complete Heating Apparatus would do well to call and examine the Golden Eagle.
