WHOLESALE KIDNAPPING.

Mysterious Disappearance of Children in Chicago,

The Chicago Republican of Monday last says: -"For over a year there has not passed a single week in which some foud mother who has vainly waited and watched with strained heart-strings for the return of her little darling who has suddenly and without warning been spirited away from her forever. The anxious searchof the stricken father has in many cases met with bet poor success, and the desolation that has thus settled down upon their once happy homes is rarely removed. But the in-evitable grinding of "the mills of the god," still goes on, and retribution, sooner or later, a mere question of time, is sure to overtake the evil-doer. Events which have very lately transpired in our city give promise that the mystery of these fearful disappearances is at last to be un-

One week ago to-day a family residing near the outskirts of Chicago were returning to their homes from church. It was about 5 O'clock in the atternoon, and the father and mother were walking leisurely along, while their boy, an unusually intelligent lad of ten years, straggled a little way ahead. The parents had passed West Twelfth street, when they discovered for the first time that their boy they discovered for the first time that their boy was missing, and though information was at once given to the police, and every exertion possible put forth for his recevery, no tidings was received of the missing child until last Friday evening, when he walked into his home as unconcernedly as though he had been gone

The story which he then unfolded was of a strangely peculiar character, and the many includents he had to relate concerning his absence would fill the pages of a first-class novel, and can be touched upon but briefly at the present time.

He states that on the evening in question he had just turned a corner, hiding him from his parents, when a large man, driving a common business wagon, stopped near the sidewalk, and grasping him around the waist, threw him into broad, thick cloth, drove rapidly away. The peated threats of killing him in case he should cry out or make the least noise.

According to the statement of the lad they drove all night, and about six the next morning arrived at a large doubte house, with a heavy stone basement, into which he was at once con ducted. He says that he was shown into a spacious room, in which were some sixteen boys and girls, most of whom were younger than himself. A colored woman with a child was also in the apartment, and she, as well as all the other inmates of the apartment, had her mouth firmly covered with a small plaster.

The object of the strange muzzling seems to have been to prevent them making such noise as would alarm the neighborhood; for three times a day a woman came down from the upper part of the house, and with the aid of warm water, removed the plaster from the prisoners' mouths, allowing them to feed one at a time. No harm was offered him, or, as he saw, to any of the rest. The youth said that he stood that sort of thing as long as he could, and last Sunday morning determined to snift a little for himself Awakening at about 3 o'clock he continued to break through the sash of one of the windows without alarming the inmates of the house, and thus escaped into the yard. This he found surrounded by a high board fence, and well shaded with fine trees. Climbing one of these, he saw that he was not far from a ratiroad, and having descended, he scaled the fence and waited outside the enclosure until, an early train passing, he was taken aboard, and conveyed to this city. The plaster was removed from his face by one of the brakesmen, and he was thus enabled to return to his home in a presentable manner. The affair rests here at present, but Deputy Superintendent Sherman, with his accustomed energy and perseverance is on the track of the guitty parties. He has also detailed two experienced detectives who will spare no pains to ferret out all the details of this strangely incomprehensible affair. The Ind is in their charge, and they have gone with him to the country, following the railroad by which he returned to town.

ROBBERY.

$12,000 Stolem from the San Francisco Mint.

The Alla Ca iforman of July 17, says:-Some five or six months since another defalcation or swindle was discovered in the subtreasury department at the mint in this city. It was found that the Government had los some $12,000 by an ingenious system of fraud-An outside broker would buy "low bars," that is to say, bars of low grade gold, say six hundred or seven hundred fine, and deposit them in the mint for coinage. The computing clerk in the sub-treasurer's office would then make his returns on the bars at a higher grade, say eight bundred and upwards, and by collusion with other parties, as is supposed, certificates of assay representing considerable more than the actual amount deposited would be issued to the broker, and by him sold.

To do this quite a complicated system of alterations and false entries was required, but the cause of the deficit was well covered up for a long time. The broker and Mr. Sill, the com-puting clerk, were indicted, and the latter, eaving his bondsmen in the lurch, left for th East. Marshal Rand followed him East, but the fugitive doubled on him and returned here some two weeks since. Yesterday it was ascertained that he was concealed in this city, and Deputy Marshal Worth, Captain Lees, and Detective Fuller found him at the Vernon House and ar-rested him. The trial will probably now take place immediately.

VINNIE REAM.

Her Statue of Abraham Lincoln.

Your correspondent recently visited the dio of pretty Vinnie Ream and her statue of Abraham Lincoln. We inquire for "the statue," and are pointed to a mysterious canopy in the A "notice" pluned to this informs us that nebody is to uncover the statue without sending for Miss Ream. Having no yearnings for that young lady's society we turned to de-part, when, lo! the amuable scribe at the table announces that if we will stand upon chairs he will uncover the face. He litts the cotton curtain, and within we behold what looks like a colossal corpse, standing erect, and swathed in He tifts the clothes from the head, and we behold a cheerful face in dark clay. Mr. Lincoln's teatures, surely, but how heavy, how me chanical, how opaque; how clenched the mouth how fishy the eyes, how void of soul the whole hideous image! And this is the statue of Lin-coln, for which Congress has appropriated $20,000, to stand in the Nation's Capital! my dear Congress, you had better have paid that sum to have had the girl taught how to make a statue. "How did you come to do it—to vote for so large an appropriation to one so mesperienced, and even ignorant in art?" was asked of a Senator a few hours later. "Well, the girl was crying outside; what was a man to do?" answered. "When it was not the thing to cry, she smiled, and her smiles were just as potent she cast up her eyes, she shook her ringlets, that's how it was done." The result—the ghastly course in clay under the cotton canopy in the Woolley dungeon! And $20,000 out of the Government to pay for it. — Washington Correspondent Chicago Post.

KENTUCKY.

Two Men Have Their Arms Shot Away The Louisville Courier of Monday last says:static festival at Big Springs, four miles east of Jeffersonville, yesterday morning, about halt-past 10 o'clock, and just before the arrival of Governor Bramlette upon the grounds. A six-pounder had been placed in a communding posi-tion on one of the steep hills overlooking the beautiful glen, where the speakers' stand had been erected, and was booming a thundering welcome to the crowd who were constantly arwelcome to the crowd who were constantly arriving in carriages, wagons, and other wehicles. The firing was very rapid. Six rounds had been fired, when as the sannoniers were loading the gun for the seventh rownd, the heat at the breech had become so great that a premature explosion was the result, and Thomas Powell and William Brindle, who stood at the muzzle, fell as the fame belched out, the lett arm of the former and the right arm of the latter shattered terribly and hanging limp and useless at their sides. The band of Powell was completely shot away just above the wrist said the arm. just above the wrist, and the arm at the elbow was torn in a shocking manner. The arm o Brindle was terribly mangled from the hand nearly to the shoulder.

Not more than half a dozen persons were near the gun at the time of the accident, and it was at first supposed that both Powell and Brindle had been shot dead. Mounted messengers were despatched to Jeffersonville for a surgeon, and these passed Governor Bramlatte's carriage 2: 2 furious gallop, as the distinguished speaker was on his way to the Springs, in company with Colonel Caldwell.

The wounded men were taken home to Jeffersonville, where they both reside-Powell, on reviving, persistently cheering for Seymour and Blair. Both men were veteran soldiers of Union army—Powell having served in the 12th Indiana battery, and Brindle baying been a member of one of the infantry regiments of that State. They were, we are informed, members of the Republican party up to the time when its usurpations caused so many of the true men of that organization to enroll themselves beneath the Democratic banners. Both had families and

A MURDEROUS FRACAS.

Row in the Third District-A Woman Assaulted-Policemen to the Rescue-They are Severely Handled-One of Them Dangerously Stabbed-Arrest of the Parties Implicated.

A serious affair, having somewhat the character of a regular row, occurred last night shortly iter 9 o'clock, at Front and Walnut steets. To hour of 9 in the evening always brings to that places of business are all closed; the very lights of the lamps are gloomy—seemingly dim. Unike the more crowded streets near by, where both citizens and officers congregate in numpers, the neighborhood of the streets mentioned is almost destitute of the first, while the latter are but rarely seen together, and are stationed at intervals rather remote. While walking there you instinctively grasp your cane with a firm hold, and are wary of corners and narrow

As policeman James Camac, of the Third District, was patrolling there at the time stated, be encountered a woman. A word or two of salutation passed between them as they passed. At this juncture a man approached, addressed a remark to the woman, and, without further warning or any provocation, caught her by the threat and struck her in the face. The policeman witnessed the blow-heard her cry, and at once hastened to interfere. Seizing the man he asked him the cause of his attack. With an outh the other made reply that if he was not released he would strike his captor. Nothing daunted, the officer, an old soldier, a man of powerful and athletic frame, determined now to arrest the fellow. He was just tightening his hold when he was surrounded by a party of some fifteen or twenty men, evidently the companions of his prisoner. He did not hear their coming—they appeared in a body—and must have been lurking close at hand. This was on Walnut street, between Front and Water. Instantly a fight ensued. The prisoner was from the officer's grasp, and he himself was knocked down. Almost defenseless, lying upon the ground, he yet made such resistance as he could with his billy. Of lutle avail, that poor stick, they jumped upon him, kicked him, and stabbed him. A severe cut was inflicted under his right arm, another across his breast. Wounded, as he was, sided by the darkness, he managed to crawl from under their feet, and get upon the outskirts of the half-drunken, riotous crowd. Rising to his feet he again went at them. Con mingled among themselves, many upon one, they failed to notice him at first, and struck, for a time, wildly at each other. Camac also succeeded in knocking down some three or four of the fellows. Reserve Officer James D. Howley, hearing the clamor, burried up, but only to receive treat-ment similar to that which Camac received. He was likewise felied to the ground several times, and, although he had his loaded pi-tol in his hand, such was the confusion and press that before he could use it, the barret was broken from the stock. He made his billy do good service, however and managed to keep the crowd at bay until the arrival of Officer William Bianford of the Third District, and Officer H. P.

Hunter, of the Harbor Police. The former of them was struck in the head, the latter, as the fellows were beginning to be frightened at the rapid coming of the police men-and were dispersing, escaped without being hurt. The rioters ran in every direction. Some took to their heels along Water street, others made tracks up Walnut. One of them, who had lost his hat in the squabble, fled through Granite street.

A citizen coming that way was almost run down by his precipitate flight. The fellow stopped a moment, struck by a sudden thought, and covered his own head by unceremoniously uncovering that of the other. As he turned again to run, he teld the amazed and now halless gentleman, that it he was followed, or any alarm was given, he would make use of a pistol which he significantly displayed.

Officers Camac, Howling, and Blanford were pretty well beaten. Camac, in addition to his other wounds, was bitten in the nose. Howling was also bitten in the same place. Camac was was also bitten in the same place.

taken to the Pennsylvania Hospital. The phytaken to the Pennsylvania him stated that his sician, after examining him, stated that his wounds were very serious, but not necessarily

The healthy condition of his body and his powerful constitution will, in all likelihood, save his life. The doctor also said, however, that it would not be advisable to admit the prisoners to ball for at least two days and probably not before a week. Three arrests were made, John Carrigan, Lawrence Tobin, and James Keating. Officer Camec, who, after the affray, made an affidavit, implicates all of them in the assault upon him.

Carrigan, for whom the police had been watchful all night, was arrested by Officer Hamilton, about nine o'clock this morning, upon one of the cars of the Lombard and South Street Line. Keating was arrested at Fifth and Spruce street, about half-past 2 o'clock this morning, Lawrence Tobin, who has hitherto borne the reputation of an orderly and law-abiding citizen, surrendered himself to Sergeant Pierson of the Third District, at 2 o'clock this morning. It may probably transpire, when all the circumstances of the affair are brought to light—that although the wounded policeman positively swears that Mr. Tobin was one of those who committed the assault—he will be found to have not participated. The darkness and the necessary confusion of the fight, may have misled the officer in his supposition. The pri-oners were committed by Alderman Car-

GENERAL GRANT.

His Visit to His Old flome.

The President of the Galena Bank, writing to a relative in Boston, gives the following account of General Grant's reception in Galena, on his return from Colorado, and of his deportment among the friends of his former home:-

"General Grant is here, quietly spending a fortnight in his home. I sent you a paper containing an account of his reception. The reception was spontaneous and informal, but genuine and hearty. At the serenade at his house it was not expected that there would be any speaking, but the crowd called some of us out. I was taken entirely by surprise, but could not back out, as I was standing on the porch near the General, and had to say a few words. He is in fine health and spirits. He walks about town every day in plain citizens' dress, the most unpretending man in the place. He spent most of the forenoon to-day sitting with us in the bank. He is one of our stockholders. In private he is very social, likes a joke and enjoys company. He reads the papers diligently, keeps himself posted, and has a pretty good idea of the political situation. On Sunday he and his wife and family walked to the Methodist Church, about half a mile, instead of riding in a carriage, as most great men would have done; and this, too, when his friends have placed horses and carriages at his disposal whenever he chooses to call for them. But he is a radical Democrat in the true sense. If the good people who are dis-tressed by the stories told by his enemies in regard to his habits could only look into that clear, calm, serene, and candid face for a few moments, they would say that its wearer could not be a man of bad passions or vicious habits. It is astonishing how such slanders of public men, if persistently repeated, will come to be believed by their political opponents, and by and by even perplex and distress their friends. The only really bad thing his enemies say of General Grant isthat he drinks. This would be bad enough, indeed, if true, but nothing could be more false or malicious. During all the time he lived in Galena, I never heard of his drinking ardent spirits, and I have never been able to find any man, friend or foe, living here, and who knew his habits, who could say that he was intemperate. In fact, there was no more temperate man in the city. That his habits in this respect are the same now, none who know him, and meet him, can for a moment

"But I have dwelt too long on this, for l know you have no doubts on this point. We are going to have a big mass meeting here on Friday next, and expect a crowd to see the General. He will take no part in any political meeting, but will be at home to see his

the Prescott Miner of a late date: "The woods in this neighborhood have been on fire for nearly two weeks past, and at night the element presents a grand display as it enwraps pitch pine trees in its destructive em-brace. A night or two ago it advanced from the west upon the ranches on that side of the town, destroying, in its resistless march, cabins, tences etc., but was driven back into the mountains by the wind. The fire, we are told, was started by Indians, at a point on Granite Creek, where Noyes & Curtis had a lot of saw-logs rotled to-gether. While the men went to the mill to get dinner the Indians set fire to the logs.

"The farmers on Lower Agua Frio, about twenty-five miles east from Prescott, have harvested their barley and are now cutting wheat. Mr. Dickerson, who was in town last week, assured us that when he left the creek the corn was about four feet high. Indian tires were occasionally seen on the hill surrounding the valleys, and it was the opinion of the settlers that the Apache Yumas had returned to their old haunts.

"Mr. Chenoweth, who arrived here from La Paz recently, says he never saw Indian signs thicker or more plentiful on the road. Their smoke ascends from almost every mountain, and at Wool-ey Hill, about twenty miles from Prescott, the Indians started fires and sent up smoke from each side of the road and close to it. This is the season of the year that the Indians of this portion of the territory make their big game hunts, by setting fire to the woods in order to drive out

"The placer miners in the Big Bay District are engaged in cutting a large ditch from the creek to their claims in the Mexican gulch. The district is now rather lonesome; but it will not be long before it will be the reverse, as Gray & Co. will, we are assured, start work soon. Parties who have recently arrived here from Camp McPherson say that the mountains in that vicinity are filled with Indians. "Business is very lively at Wickenburg, and the Vulture mine is said to be doing quite as well as ever.

ALLEGED HEAVY DEFALCATIONS .- A rumor was extensively circulated on Third street this afternoon that a member of a prominent fron working firm on Wa'nut street had proved a lefaulter to an amount which ranges from $60,000 to over $200 000. From what we could glean at the late hour which we heard it, it appears that the alleged defaulter held a high position in an iron company, whose mines are located in the vicinity of Allentown; and such was the confidence placed in him, that for a long time he has not been called on for a statement of the workings of the Company. Re-cently a meeting was called for, to come off on Monday last, but on the evening in question the gentleman was absent, and on investigating the books, the deficit was discovered. It is asserted that he has not been since seen or heard of.
