NEW YORKISMS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.

From our own Correspondent.

Have you seen the Grecian Bend yet? have you heard of it? do you know what it is? The idea is a very beautiful one; the attempts to realize it are, I am sorry to say, generally failures. Listen. The Grecian Bend, of which so much is being said and written, is that exquisitely flexible curvature of the female form so perfectly indicated in the attitude of so many a Grecian statue. It would be too much, perhaps, to say that ladies who possess it to perfection are born with it, and that to attain it is an Impossibility. Still the gifts of nature are the great assistants here, and no amount of padding and other arrangements which I dare not particularize, will suffice to get up a successful imitation. Ristori possessed it to perfection. Hergattitude as Phadra was full of it, so that the whole house would be in an ecstacy of applause during the silence of her tragic pantomime. The Grecian Bend is the great object of every young lady's ambition in and around New York, and consequently the Grecian Bend will extend North and South, and East and West, until this last ripple of fashion breaks itself upon the shore of obsoleteness and another takes its place. The Grecian Bend is a very cruel fashion to an ill-formed woman; to one who is short or dumpy, or scrawny in the arms and neck. Still, let us not laugh at the unbeautiful, who are striving after beauty in spite of nature, and with all the aids of art. Think for one moment what would be the effect of a Roman Bend, let us say, were it to become imperative among gentlemen. Think of the confusion of countenance and the confusion of legs that the most imperturbable of lady-killers would be put to, and then laugh at the unsuccessful Grecian Bend if you can. If there are any ladies in Philadelphia who in this city, who claims to have been assaulted by the keeper of a natatorium at the foot of Sixty-sixth street. Of course the story has two sides. Mrs. Nessen's side is that the keeper of the natatorium, Henry Gebhard, by name charged her with having taken her sister with her to the swimming school and there regaled her with a bath, without paying therefor, and on her assuring him that this was not the case he grabbed a drawn sword lying conveniently near | and [commenced a murderous assault upon her, when her husband came to her relief. Mr. Gebhard's side is that Mrs. Nessen was in the habit, in express violation of the rules of the establishment, of bringing her female friends there without permission or introduction, and of aiding and abetting them to take baths on her own season ticket. He says that on his remonstrating with her, she called him a nasty man, or a meau fellow, or a low fellow, or something to that effect; and that he merely retorted by suggesting that there was an intimate resemblance between them, then, in that respect. He furthermore charges that, so far from picking up a drawn sword, he picked up a fencing foil, which foil had a button on it, which button he merely flourished barmlessly before the eyes of Mr. Nessen, when the latter rushed up in defense of his wife. Nevertheless, the injured Nessens took out a warrant for the arrest of one Henry Gebbard, in that he did maliciously assault, etc. The magistrate, blandiy dismissed the case, however, intimating at the same time that the word Nessen was not properly a noun of multitude, signifying many, and that a season ticket made out in that name

could only be construed as applying to one individual, unless otherwise expressly stipuattend swimming school there, I advise them to take warning by the sad case of a Mrs. Nessen,

Perhaps you may have heard of a Mrs. Margaret Gamble, who was recently buried at Greenwood Cemetery. This Mrs. Gamble was wealthy, and had been twice married. At the time of her death her second husband was living and likewise her two brothers. Some time pefore her death she executed a will bequeathing a portion of her property to her brothers and the remainder to her husband. Changing her mind however, she revoked the first will and executed a second, leaving all her property to her husband. Very soon after this she died. The shortness of the interval between her execution of the last will and her death, together with other suspicious circumstances, aroused her brothers' distrust, and they insisted upon the immediate disinterment of the corpse. The dreary work was performed, and the contents of the stomach was submitted to medical tests. The subtlest chemistry that was applied, however, failed to detect the slightest trace of poison, and the brothers were quite as much foiled with respect to the dead Mrs. Gamble, as the public and the press have been in regard to the dead Mr. Spicer. Lord Lytton, in one of his prefaces to his "Lucretia," benevolently intimates that throughout the work he has nowhere hinted at the names of the poisons by which his Children of Night accomplished their murderous purposes. The reporters, the physicians, and the Coroner have been equally considerate with respect to the possible poison that may lark in the re-entombed remains of the unfortunate Mrs. Gamble. If the suspicions in regard to her husband be correct, he must be an extremely accomplished meddler among drugs, or else, as is more probable, the medical men applied only the best chemical ferrets they knew of, and not the best existing.

Going, going, gone, is the present state of things with respect to the cattle disease. But how long it will remain gone can only be a matter of conjecture. The Board of Health seems to have done all it can in this respect, and to have somewhat atoned for the criminal indifference it has shown in other respects. Dr. Swinburne, the health officer at quarantine, is at present making the tour of the State for the purpose of applying and perfecting the arrangements made by the State commission for the prevention of the disease. Two of the three infected herds which were discovered advancing toward the city, have been placed in strict quar antine, and the third one, which had already been stationed in one of the upper drove yards of the city, has, for the most part been slaughtered. I rather think that the report of a horse-flesh dinner being improvised (as an ex. periment prospective of the use of the horse as an edible, in case of a rinderpest), partakes something of the character of a canard.

A very curious death has happened at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The sewer leading from the dry-dock was being cleaned out, and the men who were cleaning it found it necessary to use a diving-bell in order to ascertain precisely the amount and nature of the debris collected at the bottom. The diving-bell contained two men, who, immediately upon being lowered.

commenced frantically pulling at the signalrope. Whether or not the diving-bell was hoisted up immediately I cannot say; but when it was, one of the men was discovered dead, and the other for some time was supposed to be dying, The valve which admits the air from the surface to the inside of the diving-bell had become tightly closed, and a very short space of time la the foul air which the divers were compelled to breathe was enough to despatch one of them at

Mrs. Cady Stanton, the editress of the Revolution in this city, has been doing more than any other woman, or any mau, has been able to doviz.:-getting a Chinese opinion on American women. She walked right up to Chih Tajin. and asked him, through the interpreter, what he thought of the women of this country. His reply was excessively complimentary, courtierlike, and mollifying. To use a boldly original phrase, it was equally creditable to his head and his heart. All this, however, is matter of public news, and I should not resterate it here, were it not the fact that the philosophic Chih has repeatedly expressed the same opinion in strictly private circles. He and his confreres are astonished at the American women, at their timid boldness, and shy espiegierie, and if the Tennysonian time shall ever come when nationalities shall be lost sight of in the federation of the world, the Chinese woman's brain will begin to expand with her uncrippled feet, and such tea as was never brewed before shall be drank by a Sorosla of Pekin.

The season at the New York Theatre, which usually is attended by great crowds of men, abrupily terminated the other night, in consequence of the manager's appropriating all the money in the till. He says he did so because the lessee broke faith with him; and the lessee says the theatre is closed because the manager took the money. It don't matter much, except that every one will feel sorry to hear of such a fracas occurring at a theatre where that good old Mary Wells was playing.

The repertory of amusements for the coming fall and winter is full. Never were such singing, dancing, and acting as we are shortly to enjoy. Tietiens, Kellogg, Booth, Jefferson, Henrichs, Von Beindorf, Scott Siddons, Lydia Thompson, Susan Galton, Miss Mariott, and Morasini, the "Coquette of Egypt," are a few of the names,

Dr. Bellows has returned from his long tour. He is looking splendidly, and doing splendidly in the preparation of his letters for the press, Chira Hall, No. 1218 Chesnut street, AFTER WAR, PASTILENCE. AND INTEMPERANCE, Colds lead to the greatest destruction of human life maisly because a Cold is too often considered a very ordinary, trifling affair, just as well lef; to go as I came, and hence systematically neglected, until a simple curable affection, is converted into a serious and generally fatal Pulmonary disease. The more prudent, aware that a violent Cough or Cold should never be trifled with, but on the contrary taken care of from its incipiency, promptly make use of Dr Jayne's Expectorant, a curative which has sustained its rejutation for over thirty years as a remedy always efficacious, and sure to exert a most beneficial influence on all the Broachial and Pulmonary organs. Sold by all Druggists.

A NEW THING OUT -While there have been decided improvements in all the wearing apparel of jadies, none have been so noticeable as those made in skirts. Of these there are all styles and shades; but that which has proved to be the most attractive to the eye, as well as durable, is the Grand Duchessotherwise known as the Melton Print skirts. They are manufactured of Melton cloth, with a printed border, which very much resembles embroidery, in fact at a little distance, one is most likely to take i for embroidery. These goods are really beautiful, and eclipse anything of the kind ever before manufactured in the country, and it is doubtful whether Europe can produce their equal. The patent-right has been secured, and the articles are on exhibition in this city, at the store of Farnham, Kirkham & Co. No. 232 Chesnut street; No. 59 Leonard street, N. Y., and No. 149 Devonshi'e street. Boston.
