THE DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPERTY AND ADDRESS OF THE PROPERTY OF

Highly Important to Brickmakers. The attention of brickmakers is called to an invention by Mr. J. R. Caldwell, of Pittsburg, which is without a doubt ultimately destined to completely revolutionize the present slow and unsatisfactory method of drying bricks, tile pottery, and similar articles. We have not space to describe properly the invention mentioned, but it will well repay anybody interested in brickmaking to visit the brick yard at Broad street and Germantown road and witness the practical operations of "Caldwell's Off-bearings and Brick-drying Cars and Hot-air Furnace." Briefly it may be stated that this invention consists of a hot-air furnace or tunnel, with double wall registers, well supplied with a uniform heat; and running through it is a small railroad containing capitally constructed iron cars, so arranged as to hold 650 bricks each without touching each other. These car-loads of bricks are dried, while passing through the tunuel, with astonishing quickness, uniformity, and thoroughness. They enter one end soft bricks, and come out at the other entirely ready for use. The furnace is capable of drying 5200 bricks at a time, and each one comes out perfectly dried. The old and tiresome method of drying (well known to brickmakers) is entirely dispensed with, and a considerable amount of labor and expense is saved. With this invention in use bricks can be made at all seasons, except when the clay is actually frozen. Brickmakers who study their own interest will do well to examine this invention at once, and its merits will be apparent. There is a fortune in it for the inventor. Any particulars regarding it can be learned of Alexander Kerr & Brother, No. 136 S. Water

NEW YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27. Now that the splendors of our watering places are beginning to pale and Messrs, Namely, To wit, and Videlicet are thinking of returning to town the next question is, what shall be the prime social excitement of the forthcoming season? Plenty of excitement in the way of public amusement is being already prepared for fashionable Gothamites, and I am convinced that you will not care to hear much more of that just at present. The question with the Gotkamite is, what social lion is to be caught and caged? The Mrs. Leo. Hunts, of Fifth avenue, are wondering what decoy-ducks will turn up in the shape of distinguished foreigners-somebody who wears gold lace, and speaks broken English, and so has a double right to be firted with and jilted. I am afraid that in our very fashionable society, an emittent foreign literary man would stand no more chance than a distinguished Brigadier-General, unless, indeed, the author of "Laus Veneris" should come hither and inhale fresh inspiration from the free-shown beauties of Madison Square. It is astonishing to see how small is the attraction our fashionab'e women discover in the fame of an eminent literary man, unless he, indeed, adds to his intellectual reputation the notoriety due to his editorship of such poems as the late Miss Menken is said to have left in Mr. Swinburne's hands. However, it is probable that these longings after something new will soon be satisfied, and that a furore will be created in the breasts of our distinguished demoiselles that has not been equalled since the visit of the Prince of Wales. The Grand Dake Alexis Alexandrovitch, third son of the Czar Alexander II of Russia, is now at that interesting age for young ladies, viz., eighteen, which the Prince of Wales was at when the latter visited this country about nine years ago. The young Alexis has been travelling for his health. He has just completed a tour which included almost all the countries bordering on the Mediteranean, and on Saturday last he sailed from Algiers for the United States. He is not only a Duke, young ladies will be glad to know; he is also a colonel of a regiment of Russian infantry, and holds a commission in the imperial naval division of Finland. He is described as being interesting-looking and handsome, with that supply of dusky down upon the upper lip which gives such pleasing promise of the future magnificent moustache, His knowledge of conversational English is limited, and it is well for the demoisettes who seek to captivate, that among well-bred people of fashion the knowledge of French has become almost of as much necessity here as throughout Europe. Several things will have a tendency to make the young Duke popular here, as well as in Philadelphia, and whatever other Northern city he may visit in the United States. In the first place there is a strong sympathy at present between the United States and Russia, based upon the mutuality of their interests with Caina and Japan, and the side the Emperor of Russia took with the North during the efforts of the late Confederacy. In the second place, fashionable society is always dying for something new, and a young foreign Dake (in ill health, too,) is just the medium for bringing it to life again. In the third place, the object of all their expectation is said to be a very Marquis de Lethoriere, in the art of pleasing, and where one party is resolved to please, and the other to be pleased, no prophet is required to predict the result. Could a row like that which has disgraced the boards of the Broadway Theatre have occurred in a theatre of any other city, except, perhaps, New Orleans, or Chicago? The whole affair is brutal and low throughout, and having originated in the New York Theatre, will long surround that place of entertainment with unpleasant associations. The gist of the matter appears to be that, after Mr. Harkins, the leading actor in Foul P ay, at the New York (or Worrell Sisters') Theatre, had appropriated the money in the box-office, in his failure to receive the stipulated amount from Mr. Lloyd, the lessee, Mr. Lloyd procured a warrant from Judge Barnard for his arrest. According to all that I have been able to understand, the Sheriff's deputies employed for the arrest of Mr. Harkins had p'enty of opportunity to arrest him during the day, as Mr. Harkins, at various hours between dawn and dusk, fluctuates between the Broadway Theatre and the Metropolitan Hotel. The time chosen for the arrest, however, was at nine o'cleck at night, when Foul Play was in full blast. At that hour a number of armed men, without stating their business or displaying their badges, presented themselves at the stage door of the Broadway Theatre, assailed all who attempted to defend themselves, rushed into the dressing-rooms of the actresses, who were making up for the next scene, let off their pisrols in a murderously reckless manner, and were not collared by the police who were sent for, before they had succeeded in painfully injuring one man, and probably killing the callboy, a lad of sixteen. Outrageous as such conduct is, however, it is as nothing in comparison with what it would seem, if the consequences which so easily might have happened had really taken place. That the sound of screams and discharged pistols from behind the scenes did not cause a pante among the audience is a pheromenon for which no one has to thank the Sheriff's Deputies. However much the actor Harkins may have been in the wrong, the sympathy of the public is at present with him. Sheriff O'Brien has written to Justice Shandley, in which he has the brazenness to justify his Deputies. But the Sheriff will find it extremely hard to make that part of the public which constituted the outraged audience on the evening in question believe that the conduct of his Deputies was not more atrocious than anything of the kind that has occurred for years.

Crime! crime! crime! Nothing but crime has been telegraphed to police headquarters and filled the note-books of reporters of late. An inveterate mother-stabber has just been rearrested and incarcerated for using a claspknife in a maternally murderous manner in open Court. The youth had just recovered from the effects of a debauch, during which he had amused himself by beating his mother and sister. The sister was so ill-used as to be confined to bed, and the mother, though looking badly, had come in Court to testify against the filial devil. As she was leaving the witnessstand he started up from one of the seats reserved for prisoners, and, rushing upon her with an open clasp-knite, endeavored to stab her to the heart. Thanks to the policemen who interposed, he succeeded in only grazing her cheek. Even to eyes used to the ghastly procession of bandaged and bleeding heads which daily loom up before the justices' desks, in the various Police Courts, such a sight as this is more than sad and sickening-it is horrifying, and one asks himself whether devils never possess human beings now as in the time

An interesting clash of arms has just occurred between Captain Coates (not Captain Jinks of the Hoss Marines), in command of the Washington Gray Battalion, and Captain Cooke, in command of Company B, of that battalion. In consequence of some misunderstanding about the expenses, Captain Coates contradicted the rumor that the battalion was to visit Boston and Providence, and called on Captain Cooke to surrender all the arms and equipments in his charge, inasmuch as Company B had resolved to undertake the visit as a separate battalion, and Captain Coates was resolved that it should not. Cooke applied to Brigadier-General Pastley for permission to loan, which was retused; and Coates applied to Superintendent Keunedy for a police force to prevent company B's leaving the city, Captain Cooke having announced his intention to go anyhow, in spite of Pasiley's pro' hibition. But Kennedy refused the requested police force unless a wish to that effect should be received by him from General Shaler, commanding the First Division. At any rate, how the quarrel was settled, remains a mystery as yet, for the battalion set off, apparently amicable, on Tuesday morning, at four o'ctock.

A foot-race at Finlay track, and aquatics at Sing Sing, attest to the interest in the muscle movement which is still kept up among us. This last attenuated scrap of paper on which I am writing, warns me to say what I have to say as short as possible; so, if any of the readers of THE TELEGRAPH want to see a pretty piece of rowing, I advise them to be at Hoboken on the 7th of next monta, when a boating match, for $200 a side, will come off between John McKiel and Johnny Blue, alias "Shanks" of the Bowerg. Among those on the lookout for such visitors ALI BABA.

THE CHICAGO TUNNEL.

Rapid Progress of the Work, and an Early Completion Expected.

We take the following from the Chicago Post: Work on the Washington street tunuel is rapidly progressing, and there is little doubt that the great thorough are will be opened in the early spring. The obstructions will be removed from the river by December 1. From three hundred to four hundred men are employed upon the work, and the whole is pushed forward to completion as rapidly as possible.
Six bundred and sixty-five feet of the arching are already finished, leaving 265 feet still to be The east excavation is now eighty feet inside the river bed. The coffer dam is all that could be des red, excluding the water perfectly so that no trouble arises from this source. On the west side the excavations are within twentyfive feet of the river. The coffer dam will built across the other half of the river, and the channel changed from the west to the cast side by the middle of September, so that the excavation can be continued on the west side. passenger house on the east side is nearly at its

The general plan of the tunnel is already known. Single passages, for horse and foot separately, are built to the water's edge, where the passage is doubled for the carriage way, extending two bundred and twenty feet, one side for going east, and the other side for the west, thus preventing any danger of collision. The footpath is six feet above the carriage road in the middle of the tunnel. When all the arches are completed the top will be covered with mesonry, making all level; over this will be a coating of government asphaltum poured on hot, and thus running into and filling all the seams, and forming a water tight sheeting; over this, again, large, heavy flagstones, of the usual white stones, will be laid, and the joints filled with asphaltum. Then the water is allowed to flow over all. Between each course of brick in the arches is a half inch of cement The bottom of the archways will be built over a concrete filling of pounded stone and Beneath the centre of the passage-way under foot, is a sewer 120 feet long-over one hundred of which is new built-leading to a well in the centre of the tunnel bottom, into which all water accomulating in the tunnel flows and is pumped up by a powerful engine to the surface and back to the river. The cost of the tunnel, for material and labor, is about $8000 per week. The cost of building is much greater than was at first expected, as the project as a new one, and of course not to be figured closely on. The contractors have already disbursed upwards of $75,000 over and above what they have received from the city. The original contract was $328,500, but the actual cost will be not less than balf a million. The present contractors, lovever, are determined to carry the work through.
