THE New York World in an article under this caption, takes the position that since the peace of Nikol: burg a serions check was administered to Prussia by France. "The peace of Nikolsburg," says our contemporary, "was the work mainly of France." We should like to see some authorities given in support of this. "How serious a check was administered to the ambition of Prussia Europe is only just beginning to appreciate. It is true that for the gravity of the consequences which have since developed themselves from that peace the vehemence and obduracy of the Prussian Government in attempting to ignore the state of things created by that peace, must be largely held responsible." Now what are the consequences which have since developed themselves? We know for certain, although our contemporary makes no mention of this fact, that since that peace Prussia, in addition to the territory acquired by the late war, has succeeded in obtaining the command of the Southern German armies. This, of itself is equivalent, to another victory. What has France gained? We are told that the influence of Prassis, or rather to use the writers' own words, "The mistakes," as he calls them, without, however, specifying what these mistakes of Prussia are, "might perhaps have been easily killed had the Emperor Napoleon permitted himself to be carried away either last year or the year before by the influence of the great events in Germany upon the popular feeling in France." Exactly so. We think the reason why the Emperor Napideou did not permit himself to be carried away, is generally conceived to be sufficiently obvious. It is universally admitted that France was not in a condition to risk a war with Prussia at the period to which our contemporary refers. The Chassepot rifls was just being introduced; Prussia had shown what her army could do with the needle-gun. Again, we know for certain that France met with a decided rebuilt in the refusal of the Rhenish provinces. This period, it will be admitted, is the most important one. France had just been repulsed in Mexico, or if not repulsed, had accepted our invitation to leave the country. The result is well known.

We are surprised that the writer overlookel another obvious fact, unless he is satisfied that Napoleon can commit no errors. Why did not Louis Napoleon assist Austria ? Becauses as has been admitted by his friends, with strong reasons for believing it, Napoleon himself said-He did not for a moment believe

It is the grand key-note of the Democratic party to shout in favor of economy, and to charge the Republican party with extravagance. They know full well that there is something peculiarly pleasing in the ory o' "retrenchment and reform," and they do not hesitate to make what capital they can out of it, whether they are entitled to it or not. The fact that they are out of office gives them peculiar opportunities to indulge in this cry. Let us see, however, how in our own State the Republican administration have administered the finances, whether during their continuance in power the debt has been increased or diminished, and what sort of an account we can give the people of our stewardship. A number of figures are furnished in the State Guard, which serve as a basis on which to show how we have managed the finances of the Commonwealth. For many years previous to 1860 the Democratic party had the control of the State. Neither Whigs nor R +publicans had been in power. Under these successive administrations the debt had amounted to an enormous figure, so that on the 1st of November, 1850, before Governor Cortin's inauguration, it had reached $37,-909,847:50. For eight years the state was in the hands of our political friends, and on the 1st of August, 1868, the debt was reduced to $33,651,637.47; or an actual release given to the people of Four Millions Turge Hundrad AND EIGHTEEN THOUSAND TWO HUNDRED AND TEN DOLLARS. But not only was the debt reduced but taxation was also. The following figures show how much: -

Have We Been Economical?

The net amount chargeable to the counties annual y in 1863, 1864, and 1865 was. The net amount coargeable to the counties enually in 1866, 1867, and . $1.657 311 33

313 222 19 1.68..

... $1,311,092.14 Annual reduction...... Add the amount of dent reduced, from November 30, 1860, to August 1, 1868. ... $1 318 215 03

And we show a reduction of taxa-tion and debt in less than eight years, recomplished by the Repub-$5,661 302 07

But highly creditable as this seems, it does not yet give the full meed due to our party. The circumstances under which this reduction was accomplished were peculiarly unfavorable. Through the allies of the Democracy we were undergoing a fearful and extensive civil war. Vast additional burdens, extraordinary with the occasion which called for them, were incurred. The resources of the States were crippled, and the sources from which profit flows were choked up. The war expenses from December, 1860, to August, 1868, were $5,649,702.74. Had we not had this war, we would have reduced the sum of our indebtedness that much more. So that in the eight years we would have paid off and relieved the people of nine million nine hundred and sixty-seven thousand nine hundred and twelve dollars and seventy-seven cents of debt. Can we not with pride point to this record of our economy, and ask the shouting Democrats, hungry for the spoils of office, "where can you show such a balance sheet?" If the Republican administration is continued for eight years longer we can safely promise that ten millions of the debt will be diminished. Shall we, then, now change the hands, life in others' speculations. I love to see myself in other men's minds. When I am not walking I am reading. I cannot sit and think; books think for me." It must be admitted that such a course will suit many who can read and think too; but of the numerous class who only read worthless fiction, such a life is almost useless. We know many who read novels by the cart load, and yet rememher nothing. They read only for pastime. It is Shakespeare's comparison of pouring water into a sieve. Good old Charles Lamb was only indulging in his mischievous vein when he said he could not think he was right in saying that he had no repugnances, but he had for all that. It almost provokes us that he did not like Byron; he must even quote Shakespeare's line to confirm his distaste : "I love you not, my Lord Biron; but why stop to point out spots on the sun." Honest, admirable Lamb! His care for his parents. his noble devotion to his sister, his essays in more than one respect unequalled, his genuine taste for literature ! Then his companions! Who ever tires of thinking of such friends as Coleridge, Hazlitt, Wordsworth-Hood, and Talfourd ? What memories do such names conjure up! Then we too remember country, are a disease and a cancer, because of that if we had not their personal acquaintance, that their works are as well known in this force the party to complete the work upon country as in England. How every scrap of their writings and letters has been treasured ! It is by the study of such authors as these that a genuine, wholesome love for literature is attained. This is part of the company that the late Mr. Thackeray recommends his young friends to keep. Keep the best company. By that phrase he meant, read the best authors. Do not imagine you can always obtain access to such company. You must early have been introduced to them, if you imagine that you can plod at money-making up to a certain age and then sit down to enjoy such acquaintances. You may find too late that the taste for such society is wanting. It is only by cultivating this faculty at the age "when the heart promised what the fancy drew," that a store of pleasure is laid up which lasts for life, a perennial source which will never fail.

THE PLOT HATCHES.-As we stated yesterday, the gathering of railroad (?) men at the White Sulphur Springs meant mischief. So then has that statement been confirmed. General Rosecrans, an obedient slave of the President, acts as carrier, to bring to the Democrats at Washington the soothing address of their brethren of the South to the agitated minds of the Northern people. We now predict that it will paint the condition of that section in glowing colors. Peace, fraternal feeling, and growing prosperity are the blessings showered on the South. War ! Insurrection ! Murders ! Preposterous! there are nothing of the kind, and as to uniting by the bayonet the State governments, such an idea is not entertained. Let us see if this is not the tone of the address.

NEW JERSEY IS ALIVE AND AWAKE .- The following are among the many Republican meetings now being arranged for in various parts of the State. There are many more for which the speakers are not yet definitely assigned:-Major General Alfred Pleasonton will speak at Newton, September 1, and at Paterson Septem ber 3. Major James Haggerty will speak at Camden August 27, at Phillipsburg August 28, and at Plainfield Septemb r 3. The Hon, A W. Tenney will speak at Camden August 27, at Phillipsburg August 25, at Newton September 1, at Paterson September 3, and at New Brunswick September 2. Major Z K, Pangborn will speak at Camden September 3 Senator Frelinghuysen will speak in Plainfield Sep-(mber 3. The Hon. B. G. Noble will speak at Paramus September 1, and at Hackensack September 3. Judge Gale, of New York, will speak at Rahway August 28. General Thomas M. Hite, of Missouri, will speak at Tom's River August 27, and at Newark September 7. DELAWARE has a peculiar Constitution, by which each of the three countles, with exceedingly unequal populations, enjoys an equal representation in the State Legislature. Following the Legislative representation, the Democratic Convention held the other day was constituted in similar manner. Whereupon the Wilmington Commercial comments as follows:-"There were five gentlemen kindly attending the Dover Convention yesterday, as delegates from Wilmington. They were surprised to find they did not constitute a large portion of it, the Convention being composed in this wise:-

PHILLIPS. THE His Views on the Political Situation. This week's Anti-Slavery Standard, atter in duleing in its usual misrepresentations of th Republican party, is never heles; const ained to say that a vote for Grant and Colfax is a vote for ircedom. Wendell says:-We see as clearly as any one the shortcomings of the Republican party. Still a vote for Gran means the negro's suffrage recognized; a vote for Seymour means the negro dis ranchised and another war. * * We look for ward, therefore to the success of the Republican party in the coming election as the salvation of the Union and the best hope for the negro. Its deteat will evidence that the blood and treasurof another generation are needed to establish liberty and justice bere. Our mos serious complaint against Congress Is that it has left the whole unchecked, untrammelied power of the nation in the hauds of the Rebels, to be wielded against the Republican party in this struggre. The immi-nent peril in which we stand to-day was no necessity, might easily have been avoided. that the Austrians would be otherwise than suc cessful. We could scarcely forbear from smiling at what we must beg pardon for calling the simplicity of the writer, who gravely tells us that, "fortunately for himself, and for France, and it may well be for Germany also, he has since had the firmness to adhere to the policy of patience, forbeatance, etc."

A good reason may, we think, be assigned for all this. When the war between Prussia and Austria broke out, Napoleon took a position similar to that which Isgo laid out for himself in the memorable fight that was to come off between Roderigo and Cassio: -- "If Roderigo kill Cassio or if Cassio kill Roderigo in either case I shall benefit from the result, for a war between two such great powers must necessarily result in great exhaustion to both. I shall then step in and help myself to a slice of territory on the Rhine." We doubt whether Louis Napoleon was ever more disappointed in the whole course of his life, the Bolongne and Strasbourg expeditions always excepted, as at the wonderful success of Prussia. We do not justify Prussia for attacking Denmark, but the conduct of Austria was no better.

The reference to Belgium does not help our New York friend in the least. All speculations as to an alliance with Eugland on this question are mere surmises. Even if such an arrangement be effected, it would practically amount to but little, for England is not in a condition to go to war. She would never have remained quiet and allowed Denmark to be dismembered had she been in warlike trim. Her power of interference in European affairs is gone, and Lord Stanley's recent and rather ostentatious declaration was passed by unheeded by such a powerful nation as Prussia just now undoubtedly is, as if it had been uttered by a third or fourth-rate power.

We think, therefore, that the conclusion arrived at by our contemporary, "that history will give the palm of practical statesmanship during the critical period which has elapsed since the thunder-storm of July, 1866, to the head of the Bonapartes, rather than to the right hand of the Hohenzollern," is erroneous.

WISE PERCAUTIONS .- The Sanitary Committee of the Board of Health on Wednesday reported in favor of the appointment of two inspectors, whose duty it should be to visit the droveyards of our city and examine all the cattle brought to our market. This is a wise precantion. Already there is becoming prevalent a feeling of unsasiness which is not warranted by the circumstances, but which can only be allayed by the assurance that the people can have none of the diseased cattle sold to them by reason of official protection. The money expended in this matter is well laid out, and if it gives confidence and also prevents danger, the people will not complain f double the sum be spent.

and let loose on the Treasury a strong and voracions crew, who will undo all the good that years of economy have done?

On a Taste for Reading. THE old adage, "Tell me what friends you keep, and I will tell you what sort of man you are," can be paralleled by one which asks what books you read, and then from the answer presumes what manner of man you are. That was, indeed, the triumph of mind over matter, when Cadmus, the inventor o letters, discovered the noble art of arresting so subtle, volatile, and invisible a thing as thought, and imparted to it an existence more durable than that of brass or marble. The feeling which a man of liberal education tion naturally entertains towards the gre.t minds who have written imperishable books, has been so eloquently stated by one who has himself left works which are likely to exist as long as the English language itself, that we cannot forego the pleasure of transcribing this writer's remarks: - "The debt which he owes to them is incalculable. They have guided him to truth. They have filled his mind with noble and graceful images. They have stool by him in all vicissitudes-comforters in sorrow, nurses in sickness, companions in solitude. These friendships are exposed to no danger from the occurrences by which other attachments are weakened or dissolved. Time glides by; fortune is inconstant; tempers are soured; bonds which seem indissoluble are daily sundered by interest, by emulation, or by caprice. But no such cause can affect the silent converse which we hold with the highest of human intellects. That placid intercourse is disturbed by no jealousies or resentments. These are the old friends who are never seen with new faces: who are the same in wealth and in poverty, in glory and in obsourity. With the dead there is no change. Plato is never sullen. Cervantes is never petulant. Demosthenes never comes unseasonably. Dante never stays too long. No difference of political opinion can alienate Cicero. No heresy can excite the horror of Bossuet."

It is no detriment to the noble writer whom we have just quoted, to say that the same thoughts can be found in one of our particular favorites, Montaigne. It detracts not in the slightest degree from his originality, for old Montaigne got his ideas from the ancients, and the modern writer has merely expanded the sense of the Frenchman. How true is every line! and how the advantage is shown to be possessed by those who read the best productions of all ages, to the ephemeral trash which the Minerva press is constantly producing in such abundance. Charles Lamb said, in his own quaint, delightful way:-"At the hazard of losing some credit, I must confess that I dedicate no inconsiderable portion of my time to other people's thoughts. I dream away my were in most respects, however, kindly treated, and had seats in the Hall, just like others. They return pleased with their little trip, and convinced anew of the privilege they enjoy, in being permitted to vote the ticket which Kent and sussex present to them.

PROSPEROUS .- A clergyman is now living in Boston who was settled over a rich society there fifty-four years ago, at a salary of $25 per week, twenty five cords of wood, and a house in Summer street. It is not every Minister of the Gospel who fares so well.
