NEW YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Naw York, Sept. 3. A catalepsy office was the idea of Edgar Allen Poe. A Frenchman has invented a Respiratory Advertising Apparatus for Precipitate Inhumation. (I quote from memory). But Franz Vester, of Newark, has beaten both Pos and the Parisian, by being voluntarily buried slive, in a safety-coffin of his own invention. The common run of martyrs die for the sake their principles; Mr. Vester died for the sake of his patent. His death, burial, and resurrection, have been witnessed with demonstrations of delight by a thousand speciators, a majority of whom were

New Yor'cers. Mr. Vester is willing to die, be burled, and resurrect himself, on the same terms as those of Tuesday (namely fifty cents a head for adults, and no balf-price for children), every afternoon until further notice. He will immediately commence a star engagement in every fashionable graveyard in the United States. And though he goes to the grave, we will not deplore him, though sorrows and darkness encompass the tomb; for in his case the sorrows are recompensed by an_appetizing arrangement of cold sandwiches and champaign cider, and the darkness considerably alleviated by a wooden chimney projecting a few feet above the level of the grave. In brief, Mr. Franz Vester, an elderly German gentleman, who is soon going to play a burying engagement in this city, executed on Tuesday afternoon his threat of being burie! alive. I despair of giving the reader any definite idea of the appliances and modus operandi of this resurrection coffin. It is deeper than the ordinary coffin; the upper part of the lid works back, and reveals a receptacle for eatables and drinkables; and from the top of the head part to the ground (supposing the coffin to be buried six feet deep) extends a wooden chimney, two feet square, furnished inside with a rope and ladder-like arrangement. People using Mr. Vester's coffins need be under no apprehension, therefore, if they should be buried by mistake. If they awake at midnight, a touch on the head-piece will send it flying back, and spread before them abundance of good cheer, like the table improvised through a trap-door in the fairy pantomime. In the case of inveterate smokers, cigars and matches will be enclosed. The next thing in order will be for the resurrectionist to seize the rope and by its aid and that of the ladder-like arrangement, clamber up to the summit of the wooden box, like a subterranean chimney sweeper. Under this new arrangement corpses are requested to be buried in their everyday clothes, with their latch keys and some loose change left in their pockets, and possibly as the system becomes perfected a line of night cars will be established for the express accommodation of the newly disentombed. In truth, Mr. Vester's burial was a great success-Nothing became him so much in his life as his leaving it and coming back to it again. The "good bye, old fellow," and "remember me to all the folks," which were called out as the coffin descended into the grave, were succeeded by "How are you, old fellow? How did you leave 'em all?" as Mr. Vester reappeared thing. But Mr. Vester has struck a withering blow at the writers of romance, who deat in burying-alive sensations. With such a coffin as this in use, "Jean Valjean" could never have gone through one of the most terrible of his experiences. Next to John Allen, Mr. Vester promises to become the most popular man in the States. I shouldn't wonder if both ran for Congress some day. The friends here of Mr. Elliott, the artist whose remains, it will be remembered, were but a day or two since interred at Greenwood, talk of erecting a monument there to his memory. It is proposed to raise the means out of a public exhibition of his pictures, inaugurated either by his personal friends or the National Academy of Design. In common with other great artists. Mr. Elliot's popularity is not so extended as it might be from the fact that some of the sweetest, purest, and truest offsprings of his pencil have been instantly snapped up before they could be placed on public exhibition, and have ever since remained in their jealous possessors cabinets. The warmth with which the monument topic is at present being discussed, will probably result in some of these holders of his last efforts yielding their claim for a time, and allowing a transient publicity to those bijoux which have hitherto been reserved for the

through the chimney top, after the expiration of an hour and a half. It is to be hoped that Mr. Vester and his safety coffin will soon appear in Philadelphia. Manager Sinn or Manager

Fox, or Mr. Hemphill, or possibly Mrs. John

Drew might be induced to give him a short season. I am confident that, now that "real limited circles of amateurs and ditettante. What do you think of the idea of starting a new illustrated evening paper here? One would think, from the number of new evening and afternoon papers constantly projected, that all the old ones had been buried alive in Mr. Vester's catalepsy coffin. The evening newspaper is a sort of a serpent's eye that fascinates the editorial bird to his destruction. Proprietors and managing editors will not take warning by the fate of Every Afternoon and the Evening Gazette. And yet with the exception of the Pos', the Advertiser, and the Express, of long established growth, I don't believe that of all the dozen evening newspapers in this city and Brooklyn, there is one as successful as THE EVENING TELEGRAPH of Philadelphia. The evening newspapers don't seem to flourish here. The penny News is the most visible in the cars and stages, between 3 and 5 o'clock P. M.; but the Feason is that it teems with criminal items "cooked" with the most tantalizing and provocative spice. All that these dozen evening papers need for their utter consternation and demoralization is an i'lustrated evening newspaper, which shall unite the Herald's capital and conscientiousness with the pictorial pruriencies of the Day's Doings and the Last Sensation. This mention of crime reminds me that Judge Dowling, of the Tombs, is a living refutation of the popular fallacy of the law's delay. The law don't delay with him. He has brought his indicial alacrity, now, up to the point of disposing of sixty cases of crimes and misdemeanors in about as many minutes. Can any Philadelphia Justice show as fair a record?

Mr. Hermann Hendricks, who, as I remarked a couple of days ago, was to appear on Tuesday night, made his debut as the Duke Albrecht to a crowded audience at the Stadt Theatre. To my judgment, based upon the fragments of his acting, which a transient visit rendered visible, he has more fire and less fluish than Bogumil Dawison, whom all the Graman population of Philadelphia, and some of the Americans, will temember. Perhaps of Germans do not require so much to work chem up into furore as the Americans do. Their expressions of approval on Tuesde y evening were of the most hearty chara eer, and the more enthusiastic of his amirers, near the stage, did all but follow him into the green-room, and load him with those personal tributes which less frigid audiences than ours pay elsewhere.

For the progress of John Allen's conversion, and its contagious nature. I refer you to extracts from the columns of the New York Tri bune, which, after editorially doubting his sincerity, is now locally attesting to it.

Street Commissioner McLean is being called to account for the recklessness with which our public money has been expended in the repairing of the streets here. It appears that Mr Brown, the contractor chosen, is paid $125,000 for seven months' labor in that department, while the actual outlay for one third that period only amounts to $8000. During the last seven months of 1867, $130,000 were drawn from the city Tressury, for the repair of streets, and no more than $25,000 worth of repairs was actually put upon them. To all which statements Commissioner McLean replies that he intends transmitting to Common Council a full communication respecting them. ALI BABA.

Affairs in the Revenue Department -The Recent Elections-Good

News from the West.

WASHINGTON

FROM EUROPE BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Dead Lock,

Special Despatch to The Evening Telegraph. WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 .- Up to this morning no compromise had been effected between Secretary McCulloch and Commissioner Rollins, and consequently the revenue troubles remain in statu quo. No supervisors of late have been appointed, for the reason that the Secretary will not appoint the persons, invariably Republicans, that Rollins nominates. The best of feeling prevails between the two officials.

The Recent Election has proved itself a great dampener to Demo * cratic hopes in this quarter. They have not recovered from their sudden fall, and concede, by reticence if not by words, their defeat in the coming election of Maine. There are rumors that large bets have been made that the result in that State will be 30,000 majority for Grant.

The Campaign in the West. Letters received here to-day from prominent men in the Northwestern States say that the Republican canvass was never conducted more thoroughly than now. The lists of appointments embrace every city and town, and the speakers are among the very best. The letters further state that there is every indication of a majority for the radical ticket this fall which will exceed that heretofore given for any Presidential The Secretary of War has asked the Attorney-General for an opinion.

upon the legality of numerous claims from the South, growing out of the war claims now on file in the Department. They amount to from twenty to thirty millions of dollars, and the acts of Congress on the subject are so conflicting that the Secretary is in doubt as to the propriety of paying them.

A Doubtful Report. There is a report this afternoon that Secretary McCulloch has agreed to the appointment of the Supervisors nominated by Commissioner Rollins, without any further controversy. The Commissioner, however, has no information on the subject, and there is a doubt as to the truth of the rumor.
