Mr. Seymour's Unfitness.

From the N. Y. Times. The estimate of Mr. Seymour's character conveyed by the letter of General Dix is verified by his conduct in connection with the nomination for the Presidency. General Dix states the impression left on his mind after more than a quarter of a century's personal and political intercourse with the Democratic candidate. His private excellence is conceded. But in the opinion of the General, "he has not a single qualification for the successful execution of the high official trust to which he has been nominated."

wonderful country to a similar fate by the active introduction of the inferior races here and admitting them to the elective franchise. To this high privilege they will be admitted whenever they are concentrated upon this continent in large numbers. Demagogical agitations will as surely succeed in securing it for them as those agitations have secured the ballot for the negro—the lowest of all the races existing in any considerable number on this continent.

Indian Affairs. From the N. Y. Tribune. The tenor of all our news from the Indian country of late has been discouraging. Latest advices are so minute and full, and show so irresistibly the existence of a cruel and devastating war on the part of the Indians, that we feel called upon to revise our judgment, and insist upon rigorous measures of repression. We must have peace and order. We must take the tomahawk and scalping-knife from the Indian before we conclude our measures of justice. The savages appear to have risen in small parties simultaneously all over the West.

while Mr. Rollins has put it as high as 240 millions. Assuming the Secretary's estimates for customs, lands, and all other sources to be correct, the deficit would thus be just 80 millions; and admitting that the expenditures would not exceed, in all, 372 millions, instead of realizing a surplus of 9 millions, as estimated by him, the deficit would be 71 millions. We waive consideration of the estimates of Mr. Rollins and Mr. Wells.

"split upon the Constitution," but openly to deride it, and to laugh in the face of every honest man who appeals to it. So defiant are the newspapers, and so contemptuous of the spirit and intelligence of the people! The time comes apace to determine whether the people deserve that contempt. We do not read the old fires of freedom burning as brightly in the North and East and West as they did in the best days of the republic, and of the history of a blood that tells but one story from the days of the Barons down through the Hampdens to the present era. The American Constitution cannot die without a struggle. So enormous a political change was never yet made without the effusion of blood. We, therefore, only await the inevitable when we repeat, "The Constitution or revolution."

These are the latest illustrations of the unfitness of one whose whole political career, as General Dix remarked, "has been in nothing more conspicuously marked than in an utter infirmity of purpose." Such a man may be the best available instrument of the Southern extremists, who made General Blair his associate on the ticket, but he is certainly not qualified to guard the interests and uphold the honor of the country in its great emergency.

What then, does Mr. Pendleton mean when he says "shall see that Texas is represented?" Should Congress cast out the vote Texas submitted on this pledge, how does Mr. Pendleton propose to "see that Texas is represented?" His letter is dated August 21, and from Bangor, in Maine, but that was several weeks before the Maine election. He thought, perhaps, at the time that there was a good prospect for Seymour, and that if the voters of the unconquered States would elect him it would be well to have them ready. But what then? Mr. Pendleton must have meant that the refusal of Congress to count those votes would bring President Johnson, as Commander-in-chief of the army, down upon the two houses in the role of Cromwell.

Inferior Races Not Wanted. From the Richmond Whig. We consider every proposition looking to the introduction of inferior races into this country, as laborers, whether from Africa or Asia, as impolitic and dangerous. If the North American States are to hold supremacy and rise to the pinnacle of national fame as being the most powerful government on earth and doing most for the exaltation of mankind, it can only be because the people belong to the highest race of men—that they are the best of that noble type of our order, the Caucasian. In proportion as we mix up with our population the inferior races we shall impair our national force and diminish our chances for achieving that grand destiny which will certainly be the fate of this country if left to the unmixered rule and energies of the Caucasian race.

The Depression of the Revenue. From the N. Y. World. If substantial proof is wanted of the injury which ill-advised legislation has inflicted upon the industrial interests of the country, it may be had in the unprecedented depression of the internal revenue. Of late, for days and days together, the receipts have summed up the discouraging average of about $250,000, and on one day last week they fell as low as $193,000. The time has been when such a sum would have thrown the bureau officers at Washington into a panic. To comprehend the startling smallness of the figures, it is but necessary to reflect that they represent a whole day's receipts of public dues throughout the entire country, from Maine to the Gulf of Mexico, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The Constitution or Revolution. Don't be alarmed at this caption, ye who are afraid to open your mouths so much as to chirp, lest radical liars by speech and pen follow their calling and wallow in their inevitable mire. This caption is at bottom, and should be boldly pronounced and on top, the key-note of the struggle for the liberty of the nation, with usurpers and Constitution-breakers. We say it should be, otherwise the American people have ceased to deserve to be free.
