WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1868.

The Supreme Court and Naturalization. This morning, as will be seen elsewhere in our paper, Justice Sharswood, after hearing argument on the subject of the publication of the lists of naturalized citizens, their residences and vouchers, granted the necessary rule on the Prothonotary to allow access to his books. Mr. Snowden expressed his entire willingness, and we will at once commence the publication in THE EVENING TELEGRAPH of these most important lists. The value of these lists are fully appreciated by his Honor, and he very properly stated that he deemed it of great public importance that they should be made public. It seems hardly necessary for us to lay before intelligent readers the reasons which make these documents of such value.

In the first place, by the publication of these lists, with the residences, the executive committees of each precinct will see exactly who have been naturalized in their precinct, and will be enabled to investigate the legality of the so-called citizens. They can see if they have resided the one year in the State required by law, or if they have been imported from New York for the purpose of casting a vote. They will be enabled to find out the perjurers (of whom we have good cause to believe there are several thousand), and as soon as they present themselves will have them arrested. We know that in that case the Republican Executive Committee intend not only to arrest but to prosecute to conviction these criminals; so that some of them, at least, will get their deserts.

In the second place, the names of the vouchers being made public will enable the law officers to see who have been vouching for these patriots by the wholesale. When we find the same name appearing as voucher for a score or so of foreigners, coming from different nations, we will know there is perjury, and can take steps towards punishing the men who would thus make cheap the rights of an American citizen. All this will be gained by the publication of these lists, and they will be laid before our readers with all speed.

We cannot commend too highly the action of Justice Sharswood in this matter. We cannot state that it causes any surprise, for his reputation for honesty has been unquestioned and unquestionable; but he might, like some judges, have delayed the settlement of the case until it was too late to accomplish any good results. But by his prompt action, in so decisive a manner, we see that he desires heartily to have the frauds detected. It is but just to Mr. Snowden to say that he professed his willingness to do all he could to aid in the publication of the list, as soon as the Court intimated that it was best for him so to Vance on Scalawags, Dogs, and War. WHEN Moses blessed the children of Israel before his death, of Zebulon he said, "Rejoice in thy going out !" This benediction is sup posed to have had no reference whatever to the case of Zebulon Vance, sometime Rebel Governor of North Carolina, for Vance has determined "not to go out." In truth, he is quite as rampant as he was in the days before Appomattox. "Hell! blood! fury! thunder!" ory the radicals, according to Zebulon, "You are disloyal! you mean war!" While we repudiate the expletives of the irate ex-Governor, we contess that he comes very near the mark in what follows them. Zebulon "means war." If he does not mean war, what does he mean when he exclaims:-"I, Zebulon Vance, don't intend to live in a land where I am disfranchised, and I don't intend to leave it!" What does Zebulon propose to do, if he does not propose to fight? If he were familiar with the Scriptures he would take up his earpet-bag and depart with our blessing. But he evidently is not well read in Holy Writ, and he declares that he will neither live in a land where he is disfranchised, nor leave it. Then he must either die the death, or fight for his worthless life. For, as matters now stand, there is no prospect of his being enfranchised. He is too bloodthirsty for the ballot. Yet he longs for it, yearns for it, begs for it. Although lineally descended from his own grandfather-Zebulon asserts this remarkable circumstance as a positive fact, and we do not care to question it-although he has been governor, and "worn the first honors," he can't vote. And he don't intend to leave. Hence his mind is unsettled, and he divulges the fact that "the negro is naturally an aristocrat, and hates a scalawag." From all of which we inter that Zebulon regards himself as a scalawag, or something worse. But for all this disrepute, he don't intend to leave. "Did you ever burn a dog's nose with a cigar ?" cries Zebulon again. No? Well, Zebulon has tried the experiment, and observed the curious result. 'Every time he sees you he'll tuck his tail and travel"-the dog, not Zebulon, for Zebulon declares that he "den't intend to leave." Thunder! fury and blood! man, you must mean war!

Historic Doubts.

It seems a pity that after having becom amiliarized with the idea that certain charfacters have been heroic and others despicable, we should be obliged to reverse in many instances our verdicts, and in other cases have all our fond beliefs converted into doubts; but such is the flat of historic research; everything is undergoing a severe sliting, the most trifling as well as the most important event tal accession.

of history is now investigated with a rigor to which olden times can offer no comparison. Motions for new hearings are now constantly being made. Whether the new verdicts will stand is another question.

Nero, whom we were all accustomed to regard as synonymous with wickedness, has received a very fine coat of whitewashing of late years, and the story that his grave was frequently covered with flowers is by no means overlooked in those who ask for a favorable opinion of his character. Henry VIII, frequently designated as the wife-killer, has also been taken in hand, and another and quite different idea of his character given by M. Froude. A nice contention is even yet going on between the adherents, or rather the admirers, of Mary, Queen of Scotland, and her opponents-the discovery of some letters of hers in a casket, now generally admitted to be genuine, having imparted a more favorable opinion. Julius Cæsar, taken hold of by Louis Napoleon, who, to a certain extent, inculcates Bonapartism, or rather a justification for sundry acts of Bonapartism by parallelisms with that period of Roman history, is also undergoing a severe investigation from which some good to historical truth may yet result. So difficult is the truth of history to be got at that if ever the allegations against certain historians are true that they sometimes sacrifice a little for effect, we think there is abovedant cause for thankfulness even for this; for we must get some truth, some real facts of history in the midst of this fine word painting.

If we reflect on the difficulties of attaining a correct account of what is passing sometimes under our eyes, we think the worth of our ob servation is evident. When Sir Walter Raleigh was writing his history of the world in the Tower, happening to hear a disturbance outside he asked the cause. All his informants told the story differently. He was so disappointed that he threw down his pen, saying it was impossible to write a correct history of the world when it was impossible to get a correct account of what is passing under my own observation. Even some of the sayings of history which have become household words, merciless investigation has shown to be fables. Thus the famous La Garde ("La Garde menrte et ne se rend pas") attributed to Cambronne at Waterloo, was a few years ago, shown by a Frenchman to have been inserted by a M. Rougement, and published in the pages of the Indépendant. Talleyrand's saying that speech was given to man to conceal his thoughts," has been traced to Voltaire in one of his dialogues, and also a couplet by Young:-

"When nature's end of language is disguised, And men talk only to conceal their mind," a similar saying, is to be found in "Southy's Sermons," and in Goldsmith's "Citizen of the World." The younger Pitt was for a long time supposed to have said on his dying bed-'O, my country !" Lord Macaulay says it is certainly a fable. One of the wittiest of Talleyrand's sayings, that Louis Philippe having asked Talleyrand if he suffered; "Yes, like the damned," Deja? which the dying man revenged by giving to some one near him some startling revelations. Yet the same repartee is contained in one of Le Brun's epigrams, and has been attributed, among others, to the physician of Cardinal de Retz.

Everybody has heard of the words of the Abbe Edgeworth to Louis XVI on the scaffold: "Son of St. Louis, ascend to heaven"-and yet when the late Lord Holland asked the Abbe he told him that he had no recollection of having said them! Even "the pretty story of the English and French commanders bowing to each other and saying, "You commence firing first, sir," has been despoiled of its romance. The Duke of Wellington's "Up, Guards, and at them !" was also never uttered. He said so, we are told by the Chaplain-General, to the 85th Regiment, "You must keep your ground, my lads, for there is nothing behind you."

It seems hard, but even the verses attributed to Mary, Queen of Scots, beginning, 'Adieu, adieu, plaisant pays de France!' which all romantically inclined people so much admire, have by the perseverance of diligent inquirers been brought home to a M. de Querton. The dreadful last crossing over the "Bridge of Sighs," so profitable to the writers of the grotesque and horrible, is also undergoing considerable revision, and a palace and a prison on each band, disenchanted of much of its old fearful romance.

Richard the Third has been, by the active exertions of many recent explorers, relieved of the hump on his back, and also of a great deal of the wickedness imputed to him; but if we go on in this strain, example on example crowd on us so rapidly that we shall hardly know when to stop. So we shall reserve a great deal more of like gossip for a future

THE SUPREME COURT VACANCY .- Now that Governor Geary is in the city, we beg leave to urge him to at once fill the vacancy on the bench of the Supreme Court created by the resignation of Judge Strong. The exigencies of the situation demand that this vacancy should be filled at once, and we doubt not but that the unanimous choice of the Republican party of the State, if it could be tested, would point to the Hon. Henry W. Williams, of the Allegheny County District Court, as the proper person to be elevated to the bench. Judge Williams was the chosen leader of the party in the contest of 1867, and if none but the legal voters of Luzerne county had gone to the polls, he would now be on the bench. He is a man of deep and thorough culture, a lawyer of large experience, a jurist whose decisions have attained a wide celebrity for their impartial justice and intrinsic merits as exponents of the present state of the unwritten law. In every essential required for the proper discharge of the duties of the position he is fully qualified, and we trust that, before the end of the present week, he will be placed upon the bench, to which he will prove a useful and ornamen-

TO THE CITIZENS OF PHILADEL PHIA.

During the National Convention of the "Roys in Blue," about to tassemble here, will be a grand procession, in which all the soldiers will desire to take part. Among the strangers who come to us as guest there will be a number who have lost a limb in the defense of the nation. In order that these patriots may not be debarred from participating in the demon stration, the following gentlemen have been at pointed a committee to solicit from our citizens the use of ambulances, private carriages, or other con-
