The Death-bed Repentance of the Democracy.

In the last hours of the Rebellion, after the Confederacy had vainly robbed the oradle and the grave to sustain its drooping cause, it was reported that, as a final expedient, Jefferson Davis had resolved to arm the negroes to defend Dixie. Going to war to preserve, perpetuate, and extend slavery, and to establish a new government with slavery as its cornerstone, the baffled leaders did not disdain, in the hour of their desperation, the despicable expedient of begging the aid of the race they had most deeply injured. The proposition, however, came too late; and before any serious efforts had been made to recruit the Rebel arnsies from the ranks of the freedmen, the irresistible and invincible Grant throttled the Confederate serpent at Appomattox, and sent its leader forth a fugitive from Richmond, to be ingloriously captured disguised in woman's apparel.

The proposition which is agitated among the Democracy of changing their candidates on the eve of the election is as desperate a device as the proposed enrolment of negro troops by the Confederacy, and it will meet with no better fate. It is upon its face a confession of impending disaster and defeat, as well as an acknowledgment that the party, through its National Convention, committed a blunder. Whatever may be the result of the present cogitations, they cannot fail to inflict still further damage upon a desperate cause. A political organization that competes for the control of the American Government must be sadly deficient in common sense, patriand capacity to discharge otism. the public duty it desires to undertake, if it cannot act judicionsly in the National Couvention where its sages are assembled, free from outside interference, and where it enjoys every possible opportunity to arrive at correct decisions. The fact that the Democracy, through their chosen representatives, are unable to wisely govern themselves, or to properly direct their own affairs, is one of the strongest arguments that could be adduced of their unfitness to control the country. After days of deliberation, preceded by many months of elaborate discussion, they selected candidates who are now admitted to be obnoxions, and devised a platform which is dephatically condemned by the American people in the recent election had previously been unanimously agreed upon by the Democratic National Convention, and that any defects in that action are due to the fact that it faithfully represented the average and aggregate views of the Democratic party as it is now constituted. The issues of the campaign were presented with an unusual degree of fairness and fullness by the Chicago and Nov York Conventions, the battle has been fought on these issues up to this time, and the people will "fight it out on this line if it takes all summer." If Seymour and Blair should be withdrawn from the field now, the Democracy can gain no benefit from a change of leaders at this late period. Such a manœuvre wou'd rob them of their last hold upon the confidence of intelligent men. It would be at once a confession of incompetency and incapacity, and a direct insult to the voters of the nation. The latter have an indefeasible right to demand from every party seeking their support that its Presidential candidates shall be placed in the field at a period early enough to have their characters and records subjected to a rigid sorutiny, and they would indignantly spurn a partisan policy which would ignore the useful rule which has hitherto been universally observed. Besides, who is to select the new candidates? Ordinarily the Democracy are too often blindly led hither and thither by their leaders, but the contemplated scheme would leave them without any voice at all in the choice of their candidates, and even the limit of Democratic endurance would be reached by this unblushing outrage. Above all things the American people despise cowardice and unworthy truckling for success. If the New York National Convention acted wisely, its action should of course be sustained, but if it acted unwisely, nothing can be more craven-hearted, after its proceedings have been "ratified" and endorsed and glorified by every Democratic and Rebel organization in the land, than to suddenly discover that these proceedings were all a sham, and to desert, on the eve of battle, the candidates on whom so much praise has been lavished. If the Democracy do not wish to forfeit all claims to respect, they must make the best of their blunders, and start off on their voyage up Salt River with their Seymour flag still flying.

vouching for was one John O'Brien. Yesterday O'Brien swore that he never saw or knew Watson, and that he was not vouched for at all. It is certainly a coincidence worthy of notice, and one which enables us to judge of the fitness of Mr. Thompson to be Chief Jus tice, that the very case thus so thoroughly exposed was the one in which he refused the rule prayed for, saying that there was no fraud.

"Away with Them !"

TAULY there is but one step from the Capitol to the Tarpeian Rock-but one slight chauge from the demigod to the demagogue. But yesterday and Seymour might have stood against the world, so far as Democracy was concerned. To-day the World, with great prospects of success, stands against him. With the rise of Tuesday's sun all of the faithful went forth to do homage to Seymour and Blair; but Wednesday found the "idols broken in the Temple of Baal." Nowhere in all the political history of this or any other land do we see a case of such utter demoralization, such fearful fleeing away from judgment, as is evinced by the Democratic party over the result of the Ostober elections. No two of them stand steadfast together. They fly as they fied at Appomattox; they seek refuge in every artifice or even abandonment of all show of courage or steadfastness. We had said before that the Democracy desired only power: that they sought only for the plunder of office. This is proved to-day by their proposed desertion of the very men whom they have almost deified as patriots and statesmen. But all attempt at change comes too late, and will only make the death-bed hideous, without prolonging the patient's life.

An Assassin for Vice-President.

THE degradation and desperation to which Mr. Frank P. Blair was reduced by the elections of Tuesday can be a good excuse for a great deal of rancor on his part. He could have denounced our party with fine effect, he could have been excused indulging in oaths and cursing over even a little too much of that article bearing the name of a royal family of France: but there are some lengths which even the certainty of humiliating defeat will not allow a man to go. Into one of these extremes Mr. Blair went. Last night in St. Louis he countenanced the assassination of General Grant in case of his election.

In his speech he said, "a military dictatorship would be established, and Grant would never leave the Presidential mansion alive." Now this may have two meanings attached to it. It may mean that Grant will remove there for life, and that by this meaning he will never leave the Presidential chair, or else it may mean that Grant must be removed by death, and that evidently not from natural causes. We care not which interpretation is put upon this atrocious statement by the reader, the fact that Mr. Blair should utter a sentiment capable of such a nonnced by every patriotic man. Let it be double meaning is enough for the American remembered that the action which was em- people. He knew when he uttered that infamons sentence that there were men in the ranks of the Democracy who would construe it to mean "assassinate," and would, in all probability, be willing instruments. He knew this, and yet he gave them a color for such a plan. He lent it his countenance, and while he may seek to explain away his sentiments by a sybelline arrangement of his words, he cannot free himself from the fearful responsibility which he has assumed. And to that responsibility the people will hold him to a strict account.

a chill and sense of desolation over the aud which the most spirited performance is sca able to remove.

But will the best style of dramatic enter ments pay? We certainly think so, proeverything is really first-class. The reason the legitimate drams is so often performe beggarly account of empty benches, while miserable concoction of a sensation; playw which depends entirely upon scener; mechanical effects, fills the house night night, is that the legitimate dramas are us produced in such wretched style that in gent playgoers are disposed to forego the tres altogether whenever they see on them mangled. One of Suakespeare's dies is announced, for instance, and we fi witnessing it that the attraction is not play itself, but in the performance of star actor who assumes the leading role, and cuts and alters the play to give his own | prominence which does not rightfully b to it, while the other characters are sust by people who have "neither the acce Christians, nor the gait of Christian, pagar man." There are some persons who would n see an entire play reasonably well perfor with all the characters represented by s of fair ability, than to have all the honors ried off by the "star," while the "nature's neymen" mangle the poetry in a style that one's teeth on edge. At the Arch, a few ago, we had an example of what good a will do to make staudard plays popular during the comedy week at that theatre houses were crowded overy evening, an expressions of satisfaction were univ Some of the characters in the plays the sented we have occasionally seen better but, taking the performances in their ent they were superior to anything of the that has been seen in this city for many a Broad street is just the place for a new th of the kind proposed, and Miss Laura Ke just the person to have the charge of it, believe that a good stock company or secured, but even with actors of me ability good management can do wonder we are not mistaken, the new theatre will positive benefit to those we already has operation, by inciting them to greater than ever to bring out plays in good style believe that it will supply a desideratum if it is conducted in the manner now con plated, its success, as a pecuniary specul is an assured thing. This matte worthy of the attention of all who look really good entertainments as means for vating the public taste and as important liaries for the promotion of good morals we commend it to the consideration of ou zens, with the hope that every encourage will be given to those who have the enter in haud. The taste for the drama is as now as it ever was, but we have a large c intelligent and weathy play goets in Pa phia who only go to the theatre when the reasonably certain of seeing a good thin who will not support poor plays poorly Let our new theatre give us good play good acting and it will be crowded to over ing nightly.

A Coincidence.

CHIEF JUSTICE THOMPSON refused a rule on certain parties vouched for by one manseventy-two in all-to show cause why their papers of naturalization should not be cancelled, because, he said, he "believed that the man did honestly wouch for and know all the parties, and that there was nothing to prevent one man knowing even one hundred men and youching for them." The man who was accused by the petitionars of the orime of per. jury was James A. Watson, and among the men whom he was accused of fraudulently

JUDGE KELLEY has received and accepted an invitation to be present at the grand Republican rally which is to take place at Knoxville. Tennessee, on the 22d inst. It is intended that this meeting will be the greatest ever held in East Tennessee, and several prominent statesmen from the North will participate in it. Judge Kelley will start for the West in a day or two, and will deliver addresses at other points, as well as at Knoxville.

THE reëlection of Judge Hare by a majority of twenty-five votes over and above the thonsands of fraudulent ballots which were manufactured by Mr. Sharswood's tipstaves is a gratifying fact. When the question of fraud is definitely settled by the courts, there will be several other facts made patent of a character equally gratifying.

A New Theatre on Broad Street. THERE has been considerable talk of late about the erection of a new theatre on Broad street, to be placed under the management of Miss Laura Keene. The idea has generally been received with much favor, and, indeed, the only argument used against it has been that it will not pay. This of course can only be proved by ex perience. The house will certainly be built, and we think that it will pay. The proposed theatre is to be of moderate size, so that every person in the audience can hear and see all that transpires on the stage without difficulty. It is to be chaste and elegant in its decorations, comfort. able, and is to be devoted to the best style of performances by the best stock company that can be got together. With regard to Miss Laura Kcene's ability and taste as a manager there can be but one opinion; and if any one can, she will make the enterprise a success.

It is a mistake to suppose that we have too many theatres in Philadelphia already. In a city of 800,000 inhabitants it ought to be easy to support twice the number of places of amusement that we have at present, and if the entertainments are first class, they will be supported liberally, without a shadow of a doubt. That the Chesnut Street Theatre has not succeeded ought not to be used as an argument against building another place for dramatic entertainments The reasons for the failure of the Chesnut are numerous, and not the least of them is that the auditorium is barnlike and uncomfortable, the decorations are in the worst possible taste, and the whole arrangement o the interior makes it an eyesore to every person who may be at all fastidious about harmony. proportion, and other architectural nicelies. We never go to the Chesnut but that we spend a greater portion of the evening in thinking how we would like to tear out the whole interior of the building and construct it over again on a better mcdel. The proscenium is the uglies' contrivance of the kind we have ever seen, and the whole aspect of the place is such as to throw
