The Leasl Condition of the Repubhean Party. THE correspondence published this morning between Attorney-General Brewster, City Solicitor Lynd, and Sheriff Lyle will attract general attention, and the steps which are about being taken to check the Sheriff in his illegal action will merit the hearty commendation of the public. The experience of the past few weeks has enabled the people to judge of what means talk and what means work, so far as the leaders of our party are concerned; and when it is remembered that the only practical step towards saving the Republican party from fraud was made by the Attorney-General and his associates, they will be glad to see that Mr. Brewster is moving in the matter. The public have confidence that when he is in charge neither stupidity nor corruption will enter the case. It is, therefore, with great gratification that it is seen that he is watching the Sheriff, and preparing to hold him to a striot responsibility for all his actions. The tone adopted by Mr. Lyle is about fifty degrees lower than that which he assumed two weeks ago. He sees that he is in great danger; that his sureties are liable and likely to suffer; and that it is a decidedly unpleasant thing to be brought before the Supreme Court on a quo warranto, a writ exceedingly summary in its nature, and which, when moved for by the Attorney-General, means a summary settlement of his alleged rights. The city need,

The question of the legality of the naturalisation papers issued by the Supreme Court is one which should be settled, and we are happy to know that the Attorney-General will proceed to Pittsburg during the ensuing week and in person give his attention to this question. In comparison with the settlement of that question the contest of individuals sinks into utter insignificance, as the one affects only the pockets of a few-the other the safety therefore, fear nothing further from Mr.

Lyle; and the only question is in regard to the propriety of prosecuting that person for past of an entire State. For the first time in the history of Philadelphis has a systematized effort been made at the last election to govern our city by the importation of ruffians from New York and Baltimore, and the regular adoption of a plan of "repeating" at different polls. This is, we say, the first time that such a thing has been attempted on a scale to be worthy of attention. The issue is now presented for the people of Philadelphia to settle whether they shall always in the future submit to importation, our city franchise turned into a faro or whether, by a series of vigorous prosecutions both of the rascals at home and by requisitions from the Governor for the rascals from abroad, strike terror among them and deter a repetition. If half a dozen men from Baltimore and a like number from New York were had on requisition and prosecuted with spirit and ability, the effect on this city would last for the next ten years. If a hundred of the "repeaters" of our own city were thus treated, it would for a lifetime deter them in the future. Shall this be done? Will it be done? If the funds which our citizens are being asked to give liberally are placed in the hands of a certain "ring," we say without hesitation that not a man of these ruffians will ever be convicted. It must be given into the hands of men who are above reproach, and who are not the intimates of the Fourth ward gaug. It must be remembered that, after November 1, Furman Sheppard, Esq., a Democrat, will be District Attorney; and if we would have any of the roughs prosecuted some one must act whose power is superior to that officer's. It is well to remember, also, that the Attorney-General is the ranking District Attorney of the State, and can enter the Quarter Sessions and pass bills directly over the head of the District Attorney of the county; so that the Republican party has still within its control an office which will prevent an unlawful influence being used by the District Attorney, even if he was so inclined; but from what we know of Mr. Sheppard we do not think he is. Let us then have the frauds prosecuted with vigor, and let us ful to contemplate.

by an example deter wrong-doers in the future and save our city from a fate which it is fear-

The Wily Johnson. THE PRESIDENT IS "sly, devilish sly," as Joey Bagstook says. His whole course proves how deep he is. What penetration! What a head! His little proclamation to Horatio Saymour, published this morning, shows the ounning of the man. He has had the Intelligencer denouncing Seymour as long as he thought it possible to drive him out of the field. As soon as he finds he cannot succeed, he issues his "bull" canonizing Horatio; so that all his influence and all the weight of his great opinions are to-day for Seymour. Poor Horatio! What grievous sin has he committed that requires him to bear Johnson along with him in the campaign?

But while the depth of this model Richelieu is thus shown, he shows a treachery without precedent. What does he congratulate Seymour on doing and urge him to go on with ? Hear what he says:-

"I see it arnounced in the papers this morning that you will enter the Presidential canvass in person. I trust this may be so. The present position of public affairs justifies and demands it. It is hoped and believed by your prouds that all the casmiss of constitutional government, whether secret or armed, will not be spared, and that their arbitrary naurpation-, together with their wasteful, proflig its, and corrupt uses of the people's resources, will be signally exposed and rebuked."

What is this he wants Seymour to do To swing around the circle like he did two years ago. This is the animus of the letter. This is the thorn in his side, the poison in the draught. He remembers how he was received, and now seeks to sacrifice Seymour in the most effectual way. After this we cannot but believe that the Intelligencer spoke the truth, and that Johnson is the bitterest enemy at heart that the Democratic nominee has.

The Democratic Hell-Broth. ME. W. CHOPPUT contributes to Harper's Weekly the following parody of Shakespeare, illustrated by the figures of Seymour, Hamp ton, and Blair, gathered about a caldron labelled "C. S. A." and "K. K. K. "-

"Double, double, toll and trouble, Fire burn and caldron babble, Round about the heil-broth go, in the motley fragments throw "Hand of Treason, recking red "Hand of Treason, recking red Poison-fanz of Copperhead,
Tongue and lip of perjured Lee,
Bitter tear of relugee,
Curse of planter, prayer of slave,
Biossom from a martyr's grave,
Rod of 'Moses,' which he lost
When he pardoned Pananon's host,
Skull of prisoner at Fort Pillow,
Blood of freedmen at Cambia,
Hampton's torch, Fred. Dangtass' fetter,
Booth's revolver, Blair's letter,

With a weird and bissing sound
Rocks the caldron round and round,
And he cries, "I'ls very good!
Lo! the cup of Brothernood!"

Post Prandial Diplomacy.

MINISTER Reverdy Johnson has been in England scarcely three months, and during that time he has eaten more public dinners than his predecessor did during the six or seven years in which he represented the United States at the English Court, and he has made more public speeches than all the American Ministers together from the time of John Jay. Mr. Adams, it is true, was under a cloud; it was his duty to uphold the credit and honor of his country during the darkest hour of her peril; to oppose, in season and out of season, the sullen anti-Americanism of the British Government, that was only prevented from breaking out into open hostility by allowing the "I dare not wait upon I would," to demand reparation for outrages and perpetrated upon American commerce by British-built, British-armed, and Britishmanned cruisers, with the connivance and hearty good-will of the British Government and the British ruling classes. Mr. Reverdy Johnson appears in England under more favorable auspices; the American Republic has come out of the satanic contest of the Rebellion triumphant in spite of British prophecies of defeat and extinguishment, and it now claims the fear as well as the respect of English ill-wishers. Mr. Johnson finds the English Government and people disposed to make terms of amity, but with as little sacrifice on their part as possible of the traditional British policy of "keep all you have and get all you Mr. Johnson apparently has more to ear from British "soft soap" than he has from British churlishness and hostility. The line of policy pursued in his case has apparently been as successful as his entertainers could desire, and innumerable good dinners have put him in a complaisant and happy frame of mind, that predisposes him to grant everything and ask nothing.

Mr. Johnson, at his speech in Liverpool on Thursday, proceeded to "lay bare his whole heart," which reminds us of a would-be diplomatist who not long ago "took his heart in his hand." Let us hope that the one will be more successful than the other. Mr. Johnson, having laid bare his heart, informed his hearers that the peace of the two countries was not likely to be disturbed; that two great points of dispute had already been settled upon terms honorable to both countries; that the third would soon be settled, and that thus would be annihilated all peril of a rupture of friendly relations. The two points which have already been arranged are, we suppose, the question of expatriation, what is commonly known as the "breeches question," by which the American Ministers in future will be able to appear at Court in the guise of Christians, without being obliged to exhibit their attenuated calves to the ridicule of an assembled multitude, and the third question yet to be arranged is that of the Alabama claims. It would be eminently satisfactory to know that this vexatious matter was about to be definitely adjudicated to the satisfaction of all parties; but we have more than a shadow of a doubt that Mr. Johnson's diplomacy will not be received with favor in Congress or among the American people. We all know what trouble Mr. Adams had to get British Government to sider these claims at all, and the facility with which Mr. Johnson has fixed matters up is certainly creditable to him, if all is as we would have it; but, under the circumstances, it is open to a suspicion that he has laid bare his breast under the influence of good cheer to an extent that will induce him to grant more than we will be willing to give. We demand full and sufficient payment for the damage done to American commerce by the Alabama, and we should not consent to anything short of this. If Mr. Johnson cannot obtain an acknowledgment from the British Government of its responsibility for these claims, and of its willingness to pay the money due on them, he had better close up his breast again, come home, and allow some one of a more determined spirit to take his place.

As a usual thing, post-praudial declarations are not of much value, and post-prandial diplomacy is not apt to give the greatest amount of satisfaction to those who are not under the benign influences of turtle and claret. Now

Mr. Johnson's diplomacy seems to have been mostly of the post-prandial kind, and on that account we hesitate to accept it as conclusive. We heartily second his wishes for a perpetual peace between the United States and England, but we do not believe in the "peace at any price" dootrine; and while we accept the issue of a war as a misfortune, we do not consider it as the greatest misfortune that could befall us, and this fact we think it well that the British people and Government should be well assured of. In vino est veritas as a general rule is open to exceptions, and the following declaration of Lord Stanley, at the Liverpool banquet, on Thursday, shows him to be a diplomatist even after dinner:-

"It is a settled principle in England to respect we hest as well as the stronges, as scrupulously see maintain our own, to study and preserve, in the first instance, the peace of England; next to that, as far as lies in our power, the peace of Europe and the civilized world; to see he peace of earners and the civilized world; to see he peace of earners and the civilized world; to see he peace of earners and the civilized world; to see he peace of earners and the civilized world; to see he peace of earners and the civilized world; to see he peace of earners and the civilized world; to see he peace of earners and the civilized world; to see he peace of earners and the civilized world; to see he peace of earners and the civilized world; to see he peace of earners and the civilized world; to see he peace of earners and the civilized world; to see he peace of earners and the civilized world. world: to seek no narrow, no selfish, no exclu-sive object, but to construct that even our ma-terial interests are indissolably connected with bese neighboring nations, who are at once our neighbors and our customers; in points of honer, not too hastly or impetuously resent any real or imagined wrong, but rather to willingly submit to the discussionate arbitra-tion of some competent tribunat."

History will scarcely sustain Lord Stanley in the above statements, but they are valuable as indications that the distinguished head of the Foreign Office has not opened his heart to the same extent as Mr. Johnson, but that he still keeps an eye open for the main chance, even after dinner.

To-Night.-Let every Republican, young or old, be present to-night at Concert Hall. The meeting this evening means work, and it is not an idle display of buncombe. It is time that there should be infused into the feeble management of the Republican party some blood, for the system is about exhausted The people demand honesty and vigor, and will have it. When we say that the Hon. Benjamin Harris Brewster will make the speech of the campaign, we say no more than all the people know who have heard that gentleman.

THE "OLD OAKS" DEMETERY

Is situated on the Township Line road, at the intersection of Nicciown lave, and emoraces Sixty-aloc Acres of romantically beauti'ul in :d. It is the estat; known for may years as "Old Oaks," late the coun try seat of John Tucker, Esq.

The name is taken from the great number and un panal thrift and beauty of the majestic "Olf Oak" trees now growing on the property, and which lend to it a charm and appearance of permanency peculiarly in harmony with the purposes to which the ground

No better selection of a location for a Cemetery could have been made. All the advantages possessed by each of the other Cemeterl, a are combined in this. It is central in situation, and easily accessible by good roads from all directions; it is perfec ly convenient to and is but a sport distance from Germantown Manyunk, Nicetown, Frankford, and Bridesburg, and can be reached from all parts of the City of Philadelphia by means of Broad street, which is now the most attractive and commanding in appearance of any avenue not only in this city, but in the whole cour try, and which is free from those interrop lons and delays which render private travel on most of our highways not only disagreeable but often dangerous

It extends for long distances on both Nicetown ane and the Township Line road, and will have three main and ornamental gateways, so as to afford facilities for ingress and egress from all directions, and the drives through the place, and all the approaches to I are so arranged that its embell shments and superior advantages cannot fall to be at once seen and appreclated by the visitor.

It is the intention of the proprietors to make "Old Oaks" the most beautiful Cemetery in America, and the artificial decorations, the takes, drives, walks, and horticultural ornamentation will give it an appearance unsurpassed by any other ever brought to public notice, and will tend to allay the feeling of gloom often caused by the sombre and funereal aspect so prevalent in Cemeteries generally.

The Buildings on the property are well known as the most costly and handsome over crected by private capital. The Mausion will be used in part as a Chapel, and the surroundings beautified in keeping with the character of the place; in a word, the Pro prictors wish to do away with the feeling of reputsive ness so often associated with Graveyards and Charnel Houses, and hold out every Inducement to the friends and relatives of the departed to visit the grounds which con'ain relics so precious to them. The' Old Gaks" will be made an object of interest to trangers, as well as residents of Philadelphia, and while the solemnity of the scene will not be violated. yet the impression will be conveyed that death is mere separation, and that those who have fought "life's battle" are only resting from their labors, and are always kept alive in the memory of their survivors. The grounds will be open to Visitors at all hours during the day. The office of the Company is at SILVERWARE, JEWELRY, ETC.

SOLID SILVER

The increasing demand for Elegant and Artistic Silve Wares has decided us t open our New Establishmen with a larger and superio stock to any hitherto shows in Philadelphia, and with that view have taken the SPECIAL ACENCY for the Sterling Solid Silver Wares of the CORHAM MANUFAC TURING COMPANY.

The Silver Wares of this justly celebrated Company are now universally acknowledged to be superior in quality, good taste, and finish to any Silver Coods produced in this country.

Every desirable Silver Article manufactured by the COR-HAM MANUFACTURING COMPANY will be found in our cases, and a succession of future novelties has been arranged for as fast as they can be made from time to
