

Evening Telegraph

PUBLISHED EVERY AFTERNOON (SUNDAYS EXCEPTED). AT THE EVENING TELEGRAPH BUILDING, NO. 108 & THIRD STREET.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1868.

On our fifth page to-day we present a series of election statistics more complete, we believe, than any which have ever appeared in a daily journal heretofore.

The Rebel Spirit. It is sometimes a disadvantage, but often a great and positive benefit, that liberty of speech and a free press prevent any set of politicians or any political party from concealing their real intentions and ideas from the people at large.

During the present political campaign some of the Democratic leaders at the North have endeavored to represent their candidates and the principles of their platform in a light that would deceive the loyal people of the country as to the real intentions of the party in case they obtained a victory.

The Southern Rebel press, too, have declared their views on the situation in the plainest and most unmistakable manner. They hope for the election of Seymour and Blair as the means by which they will regain their lost position of influence and power.

The Mobile Tribune, speaking of the prospects of the Democratic party since the October elections, says: "The election of Seymour and Blair cannot restore a Union which never really existed in name."

This is the true Rebel ideal: the snake is scotched, not killed; and we shudder to think what will be the condition of the Southern States if again men as the writer of the above paragraph obtain power and influence in the management of national affairs.

The August Constitutionalist lets the cat out of the bag in the following: "General Blair struck the true issue of the campaign in his Broadhead letter, and although some foolish Democrats have sought to apologize for or explain its direct utterances, they would have exhibited far more wisdom had they pushed his idea aggressively on every stump in the East and West."

But the South could not and would not keep silent, and so every intelligent and patriotic citizen will be able to go to the polls on Tuesday next with a full understanding of the real issues of the election, and that the success of the Democratic ticket means four years of anarchy, discord, and perhaps another civil war.

We commend the following from the Tazewell Register, the Copperhead paper of Tazewell county, Illinois, to those Union soldiers who may contemplate voting for Seymour and Blair: "What sort of Republicanism is that which would honor General Thomas, Sheridan, and Meade, and degrade Generals Forrest and Hampton?"

The Democratic party. We are proud of them, and we present them with confidence to the people of the North, and we say, "Here are our trophies!" They are worth all the banners, and carpet-baggers, and negro militia, and tax collectors, and petty military tyrants, and greasy contractors, and fat bondholders, that a corrupt Congress can manufacture between this and tomorrow.

These examples, which might be multiplied ad infinitum, prove that the Rebel spirit is as rampant as ever, and that only by a complete and overwhelming victory for the Republican party on Tuesday next can we hope for the beginning of an era of peace and prosperity.

Seymour's Restraining Influence. HORATIO SEYMOUR declares in his speeches that if he should be elected President, the Republican majorities in Congress would so hamper his administration that he would have to content himself with re-enacting the rôle of Andrew Johnson. The only thing he promises is that he will "restrain radicalism."

At the present political campaign some of the Democratic leaders at the North have endeavored to represent their candidates and the principles of their platform in a light that would deceive the loyal people of the country as to the real intentions of the party in case they obtained a victory.

The election of Grant will secure the unity of feeling and action between the different branches of the Government which is imperatively needed to restore order and tranquility. While Seymour announces in advance his intention to antagonize Congress, Grant declares that he desires to obey the will of the people.

No man can doubt, in view of the respect universally entertained for Grant, that his recommendations to Congress will receive the most favorable consideration, and we hazard little in predicting that, as a rule, his suggestions will invariably be followed.

There appears to be little prospect that Spain will adopt a republican form of government. Her influential leaders have announced their preference for a liberal constitutional monarchy, and the most important question to be determined is who shall be the royal successor of the profligate Isabella.

The fact is established by the affidavit of a respectable citizen of New York that Horatio Seymour said, at the commencement of the war, that he "thought the Montgomery constitution was a great deal better than ours, and that we ought to overthrow the rotten concern at Washington, send the New York representatives to the Montgomery government, and bring that up to Washington and go on under it."

Within the past four months wheat has declined in this market nearly 50 per cent. On the 30th of Oct. 1867, the standard wheat was graded at $2.20; yesterday sales were made at $1.15 per bushel, the market closing nearly 100 cents lighter.

The Rebel States under the control of their old leaders. Disloyal Southern Governors and disloyal Southern Presidential electors would speedily compel their Northern Democratic allies to submit to Rebel leadership, and this is the entertainment to which the nation is invited by the advocates of the election of Seymour and Blair.

"My bosom's lord sits lightly on his throne," rejoiced Romeo on the day that ushered him to suicide and death, and in the same key some leading Democratic organs are sounding a pan of triumph. Instead of chanting words of grief over the mournful presage of the October elections, they find in them a cause of self-gratulation.

forcing down prices daily. The consequences of this course is that now, on the edge of winter, our elevators are partially full of grain just at the time they should be nearly empty, in readiness for the winter movement, which will pour grain in by the railroads, while the lake transit eastward is stopped up by the ice.
