THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1868.

Judge John M. Read.

On Monday afternoon last, in the Suprem⁹ Court at Nisi Prins, Judge Read delivered an opinion characterizing the process of naturalization which Mr. Snowden and his Upstaves had been pursuing in that Court a, ntterly illegal and void, and advised the elec tion officers to reject every ballot offered on the strength of the fraudulent certificates thug issued. Because of this advice, and of the further fact that the honest election officers who had a regard for their oaths generally followed it, the Democratic orators and journals have raised a storm around Judge Read, in the midst of which the venerable jurist stands calm and unshaken, in the consciensness that he did all that he could. and as soon as he could, to prevent the perpetration of a gross outrage on the rights of the people. If Judge Read could have had an opportunity to put into a judicial and binding form the sentiments to which he gave expression in his letter of October 7 to Chief Justice Thompson, the election held in this city on the 13th ult. would not have been perverted by Snowden and his tipstaves into a ridioulous farce, the purity of the bal. lot-box wenld, in a measure, have been pre served, the will of the people would have been freely and fully indicated, the whole Republican city and county ticket would have been elected, and the vexatious contests which have been commenced before the Court of Common Pleas would not have been rendered necessary. All this is what we lost by reason of the hands of an honest and fearless Judge being so tied up by the statutes of the that he could do nothing State more than enter a solemn and earnest protest against the disgrace which one of his colleagues, elevated to the Bench by similar frauds, suffered to be inflicted upon the tribunal of which they both are members, and against the great wrong which the people of this city were made to endure in censequence. As soon as Judge Read had the opportunity he acted promptly, hon stly, fearlessly, and we now witness the consequences of his action in the redemption of the fair name of our city. For all this he deserves, as he has received, the thanks of all good citizens: and the curses which have been hurled against him by the defeated demagogues who have so recklessly trifled with the rights of our citizens excite no surprise in any reasonable man. Judge Read has now attained the venerable age of seventy. one years, to the honors of which is added this last and greatest act of his judicial career. In taking this step he was prompted by the purest motives, and when the crisis comes he will find himself supported by the people of the State and their servants, the Legislature, and also, we trust, by a majority of his colleagues upon the bench. The action of Judge Read on Monday was prompted by the petition of William B. Mann, Esq., the late District Attorney, who shares with the former the honor of the act, and closes his long career in office by a preceeding which will cause him not soon to be forgotten by a grateful people. The Reign of Reason. THE political fight is fought, and for four years the nation will be freed from the harrowing excitement and personal as well as political asperities which go hand in hand with a Presidential campaign. For good or for evil, all must now concur in recognizing General Grant as the President of the United States-the man on whose decision must rest the Executive responsibility of the nation, and whose will will mould, to a great extent, the national policy. With his succession will come stability to the form of government, an adherence to a settled line of policy, and a new era in the history of our land. To President Grant will be committed a task which we desire to view for a few moments from the standpoint of patrio :ism and not of partisanship. The nation is to-day a divided people. There are sections, and sectional jealousies, and sectional hate. It is for Grant to break down these sections and their evil feelings; it is for him to make the nation indeed have peace, He declares such to be his policy, and we believe that he will carry it out without doubt or question. It is therefore a matter of great interest to know wha will be the line he will pursue, and in considering it, we say we desire to look at it as Americans and not as Republicans. We are proud of the one, but far prouder of the other title. From this elevation, therefore, let us look at what would be the best means of restoring peace to the whole country. We think that that anspicious result would be best secured by calling into the Cabinet the sound, quiet, conservative radicals-if such a contradiction of terms may be allowed-and excluding from the management men who, however earnest, have zeal without discretion, and are governed rather by the impulses of their passionate ten pers than the demands of the public good. We do not mean by what we have said to desire the recognition of the half-and-half slement-that element which in 1865 inclined towards Johnson. But there is a class of Republicans, good, faithful, earnest, and devoted, who are not of the same race as is General Batler and men of that genus. They are conserva-

tempers, but rather by the calm distates of | of these efforts. A despatch from Denver common sense. General Batler, with all his great qualities, is eminently the type of the men that should not be in Grant's Cabinet. He is tempestuous; he is personal in his bitterness to the South; he is, in fact, such a man as we would like our enemies to make their chief adviser. While giving to such men al possible oredit for intrepidity and honesty of purpose, we do not want them to mould the policy of the nation.

The class of men whom President Grant should select are Colfax men. We mean they are just such Republicans as Schuyler Colfax is. No need to specify their qualities. They are the antipodes of the Butlers. Now what would be the effect of the appointment of such men as we favor ? It would have a reassuring tendency all over the land. The people would feel confidence in the Administration. They would not anticipate a faux pas at every stap. It would say to the North that the President means to carry out the policy of the Republican party, firmly, without wavering; that his conclusion to do so is settled, and such will be the line of his conduct. It would say to the South that, while the President is decided, yet he has no personal animosity. He desires your submission. He wants peace. He appoints men who are not of the "fire and pitch" order, but who will have the laws exeouted. If you are apxious to act as good citizens, welcome. If you are determined to play the brigand and ruffian, the power of the law will scourge you into submission. This is the policy which should characterize the new Administration-a fresh opportunity of repentance, and assurance of willingness to forgive, but determination to crush, if necessary. With such a policy and such a Cabinet as we desire, we would be allowed to have peace in deed as well as in name.

Encouragement for Spain.

HAD the revolution of 1793 received a prompt and ready recognition from the European powers as an emphatic expression of the will of the French people, many of the horrors of the Reign of Terror would in all probability have been obviated. Such a lesson, however, was needed for the princes of that as well as later generations, for them to understand that the old feudal theory of the divine rights of kirgs was opposed to the spirit of the age which witnessed the successful establishment of a great Republic in the New World. and that it must be numbered among the dead ideas of bygone centuries of oppression, bloodshed, tyranny, and crime. In our own day the last of the Bourbons have been driven from the thrones which they disgraced; we have seen Italy disenthralled and reunited as one nation; and but a few weeks sgo one of the most important revolutions of history was consummated peaceably and successfully in Spain, and the regeneration of that unhappy country is apparently one of the things that we may look for without serious forebodings of disaster. The prompt recognition of the Provisional Government by the United States exerted a most beneficent effect, not only by encouraging the Spaniards to finish well the work which they have so successfully begun, but it has set an example to the courts of Europe which most of them have deemed it to their own interest to follow without cavil and without delay. No ideas of forcible interference have been suggested, and the miserable dethroned queen has been an object of derision rather than of commiseration. The Spaniards have been congratulated on all sides as being well rid of her, and the expressions of hopes for the future welfare of the nation and admiration at the judicious course thus far of the revolutionists have been universal. What the future is to be cannot be foretold: the present uncertain state of affairs cannot last long without serious detriment to the best interests of the Spanish people, and every one must acknowledge that the establishment as soon as practicable of a strong but liberal constitutional government is desirable. The French Emperor has been looked to, probably with too much solicitude, as the arbiter to a certain extent of the fate of Spain. and the various candidates for the vacant throne who have been suggested have been discussed more with a view of his approval or disapproval than on account of their merits or fitness for the position. At the opening of the Prussian Diet yesterday, King William in his speech expressed a hope that Spain would succeed in independently reconstructing her affairs on a basis which would render the future welfare of her people secure. This may have been, and it probably was, intended as a snub to the Napoleonic pretensions, or it may have been a genuine expression of good-will. At any rate it will be likely to have the effect of the latter, and like the recognition of the American Government and congratulations of the people of the United States, as conveyed by Minister Hale, it will probably have the effect of inciting the Spaniards to greater exertions than ever to redeem the past and to deserve the good opinions and good wishes which have been expressed with regard to them by all the civilized world. The final settlement of affairs will be looked forward to with solicitude, and the peace, prosperity, and happiness of a great people will be anxiously hoped for by all who look upon a good government as one of the greatest blessings which can be conferred upon mankind.

also apponnces that Mr. Wease, a commissloper sent by the Emperor to inspect the mines of Colorado, has organized a French company to build a tramway to connect the coal mines of that Territory with its smelting works. Here are two interest+, almost +xclusively American, which have received more attentive consideration from a Continental potentate than from the state-men of our own country. A foreign journal also announces that a hundred Ruglish noblemen have recently requested Napoleon's aid to complete a submarine tunnel between Rogland and France, and some months ago an engineer who had devised a plan for this great undertaking submitted it to the Emperor, and received the promise of his assistance, i the project should prove feasible and acceptable to England. The gigantic task undertaken by M. Lesseps, of constructing a ship canal in the isthmus of Suez, to connect the Mediterranean with the Red Sea, and thus relieve commerce of tha tedious and perilous voyage around the Capa of Good Hope, was also liberally sustained, from its inception, by the French Emperor and it could not have been successfully prosecuted without his assistance. In the famous commercial treaty between Kngland and France, every important point was discussed by Mr. Cobden and Louis Napoleon, and the guardian of the interests of France was extremely careful, notwithstanding the pretension that the treaty was an approximation to free trade, to protect the imperilled industries of the empire from rainous competition. Numerous other illustrations might be given of his enlightened interest in matters affecting material progress. The embellishment and virtual reconstruction of Paris, by command of the Emperor, will of itself furnish an enduring monument of his reign, no matter what may be the result of his efforts to perpetuate his dynasty, or how many political revelutions may be effected during his lifetime. American statesmen and politicians are too apt to ignore, in their eagerness for spoils or real or pretended devotion to abstract principles, the consideration of subjects which vitally affect the material interests of the nation, and we have few public men who, like Franklin or De Witt Clinton, study industrial questions as closely as partisan problems.
