Profit and Loss.

TER culminating battle of the Rebellion has been fought and won, and we can now call our rolls, discover the extent of our losses, and take an account of our booty. To begin, we have gained the Presidency. Andrew Johnson will retire into oblivion on the 4th of March next, and with him will go Horatio Seymour and Frank Blair, to be heard of no more for some time to come. With the Presidency we gain also a hearty accord between the executive and legislative branches of the Government. Congress will no longer be at sword's point with the Chief Magistrate, the veto business will cease to exist, and impeachment will enter into history and remain there. With the changes in the Cabinet which will follow President Grant's inauguration will come likewise a grand sweep of all their subordinates, both at Washington and through. out the country, the whole machinery of the Government being brought into sympathy with the will and wishes of the majority.

In the national S-uate there will be but little change numerically, but it will be, on the whole, of a very satisfactory character. In the next session of the Fortieth Congress, every State of the Union will be fully represented, except Mississippi, Texas, and Virginia, which are not yet reconstructed. The total number of Senators is 68, of whom 55 are Republicans and 13 Democrats. To the latter category might, for all practicable purposes, be added the names of Fowler, Ross, and Van Winkle, changing the figures to 52 and 16. The terms of 22 Senators will expire on the 4th of March, 16 of them being Republicans and 6 Democrats. In their places will come 18 Republicans and 4 Democrats, giving the former a total in the new Senate of 57, and the latter 11 only. We may possibly have lost the Legislature of Arkausas, in which event Senator McDonald may be succeeded by a Democrat, and the division stand 56 to 12. Only six of the new Senators have been elected thus far-Casserly, Democrat, from California, to succeed Conness, Republi. can; Thurman, Democrat, from Ohio, to succeed Wade, R-publican; Hamilton, Democrat, from Maryland, to succeed Whyte, of the same faith; Gilbert, Republican, from Florida, to succeed Welch, also a Republican; Edmunds, Republican, of Vermont, who has been re-elected; and Brownlow, Republican, of Tennessee, to succeed Patterson, the Democratic son-in-law of Audrew Johnson. To these two Republican losses will be added the new Senator from New Jersey, in the place of Frelinghaysen, who will prob bly be the Hou. John P. Stockton, once elected, but in such an irregular fashion that his seat was given to Senator Cattell. This loss of three Republicans is more than compensated for by the election of Parson Brownlow, and a gain of four others from the following States: - From Penasylvania, to succeed Buckalew; from Connecticut, to succeed Dixon; from Indiana, to succeed Hendricks; and from Wisconsin, to succeed Doolittle. Henderson of Missouri, and Van Winkle of West Virginia, also retire, giving place to two sound men of the true faith. The other Republican Senators whose terms expire are Morrill of Maine, Summer of Massachusetts, Chardler of Michigan, Ramsey of Mignesota, Stewart of Nevada, Morgan of New York, Sprague of Rhode Island, and Tipton of Nebraska. All of these will probably be reelected, except Morgan; but the latter will not have Horatio S-ymour for a successor.

All the members of the new House of Representatives have been elected, except the single member from Florida, the four from New Hampshire, and the three from Connecticut. The election in the latter State will take place on the second Tuesday in March, in Connectiout en the first Monday in April, and in Florida some time in January. The New Hampshire and Florida delegations will be Republican, as will also be half of that from Connecticut. Lucluding these probable results, the lower houses of the Fortieth and Forty. first Congresses will bear the following comparison: -Fortleth Congress.

Republican majority......121 This shows a Republican loss of 29 members, a Democratic gain of 30, and a reduction of 59 in the Republican majority, which will be 7 less than the two-thirds vote which has been required heretofore to override Andrew Johnson's vetoes-a luxury without which we can get along very comfortably with General Grant for President. At least half a dozen of the new Democratic members will be unseated, when the Committee on Elections exposes the flagrant frauds by which they have been nominally elected, and the Republican majority will in this way be increased from 62 to 74-a very good working majority, sufficient for all the requirements of prompt and impartial legislation, under the administration of General Grant and the new reign of peace and prosperity. Taking it altogether, our profit and loss account for November 3 looks remarkably well, and we are satisfied if the Democrats are-but they evidently are not.

THE RESULT .- There is no material change in the majorities in the different States, as published by us yesterday. Grant will certainly receive the electoral vote of every Northern State except New York and New Jersey, with enough Southern States to give him a total of 217, leaving the balance, 77, for Seymour. There is no change to be made in the table of Pennsylvania majorities as published by us yesterday, indicating a round majority of 25 000 in the State.

A Representative Englishman. WE have considerable respect for Mr. Ros buck, M. P., as we have for all honest men, whatever their opinions may be and whether we agree with them or not; for Roebnok is honest. He says what he thinks, and he thinks what he says. There is not and never has been any beating about the bush with Roebnck, but he has openly declared himself the enemy of the United States, and when the Rebellion of the slave States threatened the disruption of the Union he earnestly desired the English Government to strike a decisive blow, which would forever annihilate the power of a formidable rival unmanly and ungenerous policy advocated by Roebuck was peculiarly English, but then Roebuck is a repre sentative Englishman, and his sentiments towards the American Union are those of a large proportion of his countrymen. The Palmeratons and the Russells of the day, less honest and less courageous but equally bitter in their feelings with Roebuck, were afraid to take the decisive step which he advised as necessary for the maintenance of British supremacy; and they allowed their sympathic with the cause of secession to find expression in the recognition of the R-bels as belligerents, by permitting the escape of the Alabama and other vessels to prey upon American commerce, and by giving all the countenance and support to Jeff. Davis and his confederates that they were able without producing an actual rupture with the great Republic of the West. which they feared even in the hour when it appeared most likely to disappear from among the great nations of the earth.

On the 19th of October Mr. Roebuck made a speech to the workmen of Messrs. Rogers & Sons, of Sheffield, in which he explained his course towards the United States and the policy which he advocated during the progress of the slaveholder's rebellion. Mr. Roebuck said his belief was that the American people by and by will be so numerous that they will be all-powerful among mankind. He had always found that persons of uncontrolled power do not use that power as they ought to do-Mr. Roebuck has numerous examples in English history upon which to found this opinion-and his object was to prevent the United States from having that immense uncontrolled power. When the Rebellion broke out he said, "Here is the opportunity. We can take it in perfect safety."-How very British this is !- He did not believe that a war woul i have followed, but by the recognition the Confederate Government the of blockade of the Southern ports would have been raised, the civil war would have been brought to an end, and the United States would have been divided into a number of independent nations-very much, as Ma Roebuck believes, to the benefit of mankind, the States themselves, and England in particular. This was Roebuck's programme, and it was the programme that the Tory Government of England would have been pleased to follow if it had dared. Mr. Roebuck, in his speech, related the following story, which is interesting and suggestive, so we give it in his

After that meeting in Paradise Square I went back to London, and in a day or two it was the becessity of the case—for a member of Parlia-ment there is often that necessity—to wait upon the Prime Minister. I was ed upon Lord Pal merstor. The moment I got into his room he was standing writing at his desk, as he always did-be turned round and nut out both his old-be turned round and put cut both his hands, and said, "Roebuck, Roebuck, What a devilish good speech you made in Shellid!" I said, "My lord, I am greatly obliged to you and flattered for the kind phrase you have used about my speech;" though it was rather a narrone, you know; 'I feel very much flattere!." "Flattered!" he said; "why, I am entirely of your opins m, but dare not officially say so." Now, it struck me, according to the old woman's phrase, all of a heap, that a man in power phrase, all of a heap, that a man in power should say to me, openly and without disguise, that he was entirely of my opinion, and led the people of England dir.city the opposite way. That, said I, is modern political morality.

Mr. Roebuck declared that he had no idea of creating a war with the United States, that from his youth up he had been an opponent of slavery, and that no sympathy with the slave power influenced him in the line of policy which he advocated; but that he thought the dismemberment of the United States would be for the benefit of mankind.

Here we think that Roebuck is not quite honest; for "mankind" substitute "England" or "Ruglish aristocracy," and we will have his exact meaning. We contend that this man Roebuck, an epeu, undisguised, and plain-spoken enemy, is better entitled to the respect of the American people than are those other Englishmen who did all they could to embarrass us during the Rebellion, while they professed friendship and sympathy for our misfortunes. We do not owe Roebuck any love, however, and to do him justice, he does not ask it; but is it not an insult to the American people that their official repre sentative in England should spend his time in dining and wining and hand-shaking with such fellows? These men would have destroyed us when they thought they had an opportunity, only they were not perfectly sure that our hands were so full of the business in which we were engaged that it would be safe for them to make the attempt; and Roebuck's story lets the cat out of the bag so far as the English Ministry the early days of the Rebellion concerned. Palmerston was entirely in accord with him, only he did not dare to openly say so. We do not fear the enmity or care for the friendship of these representative Englishmen, and Minister Reverdy Johnson will have the mortification of seeing all his fine sentiments of perpetual amity repudiated by and nothing short of this will be a cedel to. The determination of the American people on this point grows stronger every day, and perhaps Roebuck's fears with regard to our probable use of power may be realized even sooner than he autic pates.

A PITTING COUNTERPART of the great national triumph of Grant and Colfax is furnished by the local Democratic victories. The Fourth ward of Philadelphia gave Saymour more than three thousand majority, and by this return a capacity for fraud was displayed which even the worst Rabel districts cannot excel. New York city, notwithstanding the magnificent vote polled by her gallant Republicans, attested her ability to supply illegally naturalized or bogus voters not merely by the thousand but by the ten thousand. Baltimore was as ready to bolster up the new rebellion as ahe had been to encourage the first out break of trea on. Kentnoky, for the reasons Nasby has clearly described, was of course Demogratic. In Louisiana Rousseau commanded. The memory of the massacres perpetrated during the first New Orleans riot was still fresh in the min is of the Republicans of the State, and it was won by Rebel violence. The means used to gain these victories are characteristic of the cause they were intended

"A. J. W.," who must not be confounded with the original "A. J.," without the "W," telegraphs from Alexandria, Va., to the Washington Erpress, that "the State of Virginia has cast her vote for Seymour and Blair." "A. J. W." then naively adds, that "ten electors were chosen." We are informed by a Washington despatch that some of the Virginia papers contain article; congratulating the First Families on the extreme quiet which marked their election. Doubtless these congratulations are timely ones, for the Virginia election on Tuesday last was conducted in so very, very quiet a manner that not a soul outside of the State knew such a thing was going on until "A. J. W." was heard from. We hope this gentleman's "ten electors" will have a quiet time when they come to cast their votes for Seymour

A CABLE TELEGRAM announces that the King of Prussia, in opening the Prussian Diet. declared that "the wishes of sovereigns and a popular craving for peace would insure peace, and should remove those groundless fears of which advantage is too often taken by the enemies of peace." He evidently desires a maintenance of pacific relations, and will not precipitate a quarrel with Napoleon. A careful comparison of the available military resources of France and North Germany, recently made by a foreign journal, discloses the fact that the former is still the most formidable power in Europe; and the Prussian monarch will be loth to measure his newly-lengthened sword with the weapon which has proved so potent in past conflicts, and which has no: yet lost its cunning nor its strength. Appearances indicate that "peace" will prevail in Europe as well as in America.

No Use FOR ROOSTERS .- When English was elected Governor of Connecticut last spring, the Boston Post purchased eight magnificent stereotyped roosters, with copper heads, and displayed them at the top of its columns. Yesterday a solitary rooster made its appearance in the Post, with the following lines by way of introduction:-

" ## For sale- Eight roosters, as good as new. never navlug crowed but once. Sample,

If the terms of the Post are not extravagant, the whole Democratic barn yard of fowls may be forwarded to us, with bill, to be collected when Horatio Seymour abandons the culture of watermelons to take his seat in the United States Senate

THE LONDON PRESS comments on the election of Grant in a varied strain, the most entertaining passages being found in the columns of the Morning Standard, which thinks that, if "the Democratic party had nominated Chase or McClellan, instead of two second-rate politicians, it might have succeeded." And this, despite the "notorious readiness" of the radicals to abuse their power. We commend the Morning Standard to Mr. Reverdy Johnson, as a fitting organ for his after-dinner epistles, when his after-dinner speeches are entirely played out.
