MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

"The Heir at Law" at the Arch. For the sake of "Dr. Pangloss," Colman's comedy of The Heir at-Law is performed oftener than it otherwise would be, but even without "Dr. Pangloss" it would be one of the most pleas ing of the class of plays to which it belongs. Like all of Colman's works, it acts well, the characters are lifelike, the humor is genuine, its tone is healthy, and the moral is sufficiently pointed. If well represented, The Heir-at-Law is an excellent entertainment, and the evident delight of the large audience last evening at the Arch was in the highest degree complimentary to Mrs. Drew and her company. The play was given in fine style throughout, and this artistic completeness as a whole is, we think, even more worthy of commendatory notice than the merits of any one personation.

Mr. Warren we presume to have retired, so that there now remain upon the stage only Mr. Joseph Jefferson and Mr. John S. Clarke as representatives of "Dr. Panglosa." Of the two we prefer the performance of Mr. Clarke in this part. Mr. Jefferson carries the subdued style of his "Rip Van Winkle" more or less into al his personations, and in many instances we admit that it is really more effective than Clarke's grotesqueness. But Clarke has made a few characters peculiarly his own, and "Dr Pangioss" is one of them. There is a richness and exuberance of comic humor in his delineation of the impecuatous philosopher that makes it more irresistibly laughable than Jefferson's, and which never falls to tell upon the audience.

Mr. Craig attempted this part for the first time last evening, and as he does not too often have opportunities to appear in roles that it should be his ambition to study, if he wishes to make his mark as a comedian, we were somewhat curious to see what he would make of it. Mr. Craig's best things heretofore have been in the burlesque line, but burlesque is easier to act than legitimate comedy, and more certain of winning applause without much effort, and, while tempting, it is dangerors to a young actor as being apt to inspire him with a higher estimate of his abilities than disinterested judges will concur in, and as giving him a fictitious popularity which will be likely to fail him when he most needs it. Mr. Craig is, we believe, ambitious, and we are pleased whenever he tries himself in parislike that of "Dr. Pangloss," in which our finest comedians have distinguished themselves. Mr. Craig's performance last evening was very creditable, especially for a first at tempt; and we hope that the pleasure which Mrs. Drew's "old comedy weeks" have afforded to many of the most intelligent patrons of the theatre will induce her to give us some more of the same sort before the season is over, if for no other reason than to allow Mr. Craig to show what there is in him as an actor of legitimate comedy. There was nothing original about Mr. Craig's "Dr. Pangloss," nor was it to be expected or perhaps wished for that there should be. The usual points were made with good effect, although he falled to equal Clarke's exquisite drollery and Jefferson's sparkling wit. Some of Mr. Craig's peculiar mannerisms were apparent throughout the performance, and he missed the exquisite little touch of pathos with which Jefferson lights up the passage where "Dr. Paugloss" returns the bank note to "Zekiel," and receives a reward which elicits the quotation "Honesty is the best policy." Indeed, it is this bit of true art that makes Jeffer-

Mr. Everly's 'Zekiel Homespun" was excellent, and, as a really superior piece of actingwe do not recollect ever seeing him do anything equal to it. Mr. Mackay made a capital representative of "Daniel Dowlas," and Mrs. Thayer as "Deborah Dowlas" was good, as she always is. Mr. Wallis, a very careful and pains. taking actor, who does not always get as much eredit as he deserves, made much of the small part of "Kenwick;" and Mr. Barton Hill acted with good effect as "Dick Dowlas."

son's "Dr. Pangloss" superior to Clarke's, even-if it is not so laughable.

Mrs. Drew's personation of "Cicely Home" spun" was artistic, and some passages she rendered in a style that few other actresses are capable of. But as a whole we did not like it as well as that of some performers of less reputation. Mrs. Creese as "Caroline Dormer" was graceful, but a trifle inanimate, Mr. James acted the part of "Henry Moreland" very carelessly, indeed, it could not properly be called acting, and if he knew his lines he often failed to speak them so that the audience could understand what he was saying. Mr. James is one of the most unpromising members of the Arch street company. We have seen him act in a way that seemed to indicate that he possesses ability, and on that account we are inclined to condemn him when he plays in as shittless a manner as he did last evening. Mr. Synder, who took the part of "Steadlast," is open to considerable improvement, but he is more painstaking than Mr. James, and he is likely to become more popular if he believes in the maxim that "Whatever is worth doing is worth doing well."

PREVENT OR REPENT. - When health has been sad rificed for want of the care necessary to protect it regrets are unavailing. It is better to present than to repent. The most inclement season of the year is at hand, and its cold and camp are the source of innumerable distressing allments. The best means of escaping them is to keep the outward surface of the body comfortably warm with suitable clothing, and the internal organs to a vigorous condition by the occasional use of a healthful tonic and corrective. Winter makes tremendous drafts upon the vital forces, and therefore it is a season when a pure vegetable stimulant and invigorant like Hostatten's STOMACH BITTERS is of infinite use, especially to the weak and feeble. It gives staming to the system, and thereby enables is to withstand the shocks of cold, which produce cough, bronchitis, catarrh, and other diseases of the organs of respiration. Dyspensia and every species of indigestion are also greatly aggravated by cold damp weather, and for these complaints the Birriss are an acknowledged specific-There is no fact better known in this country, and indeed, throughout the civilized portlons of the Western Hemisphere, than that this genial prepara tion is a swift and certain remedy for all ordinary diseases of the stomach and the liver.

We speak knowingly, having worn Helweg's boots for years.
