SATURDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1868. Decline of Southern Influence - Future Programme of the Democracy. In the speech delivered by Mr. Blaine in the House of Representatives on the 10th inst., on the results of the late election, he declared that "the approaching census of 1870 will disclose the fact that the ten Rebel States, viewed as one compact power, will no longer have sufficient strength to effer temptation to the Democratic party of the North to sacrifice its loyalty and its pride for the profit of an alliance with them," and that "the election of 1868 is the last in which the lately rebellious section, even if it could be wholly controlled by Rebels, will have sufficient power in the electoral vote of the country to make it the object either of hope or of fear on the part of pelitical organizations striving for the government of the nation." Politicians of all parties should attentively consider the full force of the change which is thus forcibly depicted. For many years the compacted South held a cils, and the custom was for a long time maintained of refusing admission to a new free State until a new slave State was also prewould always ensure to the Southern States the conviction that they must either secure a and destroy it. They were taught to demand predominating influence in the national counpared for admission, so that a balance of power could be perpetuated in the United States Senate. Calhoun earnestly advocated such a change in the form of the Government as sufficient influence in the national councils to prevent the passage of any law unanimously opposed by their Senators and Representatives. He viewed with gloomy apprehensions the rapid growth of the free Commonwealths, and impressed his followers with perpetual check upon the Union, or abandon that the North should continually be subservient to the South, despite disparity of population, and to make the first open expression of free and unshackled Northern opinion on a test question the signal for the disruption of the Republic. The nation and the world have seen some of the results of this struggle of a desperate and retrograde minority to enchain a vigorous and progressive majority; but the protracted discussion of the terms of reconstruction and temporary uncertainty in regard to the future position of the Rebel States, have prevented a full recognition of the completeness of the overthrow of the arrogant pretensions of the secessionists. All know that the Confederacy was demolished. But next to power out of the Union they longed for power within it; and the restrictions imposed by the reconstruction policy of Congress, joined to the rapid influx of emigration in the North, and the prosperity insured to Northern communities by liberty combined with law, have sounded forever the death-kneli of the distinctive Southern influence which was formerly the controlling element in American politics. It has fallen, like Lucifer, never to rise again Men look back with wender at the patience of the North in submitting to the brutal dictation of the lords of the plantation lash, and can scarcely realize that the leaders of the Rebellion once swaved the destinies of the entire nation. Henceterth the South will exercise but a small share of the governing power. Whatever may be the final result of the Congressional efforts to infuse a loyal element into Southern politics, her future statesmen can never again become the despots of the country. This change possesses a deeper significance to the Democrats of the Northern States than to any other portion of the American people. They have become so accustomed to unquestioned submission to Southern dictation that they scarcely yet realize that policy and prudence, as well as patriotism, impel them to recognize their emancipation from their ancient thraldom. They are slower than the slaves in learning that they should work for themselves, and for the immediate benefit of the communities in which they live, instead of their old Southern masters. They committed a fatal blunder in the last Presidential campaign by exposing their wil" lingness to fight the battles of a lost cause' and by affording new evidence of their con tinued disposition to make the interests of the loyal States subordinate to those of rebellious districts. They can scarcely fail to gradually learn the folly of reposing their hopes for future triumph on an alliance with baffled traitors, and four years hence they will probably correct the flagrant error which contributed so largely to their recent defeat. They will not again venture to ask the people to endorse a Wade Hampton platform, or to support another national candidate who favors a JOHNSON'S MESSAGE is as full of absurdities and inconsistencies as of insults to the American people. He says that "our national credit should be sacredly observed," and he follows up this declaration by proposing that the principal of the national debt should be extinguished by the moneys paid for interest. He denounces and exaggerates the public expenditures, forgetting that he himself signed all the appropriation bills passed since April, 1865, notwithstanding his numerous vetoes of other laws, and ignoring the fact that the appropriations were nearly all based upon estimates made by his own Administration, which, however, were in many instances greatly reduced. He also strangely supplements his declaration against the large expenditures of the Government by proposing to purchase more foreign territory. In one breath he states that "it is indeed a question of grave consideration whether our recent and present example is not calculated to check the growth and expansion of free principles," and yet in another he alleges that "the conviction is rapidly gaining ground in the American mind that, with the increased facilities for intercommunication between all portions of the earth," we could govern under our Constitution not only this entire continent but "the rest of mankind." The message is evidently either the patchwork product of dif-ferent authors or of varying Presidential moods.

League Island.

THE Attorney-General having passed upon the title of the city of Philadelphia to League Island, and reported that it is sound and unencumbered, the formal and final transfer of the great Iron-clad Navy Yard site will be fully consummated in a few days. The Federal Government will then be placed in possession a piece of property which is eminently adapted to all the requisites of an iron-clad naval station. From the first tender of the property to the United States by this city, the movement has encountered the bitterest opposition by persons in and out of the Government who were interested in having other localities fixed upon. But, after all, the true interests of the country were consulted, and the Navy Yard for iron-clad vessels of war located at the point which was unquestionably the most suitable, with a view to safety, economy, and convenience. Philadelphia has just cause to be gratified at the result.

THE indignant denunciations in Congress and in the press of the Presidential scheme of repudiation will go far to satisfy the national creditors, at home and abroad, that the solemn decision pronounced in November last, that all the obligations incurred by the war should be faithfully discharged, will be executed. The most probable explanation of Andrew Johnson's motives is that he prepared pertions of his message rather as texts for future stump speeches as a candidate for United States Senator in Tennessee before semi-rebel audiences at Confederate X Roads, than as official advice and information to Congress. Having swung around the circle once from the lowest office to the highest, he is preparing for a return trip, which is to begin by a canvass for a seat in the Senate, and may end in his defeat as a candidate for alderman.

MARSHALL'S ELIXIR.

Any person habitually costive cannot be in the enjoyment of health. If not relieved costiveness will result in confirmed cases of Rhenmatism, Piles, Inflammation of the Bowels, Diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder, and surrounding organs. When costiveness is radically cured, all the machinery of the system moves in harmony. Marshall's Elixir permanently cures costiveness, and so prevents diseases more painful and dangerous.

Headache quickly yields to its curative powers. Being entirely vegetable, it may be safely taken by all persons at any time, with perfect safety. Headache, besides being a very painful complaint, is also weakening to the pervous system, and may lead to palsy in its various forms if not soon relieved. Marshall's Elixir so strengthens the nerves that they perform their duties without pain or uneasiness.

By supplying the stomach with the medicinal principle, the want of which causes Dyspepsia, this distressing and common disease is quickly cured by its use. It not only supplies this to the stomach, but imparts strength and vigor to the whole digestive apparatus, so that health, with cheerful spirits and a ruddy coun-tenance, is fully established. Read the following certificate: -

CHESTER, Delaware county.
Dear Sirs—I have had sick headaches at times for many years. When afflicted with it I was unfit to attend to my household affairs. Your Elixir partially cured me the first time I tried it. The second time it cured me almost immediately. Since then, by its occasional use, I ave been entirely free from it.
