The Case of Georgia.

From the Boston Post. Governor Bullock, of Georgia, has given in his "testimony" before the Reconstruction Committee on the condition of his State, or what it needs, and how the needs ought to be answered. He opposes Mr. Sumner's plan for the State...

bituminous coal and shale, $14 per ton; on all other coal, 40 cents per ton. Artemus Ward once timely suggested that a joke now and then might not be out of place in a comic paper. That seemed to us a sound proposition.

The Restoration of the Constitution South and North. All great struggles bring certain destructive elements to the surface against which a governing code, modelled in time of peace, cannot provide.

From the N. Y. Herald. All great struggles bring certain destructive elements to the surface against which a governing code, modelled in time of peace, cannot provide. When the life of a nation is threatened new laws spring to the front, born of the moment and strong in their warlike birth.

We were without a fundamental code during our Rebellion, and we have been without one since the war closed; for there is no Constitution existing so long as any one of its parts is ignored. The non-recognition of one item implies the right to ignore another, and so on until it vanishes away on the principle of secession.

Consider, again, that Congress has once declared it back in the Union and its representatives entitled to their seats. But not even this clear justification impresses the proposed outrage any deeper on the mind of Mr. Sumner, and on the minds of all who follow him in supporting his bill.

From the N. Y. Tribune. The N. Y. Times wastes foreign coal admitted to our market free of duty; and we are inclined to concur in the suggestion. Except for revenue, we can perceive no reason for taxing an article so bulky in proportion to its value as coal, especially after its production from our own mines has been so fully developed as with us.

General Grant and His Cabinet. The newspapers, as a matter of course, continue the construction, and reconstruction, of General Grant's Cabinet, with unabated confidence and zeal. But the public faith in their work is less absolute than of old, and somewhat less than could be desired for the credit of journalism.

about General Grant's Cabinet. It is announced, from day to day, that the Hon. Mr. So-and-So is certainly to go into it; whatever else may be doubtful, that is certain at all events.

So far as political position is concerned, I am content with the one assigned me for the sixth time by a generous, confiding constituency. I know but little touching Cabinet appointments, and take no stock in any newspaper talk assigning me to this or that position.

It is easy to understand, therefore, how powerful are the interests which are openly or secretly hostile to a release of General Grant from the fetters which bind President Johnson. Such suits as hope to be appointed, or get their friends appointed, would of course wish the President to be restored to liberty, which was possessed by all Mr. Johnson's predecessors.

It will not be wise for anybody to set his heart very strongly on seeing any special man in any special place, while the President is doing his duty. Those who expect least will be least disappointed. We do not think General Grant at all likely to accept dictation from any quarter, or from cliques and factions of any kind.

Gen. Grant and the Tenure-of-Office Law. From the N. Y. World. The plan reported in our Washington despatches on Tuesday for keeping the letters of the Tenure-of-Office act riveted upon the new President, shows that the spirit of distrust, intrigue, and selfish greed of spoils is stronger than the simple respect for the Constitution.

chief source of their influence and emoluments, and one of the means by which they reimburse themselves for their heavy electioneering expenses. We do not know what it will cost Senator Morgan, of this State, to get himself re-elected; but whether it be thirty thousand, or fifty thousand, or a hundred thousand dollars, we suppose the outlay will be made on the strictly mercantile principle which is so well understood by this "eminent merchant."
