THE EXECUTIONER. JUSTICE BLINDFOLDED.

The Case of William N. Wooley, at Freehold, N. J .- The Career of a Vagabond -The Crime of which he was Convicted-The Preparations for the Execution on Thursday.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Jan. 5, 1869,-Jersey Justice has been a frequent theme of discussion, and everybody, except an inhabitant of this side of the Delaware, has bitterly denounced the extent to which it has been carried. The traditional Jerseyman is inherently selfish. He goes for everything that is for Jersey, and against everything that is against Jersey. He cares not to what extremes he goes, so long as Jerney is cared for. We now have in this county a frightful exemplification of what selfishness and prejudice may accomplish. A man has been killed, and according to Jersey law somebody must be huog, without considering whether that somebody is the right individual; or whether, if he is the right one, he was morally responsible for the crime, or whether the shoot ing was not purely accidental. I allode to the case of the poor ignorant wretch William N. Woolley, who, if the Court of Pardons does not interfere, will be hung on Thursday next, if the yard attached to the prison in this boroug a. The facts of the crime, as I have been able to glean them—many having been excluded on the trial, owing to the desire for revenge on the part of those who administer Jersey law—were as follows: and prejudice may accomplish. A man has the trial, owing to the desire for revenge on the part of those who administer Jersey law-wore as follows:-The prisoner, who is about fifty years of age, followed the occupation of a fisherman and gun-ner, and lived in a but on the Snark river, at a point about fifteen miles distant from the above place. Prior to living in the but he spont his nights in his bost. This was before the war. Just prior to that event he became acquainted with Hartshorne Fieming and wife, who led a sort of vagabond life. The whole party were about as ignorant a trio as one would wish to meet with. The wife of Fieming became the common property of both. Fieming became the became a the sponse. Their abode becoming uninhabitable, they applied to Woolley, and he consented to allow them a portion of his one room. Both the men at this time obtained a livellhood, such as it was, by gunning and fishing. They drank freely, and frequenty pummelled each other, As soon as they were sober their troubles were forgotten, and all would go smootnly until another drunken spree. This sort of existence was carried on until forgotten, and all would go smootnly until another drunken spree. This sort of existence was carried on until Taesday morning. Aug. 10, last, when they again indulged in a free fight. Both were drank, and the consequence was that Fleming and his wife were too much for Woolley, and he was thrown out of the building. This he would not have minded, as he had frequently met with the same treatment, but when he had been ejected, they hustled all bis go. d+ out after him. This was robuing him of his home, when there was a right way of doing it if he had ho legal resi-d nce there.

a right way of doing it if he had no legal resi-d nce there. This summary mode of procedure did not please him a bit. He pleked up what few traps, including an altered musket, he had, and bo e them to a hotel in the visinity kept by Jacob Bennett, who gave him permission to place them temporarily in the bar-room Woolley took several drinks of flquor, and then obliged several gentlemen who were at the house by firing at a target. After the last shot had been discharged he loaded his gun and put it behind the door. He then visited another tavern and drank some more Jersey lightning, the effect of which can be well judged by any one who has partaken of the stuff that is sold within ten miles of Long Branch.

within ten miles of Long Branch. Woolley by this time was very much intoxi-caled, and returned to Bennett's, where the crowd jeered him about being thrust from his "castle." He became very much enraged, and during this excliement Fieming, the man who had done him so much injustice, ap-peared. Woolley then sizggered to where his gun was, and coming out front warned Fiem-ing not to approach, for it he did he would shoot him. Fleming kept advancing. At this time he had the stock of the weapon in his

He says he is resigned to his fate, and has no desire to live; and that he has had a bard life of it from the beginning. He was born at a place called Greenville, a sparsely settled village in "the place," near the Old Trap Tavern, on the 32d March, 1819. He received some schooling, but what knowledge he had acquired he had lost, because, as soon as he was old enough, his father obliged him to leave school and go to work. This he was compelled to d, as his own livelibood was at stake. During the winter season he followed oystering and char coal burning, and the rest of the year was devoted to fashing and gunning. verdict of murder in the first degree. November 23 was fixed as the day for trial, and it accordingly came up, the court-room being very much crowded during the two days that were consumed in hearing the testi-mony, the argument of counsel, and the charge of the Judge. Mr. Parker produced testimony as to the drunken condition of the prisoner on the day of the shooting, but his offer to prove the immediately preceding circumstances—that of his expulsion from his own home—was not of his expulsion from his own home-was not tolerated. From the intoxleated condition of the prisoner Mr. Parker argued his moral irresponsibility, but drunkenness was ruled to be no excuse for either the crime or the degree of the orime. The jury rendered a verdict of guilty of mur-der in the first degree, and the prisoner was sentenced to be hanged. The 24th of December was fixed as the day of execution, but owing to the fact that Woolley was without a friend. Governor Parker took the document yesterday to Governor Ward, requesting him to call together the Oourt of Pardons on Wednesday, for the pur-pose of considering the propriety of commuting the sentence, as now requested by the inhab-itants. The New York Money Market.

From the Times.

"There was some let-up in the Money market There was some let up in the money instance, was some let up in the shore to borrow early in the day was quite as marked as on Saturdsy and Monday. The rates paid by the brokers of the Gold Room) were ½ per cent. and currency interest per day; ½ per cent, free of interest; 7 per cent, per annum in gold, and, finally, 7 per cent, per annum in gold, and, finally, 7 per cent, per annum in currency at the close of bank hours. Most of the borrowers made up their accounts at an earlier hour than yesterday, and the consequence was that the course of supply was reversed. Independent of this circumstance, however, a number of the banks appeared as lenders on the public funds, as well as buyers of the 5-20s at last night's cheaper prices. The prominent dealers in the way of selling, and, on the other hand, were free buyers at the Exchange, to keep themselves in stock. this afternoon, although the pressure to borrow

"We have hot heretolore honoral a practice attempted to be made common of buying and selling money near the close of the day in the long room of the Stock Exchange, believing that the mischief would soon correct itself by the very transparent bubble character of many of these exceptional transactions, for effect on the Stock market. But both Boards of Brokers more welling to tolerate it for a single week were unwilling to tolerate it for a single week, and an order has been made forbidding their members to make open offers for money, or to lend money in either, board room or in the long room of the Exchange Building."

From the Tribune.

"Money, at the opening, was less active; per cent. in coin was the minimum rate, and per cent. in coln was the minimum rate, and 7 per cent. in coln was the minimum rate, and 7 per cent. in currency, with ½ per cent. commis-sion, the highest. There is apparently a com-bination among ienders to keep rates up, and the Boards have considered the matter so cer-tain that they have forbidden their members from buying and selling money in the Board, as has been the practice for the past two weeks. After 1 o'clock the demand became very sharp, and the prices for money advanced to 1/403 16, in sddition to the ordinary legal rate, but the rate broke sgain to 7 per cent. in gold, after 3 o'clock. Late in the day it was reported that several brokers who had paid usary were mak-ing preparations to replevin their securities, and it is to be hoped that some action of this sort will be taken, in order to check the pre-gent enormous rates paid."
