MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

La Sonna ubula" by the Galton Troupe. Last evening Miss Susan Galton made ber first appearance in this city in an opera that would enable the public to form an adequate idea of her abilities as a stoger and as an actress. The pretty little operattas of Offenbach , which have hitherto occupied her attention won for her popularity which she ran some risk of losing by attempting such an arduous and difficult role as "Amiua" in Bellini's opera of La Sonnambula. As an experiment to introduce Miss Galton in a first-class part, the performance may be considered a very decided success, although the young prima donna had to contend against many disadvantages, not the least of which was a deplorably inefficient support. Miss Galton carried off all the honors of the evening, unless, indeed, they are to be divided with the chorus. A large audience was in attendance, and a disposition to be critical was manifested in the beginning; but the singer conquered fairly, and her success was assured when the curtain descended upon the second act amid a storm of applause.

Miss Ga ton's success was an agrecable surprise, for we did not think that she was capable of singing such difficult music as that of La Sonnambula, and this was probably the opinion of many in the audience. Miss Galton's voice is not very powerful, but is sweet and flexible, and a slight roughness, which was ap. parent last evening, is doubtless attributable to a severe cold from which she was evidently suffering. The whole of the chamber scene in the second act was rendered with much taste and feeling, both as regards the singing and the acting, and the same thing may be said of the flower song in the sleep-walking scene of the last act. The air "Ab, non glunge" in the same act was encored. Miss Galton's acting throughout the opera was entitled to high praise, and at the cul of the second and third acts she was complimented by being called before the curtain.

It is to be regretted that Miss Galton was not better supported, as the performance, as a whole, cannot be considered at all in the light of a success. The choruses were generally well rendered, but the singers who assumed the leading roles were totally incompetent. Mr. Whiffip, who appears to advantage in the light pieces of Offenbach's, where his voice is not put to any severe tests, and where his talents as a comedian have full exercise, was not equal to the part of "Elvino," Mr. Whiffin's voice is thin, somewhat pasal, and of only moderate compass, and it breaks into an ear-cutting falsetto whenever it rises above a certain note. and even in those portions of the music that were apparently within his range it did not appear to be well under control. Mr. Whiffin's acting was not much better than his singing, and in the early scenes of the opera especially he seemed to be nervous and embarrassed, as if conscious that he had undertaken a task beyond his powers. In the chamber scene he acted with considerable force and expression, but the ferocious manner in which he dragged "Amina" about the stage was calculated to inspire the audience with some fear that the lady's arms would be dislocated. The remaining parts were sustained by performers who have not signalized themselves hitherto in the light pieces by Offenusch which have been attempted by the troupe, and the public, therefore, had no reason to expect much from them.

Miss Susan Galton's ambition to appear in first-class works is commendable, but unless she can secure a reasonably good support, it would not be advisable to repeat the experiment of last evening very frequently. The operettas in which she has heretofore appeared contain some very pretty music; they are entertaining, and suit the fancy of the public, and are not beyond the capabilities of her troupe. With regard to grand opera the critical standard is higher, and it is worse than useless to attempt such pieces as La Sonnambula unless the means are at command for rendering them in a manuer that will at least approximate to excellence. The finest singers on the stage would not be able to achieve permanent success in the higher class of works under similar circumstances to those in which Miss Galton is now placed. We hope, therefore, that Faust, and other operas of like character, which have been announced as in preparation, will not be attempted at the Chesnut unless Miss Galton is able to effect a very decided improvement in the calibre of her

STHE INCLUMENT SEASON, AND ITS EFFECTS ON THE WHAR AND PERRUB.-The drafts which search is goold makes upon the vital powers of the debilitated and delicate are not less severe than the drain upon their strength caused by excessive heat. The vast disparity between the temperature of overheated rooms and offices at this season and the frigicity of the outer air, is a frutiful source of sickness. To fortify the body against the evil conse quences of the sudden alternations of heat and cold referred to, the vital organization should be strengthenened and endowed with extra resistant power by the use of a wholesome invigorant; and of all preparations for this purpose (whether embraced in the regular pharmacopoil or advertised in the public ournals), there is none that will compare in purity and excellence with Hosvetten's Stomach Bir-TERS. Acting directly upon the organ which converts the food into the fuel of life, the prevaration Imparts to it a tope and vigor which are communicated to every fibre of the trame. The digestive function being accelerated by its tonic operation, the liver regulated by its anti-billious properties, and the waste matter of the system carried off punctually by waste matter of the system carried off punctually by its mild aperient scalou the whole organization will necessarily be in the best possible condition to meet the shocks of winter and the sudden changes of temperature. The weak and necessarily especially, carnot encounter these vicasitudes with safety, ontess their tenur a systems are strengthened and braced by artificial means. Every liquid sold as a stack of trace is a uttersted, and, were it otherwise, mere alcohol is simply a temporary excitant, which, which its first effects have subsided, leaves the physical powers (and the mind as wall) in a worse condition than before. Hostattes's Bitters, on the other hand, contain the exsential properties of the most valuable tonic and attersive roots, barks, and herbs, and their scales conduct of all diffusive attinulants. all diffusive stimulants.

CURREY USING SPEER'S BITTERS.-The constant waste of the energy of our system, from boing overtasked both mentally and physically, requires some thing to keep our faculties in tune and our constitutions in a sound condition, so as to enable us to meet the demands which are constantly being made upon us. This is provided for in Speer's "Standard Wine Bitters." The use of them for a short time will convince the most incredulous. They are Speer's pure wine, embittered by the best vegetable tonics known to auslytical chemists; nothing more and nothing less. Sold by Druggis's
