Kilpatrick Redivivus.

Ws regret the necessity which requires us again to trouble the Minister to Chili with an array of faots which may possibly again disturb the sweetness of his temper. But General Kilpatrick saw proper to wind up his oration at the Academy of Music on the evening of January 21 by denouncing an article in these columns as a string of falsehoods, and subsequently authorized the Evening Bulletin to correct certain "rumors industriously circulated by his enemies"-a course on his part which has prompted an investigation, the result of which we proceed to detail.

The first point laid down by authority of General Kilpatrick is to the effect that he "does not receive one cent-while on a leave of absence-from his salary of $10,000 per annuen." We have before us an official abstract of the cordition of his account with the Treasury Department, certified to by C. M. Walker, the Fifth Auditor of the department, which will probably be regarded as a better authority on that subject than General Kilpatrick himself. From this document it appears that the ostensible Minister to Chili has drawn upon the Treasury between the dates of December 15, 1865, and November 7, 1868, for the sum of $32,101.31, on account of salary, contingent expenses, and 1088 by exchange. In addition to this, he is charged, on the books of the Treasury Department, with $1534 93 as tax on salary, and with $164.73 for difference between American and Chilean gold, making a grand total of $33,800.97. Of the amount received by him, all excepting $1930.90 was in gold. He is credited with $26,250 for salary to June 30, 1868; with $1698-39 for postage, stationery, neuspapers, etc., between April 1, 1866, and June 30, 1868; and with $1,914 54 for loss on exchange on drafts, making a total of $29,862.93. The difference between the debit and credit sides of his account is therefore $3938.04 in favor of the United States. As his leave of absence did not commence until about August 20, 1868, he is entitled to a further credit of about $1390-still leaving a balance agains: him of about $2548. Eut we believe that, under the law as it stands, he is entitled to two months' full salary during his leave of absence. This makes a further reduction of about $1630-leaving him indebted to the Government in the sum of $918 only; but while the amount is thus reduced, General Kilpatrick's assertion that he does not receive one cent by way of salary during his leave of absence is disproved, and shown to be one of the "rumors industriously circulated by his enemies" which he unfortunately corroborates, instead of denying. It is next declared that, "on the contrary, he (General Kilpatrick) pays the expenses to and from Santiago, Chili, for himself and family, a sum amounting to not less than $2500 in gold." If the expenses of his journey to and from Santiago-we have not yet heard of his return-are correctly stated here, it shows that his "family" is somewhat larger than we had imagined it to be. The entire statement on this point, however, is slightly counteracted by another statement, for which we have good authority. When Käpatrick commenced his negotiations with the Republican Committee for stumping the country in behalf of Grant and Colfax, he demanded that they should pay all the expenses of his wife and children to and from Chili, and his salary for the time of his absence, if he did not receive it from the Government. The committee, desiring to uphold the Minister to Chili in his laudable desire to serve the good cause at his own expense, declined to comply with this demand, but finally compromised the matter by paying him $1000, for which they now have his drafts. Next in order, the "enemies" of Kilpatrick are reminded that "he never received a leave of absence during the whole time of the war, except when wounded, and once to attend the fune ral of his wife." The "enemies" in question assert, however, that he was once absent from his post in the field, while engaged in a certain mule speculation; but as Kilpatrick authorizes no statement on that point, we are at liberty, we suppose, to believe that he was not absent on leave for that purpose. The late General L. C. Baker, Chief of the National Detective Police, it is understood, was more familiar with the circumstances of this speculation than any other person saving Kilpatrick himself. Then we come to the following sentences in the authorized statement: -- "Almost immedistely after the war he left for Chili, where he has remained until within less than five months. In other words, he has been at his post almost three years." We fear that this assertion, like some of the others made by authority of General Kilpatrick, is somewhat extravagant. Before leaving for Chill he certainly stumped New Jersey, during the fall campaign of 1865, and his first draft on the Treasury from Santiago was dated March 1, 1866, while his ample allowance for contingenoies in the way of "postage, stationery, newspapers, etc." did not begin until April 1, 1866. On this point, however, we have made no previous assertions, and therefore decline a controversy. But we are prepared to say that Kil-

from his legation, on May 12, 1868. The State | Department on the 8th of June granted half of his request, giving him three months' leave, to commence with the reception of the document in which it was conveyed, about the 20th of August. On the 9th of November he again resolved to sacrifice his time and salary, and applied for an extension for three months. This demand was likewise discounted by Secretary Seward, who, on the 11th of August, granted two months' additional leave; and finally, on the 21st of January, 1869, a further extension until the lat of March next was granted.

The next paragraph in the statement "authorized by General Kupatrick" runs thus:-"He has never 'exacted' $190 aspeech, and the records of the National Republican Committee will substantiate the statement. On the con-trary, he has spoken repeatedly, for which service he has not received, nor did he ask, one cent-even paying his own expenses. If any one of equal means has done more for the party than he, let him speak."

As an offset to this, the $1000 paid him by the National Republican Committee may be taken, with the further tact, for which we have anthority rather better than Kilpatrick's ipse dirit, that in his canvass of New York and New Jersey during the last campaign he received from the local committees from $100 to $150 per night, according to the best bargain that he could drive with them.

Concerning the next point, we quote from the Salem (Mass.) Register of January 28 the following paragraphs:---

"How THIS WORLD IS GIVEN TO LYING!-The Philadelphia Bulletin claims to be authorized by General Klipatrick to make sundry assortions, among which is the following:-

""Third. It is charged that he received $2000 for stumping against Batler. In answer to that, we will state that he fill not receive one cent but paid out of bis own pocket almost $200. This can be proved." "We apprehend that there is more than one as witnesses on this point. Such an assertion may answer for the latitude of Philadelphia, but it will never do for the full. it will never do for the Fifth Massachusetts rict. The recklessness of such a statement district. is beyond belief.

Our previous statement on this point was a mere reference to the rumor that he had received $2000 for stumping the Fifth Massachusetts district against General Butler, every cent of which, the latter has said, he earned. It appears that the leadership of the anti-Butler element in the district was held by a former postmaster of Salem, who during the war served on Kilpatrick's staff. This circumstance probably accounts for Kilpatrick's part in the matter. His former staff officer induced him to break off some of his engagements in New York and New Jersey, despite the protest of the National Republican Committee, and then paraded him through General Butler's district in regular menagerie style, with a big tent and a band of music. Great crowds of people rushed to see the show, and then went to the polls and voted almost solidly for Batler. Kilpatrick demanded $200 per night for his services as the chief attraction of this travelling menagerie, and it was promised him; but we learn now that there is some doubt about the arrangement having been fulfilled, as one of Kilpatrick's drafts on the ex-staff officer for a large sum was protested on its way through the banks. When the officers of the National Republican Committee protested against his raid into General Batman, and other officers who are in favor of this remedy for Indian outrages, as well as for the thieving and rascality generally that have oharacterized the management of the Indian Bureau attached to the Interior Department. In the army itself Secretary Schofield proposes to consolidate the Quartermaster, Commissary, and Paymaster's Bureaus into one, the Ordnance and Artillery into another, and the Engineer and Coast Survey into a third. This would give three bureaus instead of seven as at present, and the change would not only save expense, but would greatly facilitate the transaction of business. We believe that the experiences of the war fully demonstrated to our army officers not only the expediency, but the necessity of consolidating the three first-named bureaus. In the navy, the duties of paymaster and commissary are performed by a single officer, and with such excellent results that the propriety of adopting a similar system in the army is scarcely doubtful. Most of the arguments in this case would apply with equal force to the union of the other bureans mentioned, and not the least of the good results that would follow would be the saving of a vast amount of red-tape and circumlocution in the transaction of business, a reduction of the supernumerary force, and a more efficient management generally. The abolishing of brevets is another matter that Secretary Schofield is in favor of, and we believe that in this he will receive the concurrence of a majority of persons, both in and THE MERCANTILE LIBRARY COMPANY out of the army. Brevets are, at the best, but empty honors; and that they are a source of great inconvenience and annoyance in many respects are sufficient reasons why they should be done away with. The members of the Army Committee are said to coincide with the Secretary, and we hope that they will present the subject to Congress in such a manner as to secure the adoption of the measures of reform without any unnecessary delay.

Among all the departments of the Government, none have had their permanent labors so much increased by the war and its concomitant, the national debt, as the Treasury. The Secretary, who is entrusted with the supervision of the customs and internal revenue. the public expenditures, and the public debt, must possess marvellous capacities to be enabled to act wisely and promptly in reference to all these subjects, and to protect the financial interests of the nation at all points. It is notorious that the revenue laws are constantly evaded, and one of the most important of the obvious reasons for their imperfect execution is to be found in the operous labors imposed upon the Treasury. An effort was made at the last session of Congress to remedy this evil by erecting the Internal Revenue Bureau into a separate department, with the Commissioner at its head; but although this measure was regarded with considerable favor, it was not adopted. A Washington despatch announces that another movement in a similar direction is about to be made by a Senator who proposes to establish a "Department of Revenue," which is to consist of the present Customs and Internal Revenue Bureaus, and to be ler's district, it is positively asserted by those who ought to know that he sent two messengers to Galena, Ill., to obtain the endorsement of General Grant, but without success. The last point made in Kilpatrick's authorized "correction" is simply that he "has delivered his lecture fifteen times free." By a very neat device on the evening when he appeared at the Academy of Music, he led the audience to believe that he was delivering it free on that occasion, and while they were labor ing under this delusion they tendered him a bolsterous round of applause. That he was to receive nothing whatever for his empty eloquence that evening was the impression left upon his auditors; but, on the contrary, he was, on the following morning, paid $200, according to the agreement with him. He was then told that the committee had expected a full house as the result of his popularity, but that, there being less than a thousand people present, the expenses would swallow up all the receipts. Upon being urged to make some allowance for the benefit of the Monument Association, Kilpatrick thereupon handed back $50, and left the city with $150 in his pocket and a mingling of wrath and disgust in his heart. As far as we are advised, he has no present intention of stopping in Philadelphia on his way to Santiago. If he should chance to change his mind, neither the Twenty-first ward nor the Germantown Soldiers' Monnment Association will be likely to request another burst of eloquence from his lips.

Army Reforms.

THE House Military Committee is now engaged in considering what measures are necessary or expedient for the more efficient management of the army and the reduction of the military expenses of the Government. Secretary Schofield has presented his views on the questions of army retrenchment and reform to the committee, and he proposes a number of important changes, the most prominent of which is that the War and Navy Departments should be under one Secretary, the military branch to be managed by a general and the naval by an admiral. A great objection to this proposition is that it would reduce the number of Cabinet officers, and its doubtful expediency under any circumstances will cause Congrees to hesitate about adopting it. The majority of Secretary Schofield's recommendations appear, however, to be extremely judicious, and calculated not only to save money to the Treasury, but greatly to promote the efficiency of the army. With regard to the propriety of the transfer of the Indian Bureau to the War Department, we do not suppose that there is any difference of opinion outside of Congress among disinterested persons; and there is a general desire on the part of the people that Congress will patrick applied for six months' leave of absence accede to the wishes of Grant, Schofield, Sher-placed under the charge of a new Cabinet officer. This division would give ample employment to the heads of both departments, and at the same time afford them opportunities to supervise all important business. A head of the Department of Revenue could be appointed with special reference to his qualifications for thwarting the schemes of the official and unofficial rogues who now prey upon the Government; while a Secretary of the Treasury could be chosen with reference to his ability to discharge the numerous duties appertaining to the present depart-ment which do not relate to the collection of revenue.
