OPENING CEREMONIES OF THE COMMERCIAL EXCHANGE.

The gentleman who undertook to prove that the Association must be a benefit to the city, "and must knock New York."

The gentleman who had never made a speech before, but felt that "he could not let an occasion like this pass by."

Penn's state cottage stood on this very spot,"

The gentleman who thought Philadelphia ought to have a steamship line to Europe, and

This gentleman was the life of the company. He could not make a speech, but "he would sing them The Flying Trapeze."

Hints to Housemaids.

BY ONE OF TREMBELVES. The following daily plan of work for a housemaid in a small family should be printed in bold type, and hung up in a conspicuous place in the kitchen, so that in any emergency it can at once be referred to:-

Half-past six o'clock A. M .- Rise; upon refection, don't. Wait till your mistress rings; it won't trouble her much, and a little extra sucoze will do you ro harm. In the event of the milkman putting in an appearance at this absurdly early hour, let him knock; your master will open the door, most likely-then why need you go?

kight-About this time you had better think of preparing breakfast. If the family are in a hurry, dan't be annoyed if the water won't boil, but make the tea and coffee at once. If the family don't like it, expatiate on the virtues of patience. You will probably be told to "nold your tongue," and to "leave the room." Comply, under protest, with both requests.

Nine-You may now endeavor to snatch a hasty morsel yourself. If the bell rings answer it with your mouth full: this has always a pleas. ing effect, and is sure to be properly appreciated; moreover, if your master and mistress have hearts - as they haven't, as a raie-they are likely to reflect upon the distress they occasion you by interrupting you at your meals, and will refrain for the future from doing so. Ten-Clean up the breakfast things; don't mind smashing a few cups and saucers, It crockeries were never smashed, how are the poor people who keep china shops to live? Look at it from this philanthropic point of view, and be happy.

Eleven-As soon as the master has taken his departure put his study to rights. In this you may allow your mistress to help you, inasmuch as she will turn out the pockets of her husband's dressing gown, and appropriate all the loose half-pence she may find. Burn all the loose papers you find littering the place. Hide away all pipes and everything in the shape of tobacco. Much amusement will be caused when the master comes home. He likes to have a hunt for his slippers- all men do.

Twelve-You ought, your mistress will say, to think of your upstairs duties now: such as making the beds. Reprove her-not too severely, but more in sorrow than in anger. She mayn't like it-but what is that to you? The most efficacious medicines are not always the most toothsome. Say that in your last place you were always allowed to do your work your own way. If young, your mistress will probably give in. Rest a while; read a chapter or two of "The Nun of Nuremberg," or some such exciting romance. Let the kitchen fire out .-Mem. In the winter always keep the nubbly bits of coal yourself, and send only dust up stairs. Write poetry, and take your hair out of papers.

One P. M .- Your mistress will then take a snack by way of lunch, or if there are children they will dine at this hour. Be late with dinner; it improves the appetites of the youngsters, and makes them late at school: then they get into a row, and you are amply rewarded for any annoyance they may have inflicted upon you, and you can go about your work with the consoling reflection that you are at peace with all

Two-You dine now-don't hurry yourselfyou can't afford to suffer from indigestion. Eat heartily, and afterwards have a nap upon the hearth rug. Exercise after a full meal is decidedly unwholesome.

Three-Clean the stepe. Four-Make the beds.

Five-Prepare for your master's dinner. When he comes home a scene may be expected; if you send the food up stairs in a lukewarm condition your mistress will catch it. You then can ascertain how she likes it. If you have a wish of your own, you may have words with her. If so, give her warning; she can't do without you. If she says she can, pack up your traps and leave the house directly. This will show that you are not to be trided with.

Half past Six-Tea. From Seven till Eleven-Flirt with the Muses. Don't clear up the dinner things, but leave them till to morrow. Ask to go out for half an hour, and don't come in till past ten. Swear the house-clocks are all wrong. Have some supper and light literature; put your hair in papers. Don't turn off the gas at the meter: The gentleman who remembered "when you may be blown up in the night. No matter: your mistress blows you up every day. Gala are used to skunning. Go to bed.

Sarabphins.

Are you beauteous as the rose, Sarabphim? Have you snub or Grecian nose, Does a smile white teeth disclose, Does a dimple sweet repose In your chin?

Have you black and glossy hair, Sarahouim? Over forehead broad and fair-With your arching eyebrows rare-Do you friz or braid it there, Sarabphim?

I am trying to surmise, Sarahonim. Have you sparaling, speaking eyes, Does your bosom tail and rise, In response to lovers' sighs, Sarahphim?

Though our eyes have never met, Sarabohim, My fond heart can ne'er forget, And 'tis wildly beating jet For its little stranger pet, Sarah bim.

THE NEW CODE. The following crimes and offenses may be committed with impunity, and without fear of consequences:-

Murdering-an air. Smothering-the feelings. Stiffing-a laugh. Striking-a balance. Forging-anchors Picking-your sters. Stealing - a kiss. Coming-money. Poaching-eggs.

Killing-time.

Breaking into-a gallop. Trespassing-on the attention, Beating-carpets. Shooting-Niagara, and Setting the Delaware river on fire. An old lady attended Episcopal service for the first time just as the congregation were rising. "Oh, don't, don't, good people !" she exclaimed; "I'm not deserving such honor.

Pray, keep your read !" A Fish Stony. - An Alabama paper, speaking of Florida, says:-"There are also numerous small lakes of pure water, filled with fish, some of which are only a few rods in extent, while others are from two to ten miles long."
