NEW YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, March 18, 1869. St. Patrick appears to have joined the temperance society, for during the last few years his disike to water has been so great that not a drop has fallen upon the streets during the day slebrated in commemoration of him. Yesterday was no exception to the new rule so recently inaugurated. The skies were blue and the air was baimy, with just sufficient of a "nip" in it to make the paraders auxious to revenge themselves in the unadulterated whisky of the restaurants that swarm around the City Hall Park. For City Hall Park was the centre of all the civic displays. Early in the morning a crowd commenced to assemble there, which gradually swelled until about 2 in the afternoon, when all the Irish societies in the city formed into procession-lines, and were reviewed by Mayor Oakey Hall from the steps of the new Court House. These societies occupied about one hour and a half in moving past. Their display of Irish flags and banners was handsome and expensive, and I am bound to say they treated the stars and stripes with a respectful enthusiasm which was only second to the homage they paid their own colors. There is no Scotchman like an Englishman, is the old saying; and there surely is no stauncher American then the American son of Irish parents. Even the Irish day-laborer and the Irish applewomen, in decorating the implements of their daily labor-hods, stalls, barrows, wagons, and carts-with the shamrock, never forget to twine the red, white, and blue in the closest proximity to it. Writing at this out-of-the way hour, a faint report of a St. Patrick's Day murder, committed yesterday afternoon, reaches me; but the report is so very faint, and the crowd which yesterday morning was squeezed within the Park railings to the point of burst ng, was so orderly and well disposed, that I ismiss the rumor as an exaggeration. The reen flag and the harp of Erin floated every here yesterday in Jersey City, Staten Island, nd Brooklyn, and I suppose the rejoicings ofequal rejoicings taking place elsewhere. Miss Mariott, the English actress, arrived in this city the day before yesterday. As I remarked in a previous letter, she rejoices in the sobriquet of "the elephant," obtained from the ponderous nature of her performances, rather than her physique, which the admirers of the temale form divine had begun to dread was a trifle a la Lucy Rushton. Miss Mariott may be a very good actress, but we have had English actresses here before who might have been very good actresses, only they were not; for instance, Mrs. Scott-Siddons. She halls from the Surrey Theatre, London, which, during her palmiest days there, held about the same relation to the other London theatres that the Old Bowery used to do to the New York temples of amusement. Consequently, is difficult to believe that metropolitan theatrical months will water very much over her, particularly when the "Hamlet" of Charlotte Cushman is remembered. Other theatrical news in this city is not very important, if I except the opening of the dramatic season at Fish's vig opera house next Monday week, and of opera bouge the week after at his little one tnat at present goes under the name of Brougham's. Miss Kellogg took a farewell benefit on Tuesday night, when all the world was surprised at a comparatively slim attendance at the Academy, and the very sparse snower of bouquets, iAs the Patti of America, Kellogg came in for her share of the hot-house, and though President Grant has not followed the example of the Russian Emperor, and given ner a $16,000 set of furs, there are looks enough in New York to pelt her with bouquets which deserve to be paid for, whether they are or not. Every petted public singer nowadays, from the preponderating Parepa down to little Miss Hauck, is forced to become a Lady of the Camelias at the fall of the curtain whether she likes it or not, and musical dilletanti being unable to empty themselves of admiration in any other way. over her, particularly when the fall of the curtain whether she likes it or not, and musical dilletanti being unable to empty themselves of admiration in any other way, rush insanely upon the language of flowers.

The hog-cholera is not a pleasing subject to dwell upon, and yet a few words in reference to it must be said. The trichinosis which lately appeared among the sailors at the? snug harbor? of a sailor's boarding-bouse led the Banitary Superintendent to suspect that diseased hogs must have been imported here from the West. His investigations developed the interesting fact that between five and six hundred hogs arrived in this city from suffalo a few weeks ago, and their carcasses sold out as industriously as possible, in some cases at the rate of seven cents per pound. Thirty or forty dead bogs which the inspector examined were found to be full of the measles, sugar-cured duplicates of which are to be seen for sale at the various groceries where first-class family provisions abound. No supervision is exercised at the depot of the Hudson River Railroad Company, and the loads which have arrived and been distributed through the city are those which were excluded from the Buffalo markets on the ground of being diseased. No effort seems to have been made, however, on the part of the sanitary inspectors to discover the whereabouts of the buyers and vendors of the part of the sanitary inspectors to discover the whereabouts of the buyers and vendors of this diseased meat; and the appalling question which arises in the mind of the metropolitan which arises in the mind of the metropolitan lodger, as he vividly remembers to have eaten ham for breakfast, is, Have I got incipient trichinosis, or have I not?

There is a great deal of truth in the current talk about the hardships single women endure in the struggle to obtain a living here; but there is also a great deal of truth not contained in that talk. Not a few women who are not remarkably gifted with brains, but who possess an incalculable amount of brass and no conscience, make more in so-called literary pursuits than many men do. Not a few "editresses" of fashion magazines get their $50, or $75, or even $100 per week, and it is no credit to them that they do, for the work so paid involves no great extent of mental power, and is only well paid for because those who perform it float amid the scandal and fooleries, and small table talk of fashion—able coteries, and the magazines circulate among people who have no taste for any "lite. able coteries, and the magazines circulate among people who have no taste for any "lite. rature" that is not slipshed and slangy. Ac tresses, too, that have not a twentieth part of the cultivation you meet with in the average women of society, make $15 per night, lithographers, $10, wood engravers, school teachers, designers, bookbinders, compositors, $10, saleswomen average $6. The sempstress is the worst paid of all, averaging not $5 per week; and, considering that she 19 paid by her own sex, I think this ought to teach the women's right women to correct woman's inhumanity vors to set right man's inhumanity toward them.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

Janauschek as "Catharine the Second." Last evening Francein Janauschek appeared to a large audience in a historical tragedy in five acts, by Albert Lindner, of which the Enpress Catharine the Second of Russia is the subject. Historical plays are apt to be dull and uninteresting, and this one cannot be con sidered an exception to the general rule Oatharine the Second of Russia is to a reader of history, like Elizabeth of England, a strongly drawn dramatic character; but when the attempt is made to present the events, or even an episode, of her reign in the concentrated form necessary for stage representation, the dramatist is met by insuple difficulties. Giacometti, to some extent, overcame these in his play of Ettabeth. by dispensing with a plot and giving merely a series of vivid tableaux, in which the queen was the central figure. Lindner hes constructed amore regular work, but his plot, while it contains some strong points, is on the whole rather tame and insipid, and he does not appear to have done full justice to his materials. The most important feature in the play, however, is the portrait of "Catharine," and this is sufficiently well drawn for an able artist like Janauschek to fill up the outlines.

Janauschek's personation of the remarkable woman who, with such relentiess energy, carried out the policy and completed the work which Peter the Great commenced, was a carefully studied. elaborate, and most impressive artistic effort. Jananschek conceived the character thorroughly, and, tender with her grand-daughter, wily with the diplomats, flying in terror from the ghosts of her victims that haunt her dreams, imperious, unscrupulous, but always intent upon accomplishing her plans for the aggrandizement of Russia at all hazards, passing quick as thought from one mood to another. and never for an instant forgetting herself, the great historical portrait, as presented by this fine artist, is one that scarcely another actress upon the stage could even approach. "Catharine the Second" is to be classed with Janauschek's very finest efforts, and in spite of a rather dull play and a not very efficient support, the performance last evening was one that no lover of dramatic art will readily forget. Fraulein Kuehle played the part of "Alexandra" with much grace and feeling, and Messrs, Oeser and Benemann personated "Suvaroff" and "Yurieff" satisfactorily. The other parts were not remarkably well sustained. Who City Amusements.
