SHERIDAN'8 LART RIDE.
On the Wiehata, at break of dasy,*
The Cheyenne chieftain'e village lag The Cheyenne chieftain'e village lay,
The remnant mmall of a mighty band Now seattered and tora like the aifled sand
The wandering winds with warnivgs wake Theg ilf of his maratered kin, t who spake "Pry 1 ify 1 for the morn bringoth
(from Sheridan ninety miles away."

A thonsand horsemess, with weapons brigut
In the frore and frosted morning light,
Ride over the frosty-sheeted ground
With a shaddering, smouldering, snilen sou
With a shaddering, smouldering, sullen sound:
They have seen the tenta in the night's cold
noon,
And backard ride 'neath the veiled moon,
Prepared to pounce, like a bird of prey,
M.
The Indian sire saw the countless throng
Like the trees of the forest, many and strong; Sike the trees of the forest, many and strong;
Ae stood like a hunted hind at byy,
Then seut this message withont delay:-
"Ye are mang, and we are few;
Ye and drink our blood as the sun the dew,
But we have onr women and child Ye oan drink our blood as the sun the dew,
But we have our women and children small,
A hundred aud thirteen sonls in all;
My handtal of warriors are strong and brave,
They will fight my helpless people to asave; They will fight my helpless people to save;
Theren' no fari in the coitrtain's eye,
I eannot fight, for I will not lie.
I came with this pledge only yasterday,
From the father ninety miles away, No answer came: in another breath
They swept to their wretched work of death
With a maddening shout and deafening yell,
Like the dire and droadinu fiende of hell,
And babes from their mothers' breasts were Aorn,
And sires were sealped in the light of morn,
The grond was orimsoned with their blood,
And the river reddened with it Mangle forms las lay bleeding ith and flood.
With a ghostly, gbastig, atckening glare; Urging them on with shount tand call,
On a foaming charger that seemed to say, At the head of a thoosand armed men,
With oraers traced with a bloody pen,
These trembling mothers and babes to elay,
From Sheridan, ninety miles away," Alas! alas! for the deedia that were done
That day at the rising of the sun;
The tongue shall falter, the pen shall fail,
And lips grow white when they tell the tale
How friend and foe on the fleld did lie, How liriend and foo on the fleld did lie,
All mangled and mingled to faint and die;
The victors, pantiog their fams on spread,
Gave no heed to the dying, no chought to then $\qquad$ Their crael and thirsty carnage o'er,
Bekward the warriorrar ride once more;
They pilfered the lightuing from the alies And flooded the conntry with flaming lies,
In these words blazoned allover the land:-
"We have met a hostile Indian band Five hundred, oounting women and all,
A hundred warriors armed did fall;
The frontier's safe, for we gained the day
With Sheridan ninety miles away." There was joy in the eamp of Sheridan
When the branded mininons appeared again,
With their Osage allies, + drunken with blood,
And the liguid hell-fire's maddening flood Anme leaping and dirouting aronngd the fire
Cith the gory faalp of the Indian sire
Like demons they danced till the dawn of day
And

 Rather than basely utter a he,
Whose pleading women and children wore slain
In the light of morn, on the bloody plain,
By a mounted hoat of merciless men, By a mounted horat of merocilesas men,
Under orders traced with a faithess pent Under orders traced with a faithless, pen.,
Making this a "St. Bartholomew's day," Making this a sheridan nisety miles away,
Ans.
