THE TWITCHELLS.

Which of Them Was Guilty?

Statements by Mrs. Twitchell Regarding the Crime-Conversations with the Suicide.

While the public is still absorbingly interested in the tragic fate of George S. Twitchell, still speculating about the truth of his "confession," and still booking for further developments, an account of what was gleaned yesterday from a visit to a near relative, or rather close friend of the suicide, cannot fail to be tagerly received. This relative, a relative by marriage, a lady of the highest Christian character and kindness of heart, was almost daily with Twitchell up to the time of his death. She also, on different occasions, met his wife Camilla, and her conversations with both of them in reference to the marderous deed for which they were arraigned, and on account of which one of them died by his own hand, were frequent, lengthy, and full.

ERRORS CORRECTED.

ERRORS CORRECTED. Among other statements made to us yesterday, the detailed the correct facts of the early life of Twitchell and his first relations with the woman who rwitched and his wife. The most egregious mistakes have appeared in regard to this relationship and the circumstances of the marriage. It has been popularly supposed that he was the in-phew of Mrs. Meore, the sister of the second wife of the elder Twitchell. On the contrary, George S. Twitchell, Jr., was the son of the first wife of his father, and was already a child two years of age when his father, and was already a child two years of age when his father married a Miss Emily Skinner. This Miss Skinner was a sister of Mrs. Moore, and consequently the latter tady bore no relationship at all to the child, except that which was acquired by the marriage. His linfancy and attractive disposition, however, drew all tewards him, until his step-mother regarded him as a son of her own, and Mrs. Moore a nephew of her own. His step-mother soon had children, and he was ranked in every way with them. subsequently became his wife. The most egregious ranked in every way with them.

When George was almost six years of age his father purchased a house on Tenth street, below Sansem, and fitted it up for the reception of his family, Mrs. Twitchell paying a visit to Cincinnat pending the repairs. Now, who occupied the dwelling next adjoining the one purchased by the elder Twitchell? Mrs. Hill, the lady afterwards murdered, and her daughter Camilla. At this time it was that the latter and Mr. Twitchell, Sr., first became acquainted. That acquaintanceship was the poisonous beginning from which sprang all the after tragedy, unhappiness, murder, and suicide. Mrs. Twitchell returned from Cincinnati, moved into her new house, but lived there but a brief while. In three or four years, after a marriage of some cight years she died. CAMILLA APPEARS.

THE LIPE AT CARPENTER'S LANDING. With her death, Mr. Twitchell disposed of the bouse and the furniture, and subsequently took his children to a farm he owned at Carpenter's Landing, Gloucester county, N. J. Prior to taking them there, however, he, for a while, had them boarding in there, however, he, for a while, had them boarding in this city, with Camilla to attend to them. This woman made it known, to use her own expression, that "she was their governoss." When the children went to Carpenter's Landing she likewise accompanied them, to act as housekeeper. At that time she was about twenty-nine years of age; young George, who was under her control, being only cieven years of age. It will at once be marked that she was eighteen years the cider. Thirteen years of comparative quiet life passed at the Landing. George had advanced to manhood, and worked on the farm industriously and steadily. Camilla still retained her position in the house—ostensibly as housekeeper. At this juncture came a break. Camilla's aunt, living in the city of Washington, wrote to her, requesting that she would visit the capital for a couple of weeks. Camilla showed this to the elder Twitchell, expressed her intention to go, and asked couple of weeks. Camilla showed this to the elder Twitchell, expressed her intention to go, and asked him to allow George to accompany her. With what result? At first rejuctant, Twitchell, Sr., consented, and the two started. George had promised his father to be back in a week, and he returned in six days.

"Where is Camilla?" asked Twiteltell, Sr.

"Oh!" replied the son, "her visit is not yet up; she will be back in another week, and wants me to meet her at the station with the carriage."

"Very well."

And then the conversation ended. THE MARRIAGE.

On the appointed day George went to the stahimself. Night passed and they made no appearance. Concerned, if not alarmed, on the following morning, the father was about starting to investigate the matter, when a note was put into his hand, conveying the information:— "We were married last night by the Rev. John Chambers, and are not coming home." "GEORGE and CAMILLA!"

"George and Camilla!"

The freshly-joined pair took boarding for a couple of years, until, at the persuasion of Mrs. Hill, they went to live in her dwelling. When she purchased the property at the corner of Tenth and Pine streets they accompanied her thither.

As was well said by the estimable lady who gave us the foregoing information, "George did not marry her; she married George."

week of his life she was with him in his cell almost every day. Of course, she held frequent and intimate conversation with him.

In all points he confirmed his "confession" already published in the papers. He averred its truth the tay before his death.

He said to our informant many times, with great amphasis, and every appearance of truth:

"Oh! _____, I am innocent of that crime. It is very hard that I have to suffer for a thing I did not do!"

not do!"

The following were likewise some of his remarks:
"I will never be able to go down to the gallows!"
"I was sleeping on the lounge when Camilia called me. I harried down, and she was running up and down the floor, wringing her hands and exclaiming.
Oh, George, I got into a dimently with mother, and have killed her—save me!" I was so frightened that I didn't know what I did. My first impulse was to give the alarm, but she caught hold of my arm and held me back. When we had lifted her out of the window I ran back to my room and threw myself on the bed, without washing my hands."

A day or two preceding his death he signed a paper in the presence of two witnesses, giving his body to the lady whom he called "aunt," for interment at her disposal. This gave her entire control of his

In relation to the poker he said:—

TALES WITH CAMILLA. On Saturday afternoon, the 13th of March, Camilla Twitchell said to our informant:—

"I hear that you are going to Harrisburg. How would it do for me to go with you?"
"Not at all. I wouldn't think of going with you," replied our informant.
"You and McCully," continued Camilia, "are going Bp together?"

"Yes."
"When you do go up," then said Camilla, "whatever you do don't aak for a pardon for him. I don't wont you to ask for a pardon!"
Afterwards, on the 16th of March, our informant did go to harrisburg in company with Mr. McCully. Her endeavors, of course, was unsuccessful. The son of our informant was present during the Boregoing conversation. He asked Camilla:
"What became of the money?"
"The one who did the murder," she replied, "must have carried it off."

have earried it off."

"Do you think that the body was thrown out of the window?" he then enquired.

"I know," she answered, "that it was never thrown cat of the window."

"What makes you think so?"

"I think," she answered, "that it was carried

"I think," she answered, "that it was carried down."

Our informant then said:—
"If it was carried down, there would have been blood all the way down the stairs."

Camilla responded:—
"Oh, no! For whoever took her down had a towel and held it under the bleeding head. We found a towel in the screen (the screen or shed in the yard). She was laid down too carefully to have been thrown out of the window. Her clothes were tucked in too nicely for her to have been thrown out. Had she been thrown out the blood would have been scattered all around in the yard. On the other hand, there was only the pool of blood which had run out from the hole in her bead made by the poker. The towel which was held under the head when she was carried down stairs must have soaked up all the blood. Her dress was torn open, and whoever did the deed must have thrust his hand in and took the pency."

COMBINATION BURNING FIGURD DECLARED EXPLO-FIVE.—Stias Fuller had a hearing this moraling before Alderman Beitler, charged with selling one of the products of refined petrolesim contrary to the act of Assembly of February 14, 2868. The defendent has a store at No. 1029 Market street, and disposed of the continuation burning fluid, which according to his business and is warrants hone. Subjects. The combusiness card, is warranted non-explosive. The complainant is Mr. Robert M. Evans, Inspector of Fetoleum, etc. The latter testified that about a week agohe called upon Mr. Foller in reference to the fluid, and subsequently obtained a sample of the article.
Mr. Fuller also called on Mr. Evans, and was informed that the fluid could not possibly be sold in Philadelphia. A barrel of the article is made up of about forty calleds of barries and two gallons of about forty gallons of benzine and two gallons of drugs. Yesterday afternoon witness tested the fluid, and when it reached 70 degrees of heat it exploded with a light four inches away from the surface of the oil. Witness was severely burned about the right

George Remshard testified that he was present at a test of the fluid in Mr. Evans' office; saw him put some of the fluid in an open vessel and apply a match within a half fach of the vapor, and the fire communicated; he then threw the fluid into a bucket, and the flames came near setting fire to a lot of clothing; witness believed the fluid to be a very danger-ous article.

Mr. Fuller said that every gallon of the fluid sold was accompanied by printed directions for using the same, and if they were carried out no explosion would follow. Fuller was held in $1000 bell for a further hearing at 4 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

FOR THE THIRSTY,-We are pleased to see a beautiful fountain now being erected by the Philadelphia Fountain Society, on the pavement opposite Seventh street, in Washington Square. This hast effort on the part of this admirable society to afford water to both man and beast is a credit to the city, and reflects honor upon its worthy President, Dr. W. C. Swann, and the leavy and continuous discreters of the association of the leavy and continuous discreters of the association. and the lady and gentlemen directors of the associa-tion. We wish them all God-speed, and hope to see many of such fountains erected, before the heat of summer sets in, both for the comfort of man and

New Railroad Complications Jay Gould's New Project.

Special Despatch to The Evening Telegraph.

CINCINKATI, April 13.—It is understood that the officers of the Cincinnati, Hamilton, and Dayton Railroad Companyhave reconsidered their determination to hold the freight of the Great Western Despatch and Eric Rallway Company at their depot in this city, and have made a virtue of necessity by delivering the same without receiving the arbitrary pro rata which they had demanded. This was owing to the fact that consignees who had their freight def afned threatened to commence suit if it was not promptly delivered. The Eric and Atlantic and Great Western Despatch Comprides are now receiving their freight by the Little Miami road, and forwarding from Cincinnati by the same route, every facility in the power of the officers of the Little Mami Railroad having been fully granted. There appears to be no doubt of the fact that Jay Gould and James Fisk, Jr., have resolved upon a new road from Dayton, and proposals have been invited from railway contractors to build a road from Dayton via Franklin, Blue Ball, and Sharon to a point three quarters of a mile east of the Cincinnati, Hamilton, and Dayton junction, thence via a line recently located by the Marietta and Cincinnati road to Cincinnati on the east side of Mill creek, and connecting with the Ohio and Mississippi

A Northwest British Territorial Government. OTTAWA, April 13 .- It is said that the policy of the Government with regard to the Northwest Territory will be to organize a territorial government, with its seat at Red river, giving it for the present only local and municipal machinery and representation in the House of Commons As the population increases a provisional government will be organized, and a certain portion of the territory allowed to come into the Union as a province.

It is expected that $200,000 or $300,000 will be voted this session towards the completion of the road from Fort Williams to Red river.

Sumner's Speech on the Alabama Claims.

Confirmations by the Senate Additional Appointments by President Grant.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Special Despatch to The Evening Telespaph. WASHINGTON, April 13.

The Alabama Claims Treaty was called up by Senator Sumner. He is now delivering his great speech, prepared some time ago, against its ratification. An effort was made to have the debate public, but thus far the Senate has refused to remove its injunction of seerecy. It is thought this will occupy the whole day, as there are others who intend to speak. Desputch to the Associated Press,

FROM NEW YORK.

The Cubinet Discussing the Cuban Question. Special Despatch to The Evening Telegraph.

New York, April 13 .- The Commercial Advertiser's Washington special this P. M. says the Cabinet is in session to-day. All the members are present, and a prolonged and important session upon Cuban affairs is anticipated. It is rumored that news has been received of the salling of a large expedition for the aid of the Cuban

In relation to Cuba there exist serious apprehensions. It is feared that events may compel the United States Government to extend physical as well as moral aid to Cuba, and that the European powers may join Spain in demanding an absolute neutrality. Secretary Fish is opposed both to the President and a majority of the Cabinet, and regards the cause of Cuban independence as hopeless, and desires to base the Government policy on that view. It is anticipated that this diversity of opinion may lead to a reorganization of the Cabinet. The Navy Department is preparing for emergencies, and our iron-clads are being fitted for sea with all activity.
