MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

Elise Holt Burlesque Troupe at the Chesnut. The theatres of the country are now being overrun by a grand army of English blondes, who treat the public to what in the faskion of the hour is termed burlesque, but which means as lavish a display of the female person as a liberal construction of the laws against indecent exposure will permit. The much-abused Black Crook, and the freedom of style which, in the case of Tostee and other French bouffe artists, excited so much indignation in certain quarters, were nothing to the latest developments of the English burlesque. The worst of it is, that this style Of performance has nothing of the grace and elegance of the Black Crook and White Faun ballets, nothing of the real artistic merit of the opera bouffe as interpreted by the Parisian actors, but it is distinguished by a valgarity that is essentially English. Of English burlesque we have had enough and to spare of late, and we shall not be sorry to see a change in the public taste that will make such exhibitions as that given at the Chesnut last evening no longer profitable to managers. The so-called burlesques of Byron and other London writers are not usually on Bubjects that the people on this side of the Atlantic either know or care anything about, and their success depends entirely on a forced adaptation to American tastes by the introduction of local gags and on thewriggling, kicking, smirking, and extravagant contortions of undressed women. The burlesque troupe which left the Chesnut a fortnight ago succeeded because the entertainment presented a variety of amusing features which were entirely independent of the subject of the burlesque proper, and because of the Strong combination of excellent performers. They, however, kept within the bounds of decency, and there was nothing particularly objectionable in anything said or done. Lucretia Borgia, M. D., the piece which wa produced last evening, is about on a parwith Mr. Byron's other efforts in the same line; it is full of puns, some good and some bad, and a fair proportion of jokes and local hits which the audience can appreciate without any great mental effort, but there is not a single really comic situation in the piece except such as are cre ated by the actors themselves.

Miss Elise Holt, the leader of the band, is good looking, neatly built, with a fair singing voice, a fascinating smile that approaches a grin, and a style of acting that approaches close upon the borders of indecency in manner and language. Miss Holt is in many respects the most lively and taking of the blonde interpreters of burlesque that we have had here, but her very free style, and vulgar jests and low songs, are not at all nice. Miss Holt has a good support in Mr. James Lewis as "Lucretia Borgia, Mr. James Carleton as "Rustighello," Mr. Harry Wall as "The Dook," Mr. E. Eberle as "Jubetta, and Misses E. Weathersby, Lillie Eldridge, Bella Howitt, and Ella Spencer, who personate four frolicsome young gentlemen, and display four pairs of pink legs for the delectation of the intelligent

The performance last evening commenced with a piece called The Fool of the Family, which would have been simply stupid had not Miss Howitt's acting made it coarse. If the public like this sort of thing they will give it their patronage; but, as we said yesterday, this is not burlesque in any proper sense of the term, and even if it were, there is such a thing as having too much even of a good thing, and the so-called burlesque performances appear to be now approaching a point where they ought to be discounteranced.

The City Amusements. AT THE AGADEMY OF MUSIC Auber's opera of Fra Diavolo will be performed this evening.

To-morrow Mr. Castle will have a benefit, when Traviata will be given.

well benefit, previous to his departure for California.

At the Arch Lotta will appear in Pepina, for the last time, this evening.

To-morrow evening Lotta will have a farewell benefit, and will appear in a drama entitled The Fe-

On Monday Mr. Barton Hill will have a farewell enefit, when Rosedale will be performed.

AT THE CHESNUT the Elsie Holt burlesque troupe will appear this evening in Lucretia Borgia, la Grand Doctresse. AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE a new opera, by Levy, entitled Punchinello, will be presented this evening, with Miss Susan Galton, Mr. A. Kelleher, and Mr. J. Clarke in the principal parts. The performance will consided with Les Deux Ascagles.

AT THE AMERICAN a number of talented artists will be a proper this evening in a variety and an analysis.

ATTHE AMERICAN A number of salented arises will appear this evening in a variety entertainment.
