Grening Telegraph ANNA E. DICKINSON ON "NOTHING UN-REASONABLE."

ANNA E. DICKINSON is to repeat to-night, at the Academy of Music, the lecture labelled "Nothing Unreasonable," which she delivered at the Cooper Institute on last Friday evening. This production was reported at length in one of the New York journals, and from this report we learn that it consists of a characteristic tirade against depraved male humanity, because it does not confer the right of suffrage upon suffering womankind.

Miss Dickinson assumes at the outset that she is branded as a criminal because she is deprived of the blessed privilege of having her pretty little nose smashed at a delegate election, and of the chance to argue, as a voter, without compensation, the questions which she is now paid extravagant sums for discussing in a flippant and flery manner. She groans under the tyranny of "taxation without representation," but, determined not to be a silent sufferer, she resolves to make the world resound with the echo of her wrongs, especially while she can attract audiences at fifty cents a head to listen to the recital.

She proceeds to argue that it is false to say that women do not want the ballot, and against the positive knowledge on this point which men have acquired from their sisters, mothers, sweethearts, and wives, she puts the clamorous demand of a few chattering viragoes who claim to be the leading women of the age because they have acquired unenviable notoriety by brazen assurance.

The triffing obstacle to acquiescence in her demand which arises from the indisposition of the mass of her sex to assume the rights and corresponding duties of voters being rhetorically disposed of, the next difficulty to be overcome is the prevalent desire of men to withhold the right of suffrage from women. The discussion of this point gives her a capital opportunity to indulge in the invective which is the basis of her reputation, and which is the main secret of her attractiveness as a public speaker. The men, with all their faults and failings, rather enjoy a spirited attack upon their foibles, especially if a pretty woman, in making it, is disregardful of delicacy and decency. The Mrs. Caudle who rehearses her diatribes to an unhappy victim who has no companion in his misery, is a legitimate object of dread; but the pert miss who can hurl missiles at man in the abstract. among a crowd of men, where they can all enjoy the joke and mutually laugh at each other, is well paid for her pleasing entertainment, not because it does any good, or implants a single elevated or useful idea in any masculine brain, but because men like to have other men assailed. The unhappy mortal who would give half his fortune to silence the clatter of a vixenish wife always hears, with great gusto, the reports of the Xantippe speeches dinned into the

Anna E. Dickinson revels in her attacks upon mankind. At a critical period in the war she delighted in vituperating Abraham Lincoln, and before the last Presidential nomirations were decided upon, she made attacks against the private character of General Grant so indecent that only the very vilest of the Copperhead journals were base enough to repeat them when he became the Republican nominee. As the most eminent men of the nation cannot escape her vitriol tongue, it is idle for average male bipeds to hope for mercy, and they are accordingly arraigned for filthy habits, chewing tobacco, wearing dirty clothes, spending their money at drinking-saloons, being cross to their children, deficiency in courage and justice, acting naughtily when they go from ome, especially to Washington-fo lying, cheating, stealing, and scrambling for offices! There is nothing new in these charges, and unfortunately there is a great deal of truth in them. The chief point of the lecture consists in a piquant commentary upon them, and Anna E. Dickinson, in default of a husband upon whom the vials of her wrath could be uncorked. with no better result than mutual irritation, is fortunate enough to secure good-natured audiences, which pay liberally for the privilege of hearing these stereotyped diatribes done up in public instead of in private, and in a style a little better than Frau Van Winkle uses in denouncing the incorrigible Rip. The logic of the lecture forms but a very subordinate portion of the production, but the underlying idea appears to be that since men are so bad, public affairs could not be conducted in worse style if women participated in their managemont. This proposition, however, is by no means established. If female suffrage resulted, as it probably would result, in the most ridiculous, conceited, and positively bad portion of womankind busying themselves in elections and political movements, while the better portion of womankind abstained from such interference (as a large proportion of the more industrious and useful men of every community now abstain from active interference in politics), matters might be made a great deal worse than they are at present. The nation has trouble enough to contend against the host of bad men who figure as politicians. If they are reinforced by the silly and bad women of the land, the republic will soon be beyond redemption. Women rulers have been tried over and over again, but their reign has tended rather to add a new element of corruption to polities than to purify and elevate it. Two prominent examples are now before the world-Queen Isabella, driven in disgrace from Madrid on account of her notoous profligacy, and Queen Victoria, who, with all her domestic virtues, is rapidly growing unpopular in England, because, in nursing her senmental sorrows and enjoying the luxury of woe, she systematically neglects, through a series of years, the light public duties for which she receives a heavy compensation. If Anna Dickinson had had her way in American politics, Abraham Lincoln would have been hurled from the Presidential chair by his own partisans-would the prosperity of our country have been increased by crowning his wife with regal honors? Anna Dickinson thought in the early months of 1868 that Mr. Chase, instead of General Grant, should have been the Rebublican nominee for the Presidency. Her superior indgment was overruled by the men who had the matter in charge. In the light of subsequent events, who was right and who was wrong? It is one of the freaks of nature to make, occasionally, masculine women and feminine men. These monstrosities may wish to have the world reconstructed to suit their distorted natures, but their wishes could only be gratified by seriously inconveniencing the true men and true women who count as a thousand to one against the males who want to wear petticoats and the females who want to wear breeches. "It is the greatest good of the greatest number that nations should aim at, and not the gratification of the exceptional few whose perverted or deficient organizations engender unnatural tastes and hideous opinions.

DE RODA, "THE BUTCHER." DOLCE, the present Captain-General of Cuba. who was reported recently to be lying at the point of death, has asked to be relieved. The home Government has responded by appointing Caballero de Roda to succeed him, and a cable telegram announces that the new Captain-General will leave Spain for Havana on the 15th of June. This man, De Roda, has gained the soubriquet of "The Butcher." His advent in Cuba will tend to thoroughly arouse all the natives who have thus far held themselves aloof from the revolution. Unless he belies his past record, he will inaugurate a more bitter and bloodthirsty regime than that which has been tolerated by Dulce, and the only result that can follow will be the acceleration of Cuban independence.

JOHN E. ADDICES, ESQ., was this morning appointed Health Officer of Philadelphia by the Governor. Mr. Addicks is the zealous President of the National Union Club, an earnest and hard-working Republican, and abundantly deserves the position which has fallen to him. He has been actively engaged in mercantile pursuits in this city for so many years that he is well known to the public as a man of unimpeachable integrity, fully competent to discharge the duties of his new position. The appointment will meet with unqualified approval on all sides.

THE REPUBLICAN REGISTRATIONS.

TO-MORROW afternoon, between the hours of four and eight; the Republican registration officers will be in attendance at the regular places for holding the delegate elections, for the purpose of revising and correcting the list of Republican voters in each election division in the city. Let no person who has not the best of reasons for supposing that his name is already on the lists-positive knowledge of the fact-fail to give the matter his personal attention, in order that he may not be deprived of his vote

The first step towards purifying the halls of legislation at Harrisburg is to prevent, if possible, the renomination of any man who held a seat in them last winter. Not one of these shameless plunderers should be permitted to return, to revel through another session in ill-gotten spoils. Let every one of them who seeks a renomination at the hands of either party be made to understand, plainly and clearly, that the people are determined to do without his services in the future. The disreputable careers of such of them as attempt to secure a renomination, and fail, are at an end, for the present at least. Such of them as succeed in the preliminary contest will find arrayed against them all the respectable journals of the city, and will be defeated if their defeat is within the range of possibilities. But it will be much the better course to begin at the beginning, and to throw them overboard, one and all, at the outset. For the sake of accomplishing this result in every district of the city, the honest and respectable citizens who are allied to the Republican party should attend to-morrow to the subject of their registration. Then, on the following Tuesday, they can go to the polls of the delegate elections, with the balance of power

A CALLOW NESTLING.

HAVE any of our readers ever seen the pitiful exhibition made by a callow nestling in attempting to fly from the maternal nest before his pin feathers are grown? Flop upon the ground he comes, and cries and squawks in a very agony of pain, despair, and impotent rage. Such an exhibition was given on Friday at the University of Pennsylvania, when a young man by the name of George K. Reed-we would gladly refrain from mentioning him for the sake of his friends-gave an exhibition of genuine sophomoric blackguardism under the title of the "Class History of 1869," which must have made the faces of his classmates and every decent person in the audience tingle with shame. A full report of this remarkable performance was given in the Press on Saturday, and if we had not been assured that it was actually delivered on the occasion referred to, in the presence of an audience of decent men and women, we would not have believed that the University could have been so disgraced in its own halls by one of its own graduates, but would have thought it merely a mean, low, and disgusting exhibition of in their hands.

The citizens of Philadelphia, the members of Councils, and decent men and women everywhere, will hesitate now about extending any assistance to an institution of learning that sends out upon society such a specimen of a university training as this young man Reed is, by his own showing. We have already too many such as he now infesting the community, turning everything sacred and virtnous into ridicule, and disgracing society and themselves by their ribaldry. It is to such institutions of learning as the University of Pennsylvania that we look to give our young men the culture, refined taste, and mental and moral discipline that will enable them to take up the great work of civilization and progress, and to carry it on in a manner becoming Christian gentlemen. It would be gratifying to believe that Mr. Reed is but a single and exceptional specimen of an unfledged youngling, started out to battle with the world before he has learned discretion; and it is sincerely to be hoped, for his own sake, that the disgusting exhibition. spread over four columns of the Press, is but a rather more than ordinary virulent specimen of nastiness, and that the spirit of blackguardism which it manifests is not inherent, or else the young man's future is not very promising either for himself or the country.

We are inclined to make the largest allowances for the proverbial frolicksomness of college youths, and not to judge college wit or college rhetoric by too high a standard, but there is a point which no young man with the slightest feelings of a gentleman will pass, and this case is one that calls for a stern and decided rebuke. if only to deter others from following the example that has been set.

Mr. Reed's discourse was simply a low, vulgar, and utterly disgusting diatribe against the college, its professors, and his fellow-students: its attempts at wit are pointless, and the whole performance is one that will bring discredit upon the institution, and which, in future years, if the young man is not wholly depraved, and if he has any sense of shame left in him, will make his cheeks burn with mortification whenever he thinks of it.

If the University of Pennsylvania was a school for feeble-minded children, we could account for and excuse such an exhibition as this. It claims, however, to be an institution of learning second to none in the country, and it is now asking of the public assistance to extend its Before such assistance is granted the facilities. University owes it to itself to clear its skirts of all responsibility for Mr. George K. Reed, for If he is a specimicn brick, the present buildings may as well be razed to the ground, and the property sold to the highest bidder without further delay; for, as an institution of learning and classic culture, it is worse than worthless.

THE New York World of this morning contains the following paragraph in one of its columns, headed "political item s:"- "A series of savage attacks in the Philadelphia TELEGRAPH upon Governor Geary, who is anxious for a renomination, are attributed to the pen of Colo-nel McClure, the man who did not persuade Grant." Nobody but an idlot would seriously attribute the articles in question to Colonel McClure's pen, and that is all we have to say seriously upon the matter.
