Merchantville, N. J.-Where it is and What it is Its Attractions and Surroundings. From Our Own Correspondent,

MERCHANTVILLE, N. J., June 21 .- First of all, how does one get here? Merchantville is situated seven miles from Camden, the thriving city in embryo which is destined some day to become a second Brooklyn, and in the course of its extension to practically absorb Merchantville and many other villages. The new rallroad known as the Camden and Burlington County Road runs directly through the place, the station being just at one end of the string of houses which are at present embraced in the town. . To take the cars of this road, the passenger crosses the Delaware at the upper Market street ferry, and then finds himself at the depot of the company. In going the seven miles by rail, about eleven minutes are consumed, and no more, so that the entire distance of this place from the State House in Philadelphia, as measured by time, is about twenty minutes! That is certainly equal to West Philadelphia, and better than Germantown. In truth, this suburban village is as accessible as the outer portions of the great city itself, and yet is in the heart of a most charming country district. Moreover, the common high road joining it to Camden is an excellent turnpike, and those who desire can substitute for the eleven minutes' ride in the cars a delightful drive, regulated by their own ideas of horse-flesh. And now, as to the place itself. To begin with, it is built upon land fully one hundred and fifteen feet above the level of the Delaware river, which certainly goes far towards rendering it a place of great attractions for persons who are not in the enjoyment of the best of health. The town is laid out in wide and regular streets, in naming which the familiar nomenclature of Philadelphia has been largely drawn upon. Each and every one of the streets is sixty feet in width at all points, and, by a regulation of the place, all the houses that have been built, or may be built hereafter, are required to stand back from the line of the street a distance of fifty feet, making a total distance of one hundred and sixty feet between the houses on the of posite sides. But, even now, this grand thoroughfare on the main avenue can boast of something more than mere width. Each side of the roadway, for a distance of three-fourths of a mile, is lined with delightful shade trees, making the sidewalks a long and attractive promenade, of which the population en massa are accustomed to avail themselves in the summer evenings. A prominent feature of this promenade is the brilliancy of the lawns and gardens which follow in such quick succession. There has been ample space at command in laying them out, and all the appliances of nature and art have been resorted to that they may be as attractive as possible. Many of them are perfect gems in their way, and the general effect upon the stranger is exceedingly favorable and impressive. As to the houses already erected in the town, there are about forty which are completed, and these are all specimens of elegant and elaborate suburban architecture. But not with the view to consult comfort alone, but to attract the eye of taste, they present, both without and within, all the features of the modern country mansion, with the additional luxuries of gas and water, which are available for every new comer. Among the gentlemen who have already east their lot in this new and thriving settlement are the Hon. Alexander G. Cattell, one of the United States Senators from New Jersey; Elljah Cattell, Esq., his brother, and like him a member of the well-known firm of A. G. Cattell & Co.: George Crump, Esq., the acting British Consul at Philadelphia; E. S. Hall, Esq., President of the Seventh National Bank, D. S. Stetson, Esq., and a number of others who are prominent in business and financial circles in the city.

New accessions to the population are constantly being made, and new buildings always in course of erection. Stone, sand, and gravel, suitable for building purposes, are found near the town, thus diminishing the ordinary expenses of building. At present a large and attractive building is in the course of erection for seminary purposes. The Rev. Thomas W. Cattell is to preside over the institution, which has already secured the promise of sufficient patronage to insure its success. The best facilities for the education of children will be presented by it, those who reside at a distance boarding in the seminary building, while those who live in the town itself will be under the parental eye day after day. There is a neat Methodist church in the village, and churches of all other denominations scattered among the country towns surrounding. At different places in the village, whole squares have been reserved for public parks; and at some future time. when the place has grown as it promises to, these will add greatly to its attractiveness. There is also in the immediate vicinity of the town an elegant greve for the use of picnic parties, which frequently avail themselves of its nttractions. The surrounding country is execedingly fertile and highly cultivated, presenting a varied and beautiful aspect, which completes the attractions of the place.

Merchantville, a few years ago, was unknown. It has been built up and made beautiful through the energy and enterprise of Senator A. G. Cattell and his brother and business partner, who have spared neither time nor money in their efforts to render the village one of the most delightful in the vicinity of Philadelphia. And they have succeeded. Ten years from now Merchantville will rival all its competitors. It is intended to be a collection of summer residences for merchants and business men in Philadelphia, who are obliged to devote close attention to their affairs, and can, only by residing at such a convenient place, secure a combination of the comforts and conveniences of both city and country life. It is just near enough to the city to be readily and rapidly accessible, and far enough removed to be out of its turmoil and dust. The taxes are remarkably low, and a new and powerful incentive is in this respect added to the inducements presented to those who are contemplating a permanent retirement from the city, and yet desire to be within easy reach of it. SUBURBAN.

-A phenomenon of a most extraordinary nature has lately been witnessed by the in-habitants of the borders of the Caspian Sea. This huge salt lake is dotted with numerous islands which produce yearly a large quantity of naptha, and it is no uncommon occurrence for fires to break out in the works and burn for many days before they can be extinguished. Early last month, owing to some abterraneous disturbances, enormous quantities of this inflammable substance were projected from the naptha wells, and spread over the entire surface of the water, and becoming ignited, notwithstanding every precaution, converted the whole sea into the semblance of a gigantic flaming punch bowl, many thousands of square miles in extent. The fire burnt itself out in about forty-eight hours, leaving the surface strewed with the dead bodies of innumerable fishes. Herodotus mentions a tradition that the same phenome. non was once before observed by the tribes inhabiting the shores of the Caspian Sea.

Mr. Fortescue, Chief Secretary for Ireland, stated that the Government was informed that Johnston, a prominent Orange leader in Ireland, had called a meeting to celebrate the 12th of July. This was not an act of hostility to the Government, but the practice of increasing the military force in Ireland about the time of this anniversary was never more necessary than in the present year. In the House of Lords, Earl Grey gave notice that he should move to omit in the Irish Church bill that portion of the preamble which provides that the property or proceeds of said church shall not be held or applied for the maintenance of any church or clergy or other ministry, or for
