Arts of the University of Pennsylvania came off in the Academy of Music.

The spacious building was never filled with a more brilliant audience. The parents, friends, and acquaintanecs of the young graduates crowded orchestrs, parquette, and the circles, their faces radiant with pleasure and gratification, their hands bearing numerous bouquets—foral offerings to the literary successes of the students about to become Alumniand their eyes intent on the stage. This latter was covered with chairs, arranged in a semi-circle, its centre cut with a space in which stood a sort of throne elevated on a small dats. The scene, of course, which made the background was the famous "Sicilian." Without the presence of that immemorial scene, no entertainment of a festive or collegiate kind could be held in the Academy. So Philadelphia has voted.

The scene, as viewed from the stage, was beautiful and attractive in the extreme. Multitudes of young ladies were among the audience—in fact, the gentle ones of the other sex perhaps made the majority of those not directly participating in the proceedings—their rosy checks, moist and luscious lips, eyes like sparkles, and dresses of the sun-beam's hues, constituting a picture on which the eye lingered, and over which it roved with suggestive pleasure. And who could censure the graduates, engrossed, as they were supposed to be, in remembrance of the speeches they were about getting off, for forsaking the accustomed and bookrusty faces of the faculty for those fresher and pretter ones before them?

Punctually at 10 o'clock, having previously gathered in the foyer of the Academy, the professors, followed by the trustees of the institution, and a number of invited notables, entered the hall and took their way in procession along one of the aisles, up a temporary flight of steps to the stage, and thence to the seats respectively allotted them. The Faculty were their dark scholars robes, and presented rather an imposing appearance.

Behind this line came the graduates and under-

Behind this line came the graduates and undergraduates, the former also arrayed, as their professors, in the college gown, and wearing the triangular college cap, the time-honored "mortar-board."
These took their station on the stage, to the right of the faculty; the others were given seats directly behind the orchestra. They all came in to the music of a march played by the "Germania."

When all were seated, and quiet reigned, Professor Stille, Provost of the University, who occupied the chair of state, arose and introduced the Rev. Dr. Newton, rector of the Church of the Epiphany. This reverend gentleman pronounced a beautifully composed prayer, petitioning for the success and prosperity of the institution from which the young men present were just going forth to the world, and of the graduates themselves, in the future and inevitable conflicts they would have to sustain in life. As the echo of his voice died away, the music of the hestra arose to take up the refrain of his suppli-The following programme was then pursued to the

No. 710 Chesnut street. On examining the place, he concluded that it was a fire, and gave an atarm. The firemen arriving on the ground, poured immense yolumes of water in the building, which succeeded in quenching the fames in about an hour. The fire was confined principally to the basement and the first floor, where immense quantities of goods were stored. The damage indicted will amount to nearly $70,000, which is fully covered by insurance in the following companies:

The structure belonged to the firm of W. S. Hansell & Sons, whose loss is about $5000, and is fully covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is at present unknown, but Fire Marshal Blackburn is busily engaged in making an investigation.

THE SCOTT LEGIOS. - This organization is now geting up a handsome walnut frame, with photographs f all the living members. The Scott Legion is composed exclusively of soldiers, both regular and volunteer, who served in the United States army during the Mexican war.

The frame and photographs will be finished in a few days, and placed on exhibition in the window of Mesers. Gihon & Jones, No. 812 Arch street.

PERSONAL.—We learn that the Hon. E. A. Rollins late Commissioner of Internal Revenue, is now acting as President of the National Life Insurance Company of the United States of America, at the company branch office, in Philadelphia, during the temporary absence in Europe of the President, C. H. Clark, Esq. Mr. Rollins has been an active member of the Board of Directors of this company since its organization, and in giving to its interest the benefit of his personal co-operation, and the advantages of his enlarged experience and extensive acquaintance, we confidently look for a renewed impetus to be given to the already unprecedented progress of this great national institution.

COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT .- This evening the first annual commencement of the La Salle College, of this city, will be held at the Academy of Music, Bishop Wood presiding, and distributing the diplo-mas. The institution is located at Juniper and Fil-bert streets, and is under the charge of the Christian Brotherhood, Father Oliver, Director. The War on the Junta and Filibusters in New York-Escape of Colonel Ryan Last Night-

Rumored Mailing of Another Expedition. New York is in a fever of excitement over the new phases which Cuban affairs in that city have assumed. Last night, Colonel Ryan, who was arrested on the charge of preparing to sail with 500 fillbusters, escaped, and, from what can now be learned accomplished that very design to stop which he was taken in custody.

But here is the story as the New York papers of this morning tell it:-

COLONEL RYAN'S ESCAPE.

The Herald states:—
It may not be generally known that Colonel W. A.
C. Ryan, the youthful and dashing-looking CubanAmerican patriot, and commander of the revolutionary forces in New York, was one of the most adroit scents in the Union army downs the way. scouts in the Union army during the war, but such is really the case, and his very appearance, with his long hair flowing down over his shoulders, his calm, quiet face and demeanor, together with his lithe frame and elan of his gait, would almost suggest the idea of his former occupation to any observer. The Colonel has "many a time and oft" found himself is a "pretty predicament" among his grey-coated friends at the South, but always managed to clude their direct suspicion, or, if under arrest, to slip out of their clutches, and no one would be much surprised had he made some attempt to einde the vigi-lance and custody of the officials who had charge of him yesterday.

AND HE DID make such an attempt, and actually succeeded be yond the expectations of his most sanguine friends for he is now as free as the air, having neither given the ball which the court demanded, nor been the re-cipient of any outside favors or kindnesses. In fact, he is one of those young fellows who can always "shift for himself."

She has repeatedly offered to furnish any amount of ball, but the Colonel has invariably declined, even though the Court had expressed a willingness to admit him to ball. About 5 o'clock this lady, with some male to ball. About 5 o'clock this lady, with some male friends, appeared, and the lady again urged him to permit her to give security for him, which he modestly and respectfully declined, stating that "his bonds had already been signed," and that having permission from the United States Marshal to take a drive in company with one of the deputies, he intended at once to go to the Metropolitan Hotal and take leave of a few filends. He shortly afterwards left in a carriage with the deputy, leaving the brunette from the "ever faithful isle" in a state of increase anxiety as to his welfare and deeply regretting nette from the "ever faithful isle" in a state of in-tense anxiety as to his welfare, and deeply regretting the way wardness of the dashing young fellow who had so carnestly espoused the cause of her Spartan countrymen. "Hoys, take good care of him. Treat him well, for he has used me like a prince."

The Colonel kissed his hand, jumped into a carriage, and was lost in the whirl of vehicles on Broad-way. The dozen friends had meantime caught the dying bill, and with firm grasp, though their hands were gloved in kids, had also taken hold of the deputy. The official made frantic efforts to free deputy. The official made frantic efforts to free himself, and struggled savagely to escape from the toils; but he was poweriess, and in a few moments, being taken into an adjacent house, was gently yet securely bound hand and foot and assigned quarters for the night, from which, however, he was subsequently liberated, but too late to do anything towards the recapture of the Colonel.

THE COLONEL'S LAST REGRET. In an interview which the Colonel had with one or two select friends just before his bold escape, he an-nounced his intention, and added, "I deeply regret my having to take this last step, but it is the only one left me, and I consider that the outrages which have been heaped upon me by the United States au-thorities and their injustice towards the Cuban patriots justify the act."

WARDEN TRACY'S STATEMENT. WARDEN TRACY'S STATEMENT.

Warden Tracy, keeper of Ludlow street jail, being called upon and questioned about the affair, said:

About 10 o'clock this morning Colonel Hyau left the jail, in company with Deputy Marshal Crowley, who took him to court, and other prisoners. The other prisoners came back, and I had been all the afterprisoners came back, and I had been all the afterprisoners came back, and I had been all the afterprisoners came back, and I had been all the afterprisoners came back. noon expecting Colonel Ryan to arrive, but between 8 and 9 o'clock Deputy United States Marshals Davis and Crowley came in here with an-other prisoner named Currier, and they stated that at the close of the examination at court Ryan was handed over to the custody of Deputy Marshal Downie. They also stated that Ryan had "hucked and gagged" Downie, and made his escpae from him. They did not state where this occurred, except that it was somewhere near Broadway. I have been since informed that an except way. I have been since informed that an expedi-tion of over 150 men, enlisted on behalf of the Cuban patriots, left Jersey City to-night, and that Colonel Ryan was among the number. The deputies told me that Currier, when arrested struggled hard to escape, and that they had considerable trouble in preventing him and bringing him here to jail in a carriage. At the door of the jail he made another resistance to the officers, but assistance was pro-cured, and he was at last safely "housed."

THE MOVEMENT OF THE TROOPS.

The World relates the following:

Immediately after the Colonel's departure from the Casino, the men who had been at the various rendezvous since the first arrest of the Colonel and the pirate received orders to proceed at once to a common rendezvous which was understant. common rendezvous, which was understood common rendezvous, which was understood to be Taylor's Hotel, in Jersey City, with all their clothing, etc., in readiness to embark for Cuba. From about 6 o'clock to 10 o'clock last evening squads of two and three arrived at the ferry at the foot of Cortlandt street, and, after a brief consultation with one or more tolerably well-dressed men who were lounging about that spot, quietly crossed the ferry and gathered in front of the hotel. Some who were too poor to raise three cents to pay their face, were furnished with transportation by the directors of the affair at the ferry, and thus, all the enlisted men to the number of at least five hundred were promptly ferried across and reached the ren-

Calling in a low tone of voice to three or four of the men, he led them to the middle of the street, where a briefgeonsultation took place, and then he returned to the hotel, seated himself in a chair, and watched. citizen of Cuba. Politics in Texas. Judge Paschal, of Texas, who is now here, is out in a card to-day, defending Governor Jack Hamilton against the charge of deserting to the Rebel party in that State. He denounces General Davis, who heads the opposition to Hamilton, as a bolter from the

In conclusion he says:— If the President will appoint an early election, we will carry the Constitution by an immense majority as well as the Hamilton ticket, unless the Democracy should organize and defeat us all. As it is now, more conservative Democrars are disposed to favor the Hamilton ticket, and will organize and put the ticket in the fie'd if an election can be had in July or August, but I should be very fearful of success if the election be postponed until late in the fail or until after the other elections. We have at least the consolation of knowing that none of our party have opposed the adoption of the Constitution, the Reconstruction laws, or the administration. Nor have we put any hobby for national principle, and we cannot recognize those who do as safe Repub-

Vice-President Colfax in Hartford-He Makes a Speech. Hartford, June 24.—Vice-President Colfax visited both houses of the Legislature to-day. In the Senate he was cordially welcomed by Lleutenant-Governor Wayland, and in reply said it afforded him great pleasure to respond to the invitation so cor-dially given to appear before this Legislature. Standing in this presence, he could not but remem-ber the achievements of the honored living and still more honored dead. The memory of February still more honored dead. The memory of Foote and Sedgwick, of Lyon and Tyler and Terry, and the 5000 soldiers and sailors who followed them on ever battle-field upon land and upon every waverocked frigate and monitor upon the seas, coming up from the valleys and hills of this grand old historic State in defense of their country; and he felt, therefore, honored that the representatives of such a Commonwealth should give him a unanimous and cordial invitation to be their great Mr. Colory are cordial invitation to be their guest. Mr. Colfax after wards visited the House, where Speaker Platt wel-comed him. The House took a recess, and Mr. Colfax was introduced personally to the members, and then returning to the Governor's room, in the State House, he received a large number of citizens who passed through and paid him their respects. Mr. Colfax left by the 5-30 P. M. train for New York.

The Great Eastern Paying Out Cable.

By Atlantic Cable. LONDON, June 24 .- The Great Eastern is 294 knots out from Brest, and has paid out 310 knots of cable. The signals through to the shore are perfect, Confederate Bondholders.

Another meeting of Confederate bondholders was held here last evening, the object being to protest against parts of Sumner's speech, against the Alabama claims treaty, and to petition the House of Commons against granting any compensation for such claims of the United States unless they are adjudicated by an impartial tribunal on principles of equity and international law.

THE GREAT EASTERN.

Her Departure with the new French Cable. A large company of guests were extertained on board the Great Eastern the day before her departure for Brest with the French Atlantic cable. The big ship carries the cable for the first and main part of the line of communication. This cable is 2752 miles in length, nearly 400 miles more than the quantity which sufficed to reach from Valencia to Heart's Content. Material alterations have been made in the arrangements of the ship to emplie her made in the arrangements of the ship to enable to carry this large extra weight. The main tank has been increased to the enormous diameter of 75 feet, and holds 1112 miles of cable. Her after-tank contains 912 miles, and the fore-tank 728 miles. The machinery is the same as that used so successfully upon the last occasion.

One change has been effected which will at all times be useful, but which in rough weather will be of the very greatest value. The rudder will now be worked by steam, and so perfect is the control attained by this means, that one man standing at his place near the centre of the ship can with a turn of his hand control the huge

Of these the Chiltern will proceed to Brest and will lay the heavy shore cable, some six miles in length. The end of this will be buoyed until the arrival of the great ship. The Great Eastern, upon her arrival, will attach the main rone to this end, and will proceed upon her way to St. Pierre, accompanied by the Chiltern and Scanderia. Each of these vessels will carry a portion of the cable, and will be furnished with grappling-irons, buoys, and picking-up machinery precisely similar to that on board the Great Eastern. The William Cory will go on in advance with a portion of the cable, and will lay the heavy shore end at St. Pierre, buoying the end in readiness for attachment to the main cable upon the arrival of the Great Eastern. Her task ended, the great ship will at once return to England. The remaining portion of the cable on board the William Cory will then be used, a spilce will be effected to the line on board the Scanderis, and the length will be completed with the portion borne by the Chiltern, and the line thus be finished to Boston. "The inquiry for money began at an unusually early hour to-day, the first engagements being made before II o clock. The change which subsequently occurred, taken in connection with the fact that a decided revival of the bullish feeling in stocks was brought about later in the day, induces the inference that it was the final effort of the Shylocks to wring extreme rates from the street. They were aware that the Government purchase of bonds would turn nearly two millions of money upon the market late in the day, and hence the necessity for giving it the appearance of activity. The rate at this early hour was as high as one-eighth per cent, per day, equivalent to forty-five per cent, per annum. High rates were maintained up to a quarter to 3 o'clock, when the extreme was a sixteenth and interest. At five minutes to 3 a sudden collapse took place, and one round lot of half a million dollars was offered at seven per cent, currency. It was evident that those who had sold bonds to the Government at noon were anxious to employ their money at some rate of interest over night.

"Foreigh exchange continued quiet, with very little doing. The market is in an uncertain state and buyers are as indifferent as drawers. There is hardly any disposition to discount the effect of the payment of the July coupons held in Europe. Should the foreign demand for our five-twenties prove inactive in the interval to the beginning of next month, the remitators for the contractive in the interval to the beginning of next month, the remitators of the contractive in the second tances for the coupons will probably have to be made in bills. Should the demand continue the literest will go back in the form of more bonds. The one cause counterbalances the other, however. In May large shipments of bonds were made instead of bills. The fact that the interest is so promptly paid keeps alive the foreign investment demand. Another fact has been made manifest within the past-few days. Some of the imported goods stored in bond are going back to Europe. The steamer on Saturday is to take out some French goods which could not be marketed. We have heavily imported this spring, according to the figures of the bonded warchouse, but large quantities came here on commission. There appears to be a limit even to extravagance, and it is to be hoped erest will go back in the form of more bonds. limit even to extravagance, and it is to be hoped it has been reached this season. The question arises, to what extent will our imports be arrested? arises, to what extent will our imports be arrested? It is not supposable that any very large amount of those now here will be sent back, but the merchants who deal in foreign goods will prefer working off what is already here to ordering fresh supplies. It will be curious to watch this new influence upon the course of foreign exchange. Prime bankers' sterling to-day was worth 1031/6/1035/6/ for sight bills,

The gold market was unusually steady, the extreme range recorded in the gold room being from 137 to 137%. One small sale took place at 137%. The market was without animation and operators seemed disposed to await the developments of the next few days. The clique manipulations also appeared to have ceased, and the quotations of to-day were the result of small and comparatively insignificant orders. The record of the operations of the Gold Exchange Bank shows that the purchases of Monday constituted the sales of yesterday. The transactions of the second day were a little larger. When the cliques unloaded their strategy was more When the cliques unloaded their strategy was more discernible than when they bought; hence they in-duced large sales by outsiders, although previously they had the purchases almost to themselves.

the prosecution testified that on the 1th of last month Glancey, with a friend, went to Keenan's tavern to take a drink, and, being intoxicated, he gave Keenan his purse, containing a large sum of money, out of which to take his pay; and he, returning two or three dollars, kept the balance.

On the part of the defense evidence was produced to prove that the proper change was given to the prosecutor, and he went away drunk, and must have lost his money some where else; that the prosecutor had made inconsistent statements of the matter at different times; and, lastly, proved the defendant's and made inconsistent statements of the matter at different times; and, lastly, proved the defendant's good character to show that he was not the kind of person who would do such a thing as this. Jury out. Charles Smith was convicted of stealing a lot of clothing valued at $56. This man was convicted a few days since of entering the Red Lion Hotel, and was then sentenced to the County Prison for fifteen months, and to-day he got him nine months more, making his term of imprisonment two years.

Another of this name, called Charles Smith the second, pleaded guilty to a charge of the larceny of a pair of gaiters, which he was seen to steal from a shop at Sixth and Callowhill streets.

James Smith, colored, pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a silver watch. He was employed by another colored man, and was taken to his house at night to sleep, and when he saw an opportunity he slipped off with his employer's watch.

John Guy pleaded guilty to a charge of the larceny of a saddle and bridle which he stole from a gentleman with whom he was living at service at No. 716 Walnut street. The saddle was recovered in Screeth street.

in Seventh street, below Spruce, where he had sold it.

Richard Miller, a young druggist, pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny. He was employed by an apothecary named Vogelbach, who, of late, suspected him of a series of larcenies. In order to detect him, if he really was stealing, he marked several pieces of money and placed them in a desk, Shorily afterwards it was learned that the prisoner had been spending money freely in the neighbor-hood, and one of the marked notes was recovered from a gentleman to whom the prisoner had paid it.

At the instance of Mr. Vogelbach, an officer went to the store and arrested Miller, and then he acknow-ledged his guilt, restoring part of the stolen money. George Crawford pleaded guilty to the charge of the larceny of a pair of boots, PHILADELPHIA STOCK EXCHANGE SALES. Reported by De Haven & Bro. No. 40 S. Third street. BETWEEN BOARDS.

A RECKLESS GAMBLER.-The London papers fornish some particulars of the beggary of the young Duke of Newcastle, which presents a sad illustration of the fatuity of gamblers on the turf. The balliffs of the fatuity of gamblers on the turf. The balliffs are in possession of his ancestral seat of Clumber. The mansion at Carleton House Terrace is in the like hostile occupation, and certain "heiriooms" of the splendid property of the Clintons are bones of contention between his merciless creditors.

Mrs. Hope, the Duke's mother-in-law, claims a jasper cup valued at £10,000; but the cattle that browse on the Clumber meadows, and the growing crops that are almost ready for the reaper, and the pictures on the walls of his; sid home, have all been lost and won. The Derby Face plunged him deeper in debt by £15,000. His own life estate in the dukedom will probably be taken from him. Folly, like Wisdom, is justified of all her children.

SAD POISONING CASE.—The following is given on the authority of the Frederickton (N. B.) Farmer;
—"News of a sad and alimest unparalleled tragedy reaches us from Fish River Lakes, in the northern part of the State of Maine. On one of these lakes was a lumber camp, in which were thirteen men. One Saturday night, almost three weeks 230, the boss' of the camp left for the settlements, leaving behind him provisions to last the men for several days, but giving them instructions to come out on the following Monday. Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday passed with no tidings from the camp, when a party set out to see if anything was the matter. Arriving at the camp, they found all quiet and apparently descrited; but on entering, the bodies of the twelve men were seen lying on the floor, ould in death. Being somewhat exhausted by their journey, rently descrited; but on entering, the bodies of the twelve men were seen lying on the floor, cold in death. Being somewhat exhausted by their journey, the relief party were about to warm some tea that was already made in the kettle, but on examination they found a large lizard in the kettle, which had been boiled with the tea. It is supposed that the drinking of this tea was the cause of the death of the twelve unfortunate men."
