CUBA. Ryan's Filibustering Expedition - It is Believed to have Sailed from New York - The Armament and Officers - The Cost of the Expedition.

It was announced in yesterday's Times that the report of the sailing of a Cuban expedition on board the steamer Quaker City was a total fabrication, information to that effect having been obtained from the Marshal's office. So far as the vessel named is concerned the contradiction appears to have been correct; but we have received new facts which show that there was more truth than fiction in the statement that an expedition did leave this city on Saturday evening last, whose destination was the island of Cuba. Our information is derived from a person who held official connection with the leaders of the expedition.

It is represented that two parties of filibusters were taken on board the Quaker City, which proceeded to Gardiner's Island Bay, on the extreme end of Long Island, where ocean vessels were ordered to meet them and convey them to Cuba. Our informant states that Colonel John Whitehead Byron, commander of the 1st Cuban Regiment, called a meeting of his officers on Friday evening in the basement saloon on the southwest corner of Broadway and Eighth street, at which he told them to be in readiness to take their departure on the following evening, giving them instructions to collect their men at the West River Park, in the city of New York. They accordingly assembled at the rendezvous named, whence they embarked on board the tug-boat H. D. Cool to the number of 145 men, whose strength was further increased by 78 Cubans, under command of Colonel Whitehead Byron, and a number of boxes and barrels, which were subsequently found to contain water and provisions. In company with the H. D. Cool was the tugboat William H. Webb, which carried several members of the Cuban Junta, who were to see the route on Saturday night.

The H. D. Cool started she steamed up to Jones' Wood, where about twenty-five additional men were taken on board. The tug then proceeded up the East River and Long Island Sound, followed by the Webb, which was loaded with provisions. On the passage up, Colonel Ryan and Mr. Carpenter, a newspaper correspondent, were transferred from the Webb to the Cool. On reaching Harts Island both boats came to anchor and remained there all night. On the Sunday morning they separated, the Webb returning to this city and the Cool going in the direction of Gardiner's Island, near New London, which was the place appointed for the meeting of the expeditionary forces. They were detected into three parties for the purpose of avoiding detection. On the trip the tugboat had short of provisions and water, which caused considerable dissatisfaction among the men. About half an hour after her arrival in the bay she was followed by the tugboat John Chase, which was under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Currier, of Colonel Ryan's regiment. The officers on both vessels subsequently held a consultation in regard to the best course to pursue in searching for the steamer Catherine Whiting, which was expected to be in the vicinity of the island.

It was decided to place Ryan's forces on the Cool, which was the largest boat, and to have the Chase look after the missing steamer. During the day two large sloops made their appearance at the island, carrying arms and provisions, and a number of men. They had on board sixteen pieces of artillery, including six 6-pounders and four 20-pounder Parrott guns; also 4000 Remington breech-loading rifles, 2000 rounds of cartridges, 4000 rounds of shot, 4000 rounds of powder, 8000 uniforms for infantry - the latter consisting of blue blouses, grey pants and felt hats. At 10 o'clock on Sunday morning the Cool left the island for New London, seven miles distant, and was followed by the John Chase. The Cool occupied all day, owing to the dense fog which prevailed. About forty men deserted the boat after her arrival at New London, having become dissatisfied with their officers endeavored to detain them, without success. Some of these men were taken to New London, but the majority left for this city, coming by the cars and by the City of Boston steamer. While the latter was passing within four miles of Gardiner's Island, a large side-wheel steamer was seen in the bay, having a red light at her stern. It was conjectured that she was one of the vessels which the Cuban Junta had engaged for the expedition. Two smaller vessels were observed alongside of her. At the time our informant left the bay on the tugboat Cool the filibusters were nominally under command of Major Currier, under the command of General Spear, of Fenian nationality. It was reported that he had left Philadelphia with his men on Friday evening, taking the cars for Boston, whence they were to embark on a tug-boat in an expedition to Cuba, and that the Marshal's office several times after his escape. He said that he assumed the dress of a policeman and of a sailor.

General D. D. Goicoarria, the reputed leader of the expedition, was taken on board the Catherine Whiting, was brought before Commissioner Osborn yesterday for examination. The complaint against him was made by Henry W. French, of Bridgeport, who testified that he enlisted in an expedition to Cuba, and that he knew Goicoarria to be the leader of the expedition. General Goicoarria was required to give $5000 bail to answer the charge and $3000 to keep the peace.

A Man Impealed. A horrible and a most accident occurred yesterday afternoon in a butcher shop on Stockton street, near Greenwich. A young man was engaged in washing the upper part of a stanchion, standing upon a ladder for the purpose, when the greasiness of the floor caused the ladder to slip from under him, precipitating the ladder to the floor. He was caught by the body, immediately below the breast bone. The proprietor of the shop was luckily present, and succeeded in releasing him from his perilous position. Surgical aid was immediately summoned, when it was found that the instrument had penetrated to the depth of about an inch, but fortunately had injured no vital part. -San Francisco Bulletin, June 28.

The ex-Regel General Mosely has been traveling from town to town in Onondaga, Oswego, and Madison counties during the past week. He makes his headquarters at a hotel here, and thence rides in the adjacent country. When at Fulton, the other day, we hear that he was confronted by a sturdy old farmer, who held him responsible for the murder of his son. A disagreeable scene was likely to ensue - in fact, had commenced - when Mosely was gone. He was and out of town as soon as possible. It is said that Mosely - if this man really is Mosely - is here to seek aid for the regeneration of the South, and that Beauregard and several other ex-Regel leaders are to join him and co-operate in his scheme. This is the story he tells wherever he goes, but he does not appear to have any particular business, except to be lionized, and the suspicion is getting about it that he is not the genuine Mosely at all. But if he is, what of it? - Syracuse Journal, June 26.

GENERALITIES.

Pennsylvania Democrats Quarrelling.

There is an exciting race between the various aspirants for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Pennsylvania, and the candidates are George W. Cass, Asa Packer, and General Hancock. The friends of the first two are anxious to keep Hancock out of the field, because it is believed he will be the most popular before the nominating convention. They have asked the friends of General Hancock to have him write a letter in advance declining the nomination on the ground that he wishes to retain his place in the regular army. Hancock's friends refuse to do this, believing as they do that he stands a good chance not only of being nominated, but elected. The leading Republican politicians admit that Hancock would be the most formidable antagonist that could be brought into the field against Geary, and they are alarmed lest he may be brought forward. Hancock's friends, seeing the opportunity, are determined to push the claims of their candidate before the Democratic Convention. - Wash. Cor. N. Y. Herald.

Repulsive Spectacle.

Meat Inspector Willis S. Oviatt, of the Board of Health, called this morning to the stock trains at the Morris and Essex depot, and discovering a very offensive smell about a box car, ordered it to be opened, when a sight of the most sickening description was revealed. Lying dead upon the floor of the car were twenty-two sheep, twenty lambs, and thirteen calves - fifty-four animals in all; and, indeed, every one of the car contained. Alderman Westerville, President of the Board of Health, was notified by the inspector, and soon after the gentlemen and Health Inspector Albert Mumford visited the train to which the car was attached, and after viewing the sickening scene, ordered the immediate removal of the dead animals, as the stench arising from their carcasses was already impregnating the atmosphere in the vicinity of the depot.

On enquiring of the employees of the company at the freight depot, we ascertained that the 200 sheep and calves in last night's stock train were "chucked in" at Port Murray and Hackensack, and that the fifty-four confined in the air-tight carriage were consigned to J. Anthony and W. Kissinger of this city. The men or woman who thrust into a car six feet high, eight wide, and twenty-five long, fifty-four live animals, then close and fasten the doors upon them in either way, ignorant and reckless, and in either case should be held to a strict accountability. - Newark (N. J.) Advertiser of yesterday.

Yield of the White Pine Mines.

A statement of the business of White Pine for three months, says the Denver News, makes some astonishing revelations. Just twenty months ago the Territory produced 180 tons of ore, which yielded $187,300, or $300 to the ton. The Keystone gave 190 tons, $34,308, or $198 per ton. The Aurora South turned out 153 tons, $14,124, or $92 per ton. The largest yield of any one produced was 34 tons, which yielded $3,900, or $115 per ton. It dwindled down to 548 pounds, which came from the Baker Metallurgical, and yielded at the rate of $684.79 per ton. It is plain that the owners don't want to strain that mine. The next best yield is from the Edwards, $290,000, or $115 per ton, and from that it diminishes to $57-50 per ton from the Santa Rita, which yielded just two tons of ore. Altogether, about 900 tons of ore was reduced, from which the total yield was $262,938.44, or an average of a little less than $274 per ton. As we are told that White Pine was turning out millions, Gilpin county alone is doing better. Colorado has millions of tons of rich ore. The only advantage that White Pine has is in the ease and simplicity of working its simple chert ores. The chert ore, which is the thing to talk about, is a long way off, in the midst of a desert; hard to reach, and "the fools are not all dead yet."

Sumner's Speech in England.

In the Tribune's London correspondence we find the following: - The London papers are considerably obliged to Mr. Goldwin Smith for supplying them with some sort of answer to the just accusation that no one of them has printed the speech of Mr. Sumner, which all of them joined in misrepresenting. Mr. Smith's answer was better than any I saw. It was full of very good things, and of them has now produced a second. The speech, it says, was printed here in pamphlet form, and "widely circulated." It is true a pamphlet edition was printed in London, but it was issued by an American, not by an Englishman. Upon seeing this, Mr. Goldwin Smith had been "widely circulated," I had the curiosity to ask Mr. Stevens how many copies he had disposed of. It was published at a shilling - about 35 cents currency. Mr. Stevens writes me that it certainly was "widely circulated" in one sense, inasmuch as he sent a copy to nearly every town in Great Britain and Ireland where a paper is published. The country press had 165 copies, the London press 20, and 310 were sold. In all, there have been circulated just five less than 500 copies. Of hands which were sent into Mr. Sumner's month what he never dreamed of saying, there have been who know how many millions of copies distributed?

A HELLSH PLOT.

Its Exposure by a Colored Minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. From the Atlanta (Ga.) News, June 26.

Below we publish an extract from a letter, recently received by the Rev. J. W. Harris, of Harris County. We give the extract in his own crude language, which is sufficiently plain to convey the writer's whole meaning, and it bears the impress of truth upon every line of it. This letter exposes a scheme - of which we have several before us - by which a colored minister is almost too wicked and abhorrent to obtain credence. Yet we are forced to believe that there are men who are bad enough to desire even this method of stirring up strife and insurrection, for the purpose of procuring a state of anarchy, in order that they might precipitate the enactment of some extreme and stringent measures, in regard to Georgia, by the next session of Congress. The plot has been conducted with a greater degree of secrecy than ever beclouded the purposes of the infamous Ku-Klux organization.

The following is the letter referred to: - "Whiteville, Harris county, Ga., June 20, 1869. - Dr. B. - I am a Methodist preacher, belonging to the mother church. Occasionally travel over the four adjoining counties. The colored people are doing better than they have done for some time. I belong to the white folks, but I heard of a darkie the other day who was travelling through the country for the purpose of stirring up strife and insurrection. He had been in the States of the Union, and Bullock would give us all forty acres of land and a mule. They say the following: 'But he said we had lived with white folks long enough to know how to make them mad, and when they lay out to pile in, I want you to warn all such folks to stay out of Harris county. If you see any of them, let them know that Union and want to stay there. I want my race to hold off, if the people give it to them. If they are qualified for anything, let them do it. If they are not, let them be idle. We have got that in our section, and I believe General Geary is right in it. It is better to have more than that; I believe that in less than two years the whites here will be willing for us to have it as the President is himself. I will, if they are helping us now, with our churches and with our schools. I don't know how the folks will feel, but I believe it will come in a mighty change through here.' FRANK JOSEPH.

Russia and the Pope.

The Russian Government has at length granted the request of the Pope, that the Catholic bishops in its dominions might be permitted to attend the forthcoming Ecumenical Council. This is the occasion of some discussion in Russia. It is thought that in order to procure this favor the Pope must in his turn have granted something, and one suggestion is that he has probably agreed to address an encyclical to the Polish clergy, warning them not to encourage the rebellious tendencies of the people, and warmly to support the existing Government.

Take Him Home.

Why will not Mr. Andrew Johnson's friends, if he has any, take him home, and amuse him there? While ago the unfortunate old man rushed through Tennessee like a roaring lion, breathing threatening and slaughter; and we believe he really scared the Tennesseans. At any rate they fled at his approach, to that degree that the poor man found the railway stations nearly deserted, and that he fondly expected crowds would meet him.

And now he has returned to Washington, where he is amusing idlers and street boys by his incoherent abuse of everybody except Mr. Andrew Johnson. The times are out of joint for him. He sees nothing but ruin ahead. The country is going to the demitison bow-wow. We are all to be enslaved. Liberty has fled from us forever. And the longer he talks the more the crowd laughs. Is it not shameful to let the poor man make an exhibition of himself in this way? Will none of his friends take him home? For there can be no longer a doubt that he has lost his wits. He has no longer a method in his scolding. - N. Y. Post.

The chief feature of our Money market to-day is the active demand for loans and the consequent rise in the rates. The loans and discounts are distributed among all classes of business men as well as corporations whose obligations mature with the close of to-day, and have to provide for the paying of the usual July dividends and interests. The pressure on the market is consequently sharp, but it will only be of short duration, as the rates generally are not unreasonably high.

THE NEW YORK MONEY MARKET.

The singular and almost inexplicable stringency of the money market noticed in the transactions of yesterday continued to-day, the aggravation being prolonged for a longer period beyond business hours, and extreme rates being more generally paid. In the earlier part of the day the call ranged from an eighth per cent. to an eighth per cent. and interest, many borrowers still deferring their engagements in the belated relaxation hour - come in the afternoon. In this they were doomed to a most annoying disappointment; for the activity increased as a crisis approached, and the rate went to one-half per cent. was paid at that hour. The demand was far from being satisfied at this unusual closing hour of the banks, and borrowers still remained in quest of the money which they had sought in the stock exchange did a stirring business in loans up to a quarter past 4 o'clock, when a few steady borrowers were to be seen at one-half per cent. for the use of money over night. This state of affairs is a puzzle and mystery to the street. That the immediate cause of it is artificial is just what the market is not prepared to admit. The exact object? The hand of the clique in tightening money was very visible to-day. In one transaction of a few minutes, the rate on money collateral, this quarter per cent. and interest the lender requested of him to send his collateral around promptly. The borrower refused to do so, never mind about the security, but just keep the money at 1/2 per cent. and I will pay you the interest. On the lender demanding a transaction of such a character, the borrower, who had been in the market for some order. The incident tells a volume. The large clique during the last two days have been deliberately 'carrying' money and hoping to control the stock market. The market rates have withdrawn enormous sums from circulation. It will be remembered that at the last session of Congress a law was passed forbidding the making of loans on money collateral. This law prohibited the old favorite plan of 'tying up greenbacks.' The clique then only lost the interest on the money which they looked out, but they which they were more than compensated by the turn in stocks. Now they are forced to the expedient of withdrawing the currency in mass, and to pay extravagant rates of interest. But the problem is not over. It was also evident to-day, from the excessive use of gold as collateral, that the precious metal had been used to assist their schemes. They were enabled to get advances of large amounts of currency upon it, and hence helped the general aggravation. The injurious effect of this stringency of money is being felt in all circles having more legitimate need of money than the speculators of Wall Street. Commercial paper is inactive and rates, except at immense discounts, are at a standstill. The market is willing to pay. The best house in New York desiring accommodation at this time in Wall Street would be invited to pay for the use of their paper at ten per cent. The banks would not help them, for they are secretly lending their money at high rates on call to the private banks and are not willing to pay. The market is being kept in a state of uncertainty, and the ordinary greenbacks are just as much entitled to primary redemption - more so perhaps - than the gold certificates. This withdrawal of funds from a financial center so sensitive as New York leaves the market in a state of uncertainty. That margin it is in the power of the clique to make narrower at any time. They have no other resource. The great mass of legitimate borrowers are pushed or compelled to submit to the various demands of those who are fortunate enough to have capital. It is only fair to say that the market is not so much as it appears. The market is a wash, and ought, therefore, not to be quoted.
