NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 3, 1989. In spite of the decision of the Philadelphia Ledge that the 5th of Joly is not a legal holiday, we intend to try what we an do in New York. Every kind of five-cracker has been bubbling forth fire during the past month, and pyrotechnic scaffolds are already up in the open spaces around the public parks.

Does not the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals include children in the list of animals? If so, it ought to do something in punishment of the teachers in private schools who, every other week, are made to figure in our police courts on the charge of cruel floggings administered to their hapless pupils. Corporal punishment is prohibited in the public schools of New York, but the law has not reached the private schools yet, though some of the scenes transacted in the "whipperies" of our first-class establishments might well call in its ald. The love of whipping is a morbid passion, which grows by what'st feeds on. "David Copperfield" says, in his autobiography, that the schoolmaster of his youthful days was never so happy as when he had a chubby boy tight in his grasp, raising wheals upon his tender flesh with the other. I suppose there is a certain piquancy in feeling the strugglings of the victim, and in the sense of power the dageilation creates in the breast of the flagellator. Rousseau says, in his "Confessions," that when he was a boy he used to enjoy being flogged by his governors; and the articles lately published in English newspapers about the "Birch and the Boudoir" go we that at certain schools, as in some of the private ones of this and other large cities, and in certain families where Puritan severity is the order of the day, castigation is elevated into a fine art, and so administered to the young of both sexes as to combine the greatest pain and shame to the sufferer with the most provoking piquancy to the triumphant

The trials of police officers occasionally develop some curious cases. For instance, one man was yesterday fined two days' pay for sitting on a fish-stand; another was fined an equal amount for playing with a fellow-officer in a private yard. Of course such trifles as clubbing a man without cause and locking him up in the station-house "don't count," and deductions are omitted.

The last of the strawberries have been sent us from Hammonton, N. J., and considering that it has already supplied us with one million quarts, I think that is doing pretty well. It is said that the raspberry and blackberry crop will be very large in the same

Why should the public be so greatly surprised at the conduct of Edward B. Ketchum ? Although there is nothing new under the sun, some things are so extremely antique as to have the appearance of novelty, and for hunareds of years in the history of this wicked world there have been repentant sinners who have proved their repentance in a manner that left no doubt upon the minds of even the scoffers, Mr. Ketchum is a high-toned criminal, and I admire high tone, whether it occurs in saints or sinners. As a rule, people who repent do not make good criminals. Their sin finds 'em out too soon, and your criminal ceases to be interesting as soon as he begins to whimper, unless the sinner be a she, and not a he, and possesses the art of weeping without getting a red nose. As long as young Ketchum is unwilling to escape from the hands of the law upon a technical requisition, and will accept no relief but that of unconditional pardon, he shuts us all up, our sardonic smiles vanish, and we have nothing to say, excepting that he evinces moral spunk. Nevertheless it must be interesting to notoriously sin, then notoriously repent, and feel that the world generally will bear you no grudge when your prison doors are unlocked and you walk forth to join your mates again.

Think what a load is off the breast when you once more face the world a clean man, with all your past atoned for, and life before you once again! I I don't speak of the repentant Magdalens now. The justice of the world is such that no Sorosis has yet purified it, and the puny sin of the woman who falls clings to her to her last hour, while the wretch who causes her error is loved and feted by even virtuous women who "know all about him." Not to moralize. however, I think Mr. Ketchum, that notorious New Yorkism, has done the right thing.

One of the evening papers here has instituted a new style in seaside correspondence. It publishes afternoonly a short letter from some half-dozen watering places, in which the various items are comessed each into two or three lines. About twenty these items are compressed into each letter, that the effect of reading them is not fatiguing. ashionable intelligence is boiled down to the most candescent degree, and although people do say at the watering places whence they are written are lot a hundred miles from the editorial rooms of the paper in question, but that they are manufactured at that, there is no occasion for believing such scandal. I wouldn't wish to be scandalous, bless you! whatever else I was.

The strike which recently took place among the walters at the hotels here has caused an unpleasant reaction among the Biddies. The Biddies of New York were always the worst servant-gals in Christendom-worse than those of Philadelphia by all that is imaginable. They lead a more reckless and hardening life, make more money and spend more, and through the means supplied them by their secret clubs, and the property they manage to "lift" while in service, live better when out of a situation than while they are in one. The hope of getting a good servant-girl in New York is wholly chimerical, and some hopeful writer in a recent number of the Atlantic places his only faith in the speedy importation of the Chinese.

Quite a thriving business is carried on in this city by ladies who prepare fashion articles for newspapers and magazines. Indeed, in some cases, fashion literature pays better than romantic literature does. In fact all kinds of literature are beginning to be better remunerated. I know of one lady who assists her husband to the amount of twenty dollars per week, at the expenditure of very little toil; and in these days, when marketing is not so cheap as it was twenty years ago, and you are fortunate in getting a cosy little house in anything like a "situation" for $3500 or $4000, twenty dollars per week is not to be despised. But, then, to think how much of one's talk is made up of money gossipings, the loquacity of lucre, as though it were not disgusting enough to do hard work for hard cash without talking of it afterwards!
