The Grey Reserves at Cape May They are Still in their Element of Glery. The Ball at the Columbia House Last Night.

From Our Own Corre CAPE ISLAND, N. J., July 21.—This devoted island (why an island?) atill echoes to the tread of armed men. It is true-sadly true-that they miss their "Old Commander," who honored them with several reviews within twenty-four hours, but who could not resist the fascinations and last horses of Long Branch for any longer stay at this city by the sea, and so took his departure. The Reserve Greys, however, still lingertendly linger-as if toath to part from a spot made dear to their hearts by so many triumphs and trophies. If it were entirely in place, we should like to Inquire of some intelligent warrior why this "favorite command" are called "Reserve" when they are so promptly out at the present hour, and further why call them "Grey," when their uniform is so uncompromisingly "blue," not to speak of the privates composing the regiment. A wicked secesh from Alabama, of the "gentler sex " mildly suggested at the Stockton last evening that perhaps it was preserved as a mark of respect to our "misguided brothern" of the South, with whom we had a little "onpleasantness." My loyalty, my State pride, my national enthusiasm, were aroused by this unkind insirmation; so much so, indeed, that I cast a withering glance at the offending female, and you may calculate she retired worsted, if not humi-Hatetd. But in spite of the absence of their "belloved Commander" and rile insinuations like the above, the "Blue" Greys are having a gal -orious time. Frem Colonel with eye glasses downs to the highest private with field glasses, all se em determined to make the most of this splen ild opportunity.

Of the hospitalities extended at the Stockton House and Congress Hall your readers are well inform ed through the versatile pen of your accom plished and charming correspondent "Wash tenaw," who wrote from the summit of these high festivities, giving you a taste, and only a t. aste, of the profound deep of that universal je by experienced by these favored sons of fortune in blue uniforms and white plumes. "Semi-oc casional" can drop you only a line at this time to assure you and their admiring friends th at bright buttons continue in the ascendant. Woman, beautiful woman, still smiles upon our "bold soldier boys," and of course fashion fol lows her smiles. The grumbling and jealous um miformed and unfortunate can only remain in patience, beping a time may come when huml de merit and quiet virtue will be rewarded by a smile. This honor the boldest of us can only hope for when these terribly fascin ating blue-greys return to the bosoms of the sir numerous familles. While they remain, we take back seats. In company with some friends, I ventured to remark to a number of ladies, a few d. sys since-mildly, I hope-at the pain they inflicted upon us by this, as I considered, u ndue affection for the soldiers. Mest mafortunate remark! Most illtimed suggestion! In a moment every female eye, blazing with indignation, was upon your devoted and humble servant, and all in a breath exclaimed: "Wretch! Ingrate! Why should it not be? Why should things not be thusly? Have you as inform love for constitutional liberty? Are-" he re I attempted to interpose for one moment to object to the pronunciation of the "are," as if it were spelled "air," but was immediately shut up by a loud how! and a continuation, "Are these not the war-worn and bullet-battered heroes whose valor preserved the life of the republic?" I attempted to object to "life" in that connection, but my voice was drowned by a continuation of "Are (again prosounce 1 air) they not of those that drew swords in that day to maintain the national honor, preserve our beloved Union and hang Jefferson Davis upon a 'crab apple tree?"" What could I do? What could any other poor mortal do under like circumstances? I yielded-I succumbed-I even apologized, most humbly apologized; and so the ball rollson, the forre militaire rages. To-night, at the Columbia, another of these grand entertainments that have distinguished this gay season is given in their honor. General McCandless honors the occasion by assuming its management-ably assisted by J. Travis Quigg, Esq., of the Ocean Wave,-long may he wave in an unwavering line of success. Among the distinguished arrivals we notice Major-General Prevost, who will doubtless review the regiment to-morrow; and as the weather has much improved, indeed we hope settled, within the past day or two, many of the blue-greys are hoping, General Meade, protected by an umbrella and supported by his Quartermaster-General, may be induced to risk a visit for a similar purpose. The leading spirits of the command, especially the young members of Company D, were quite "cut up" at General Meade being prevented by "disagreeable weather" from bonoring them with his presence, They say that if they could at a moment's warning quit their comfortable homes, endure the privations of the camp, the "imminent peril" of the angry breakers, and plunge thus nobly in a "sea of troubles," all for their country and the dear flag, the General might have risked even the terrors of a summer thunder shower to be with and cheer them. Alas, how transient is human glory! "Yesterday against the world he could have stood, supported by a nation's praise;" to-day the glorious sun of Gettysburg, that once illumined all the land, grows dim indignation. In justice to the officers, it is proper to state that they fully sympathize with the General, and to avoid a like misfortune in future, they propose to have their next year's encampment completely covered with an ample awaing, so that 'rains may descend and goods come," but their reviews, which are of the most gratifying character will not be intersupted by "falling weather." This fact will be communicated to all general officers, so that they may have due and timely notice that reviews will not be postponed on account of weather.

After the severe duty and well-deserved glory of this summer campaign at the sea, it is to be hoped that your stay-at-home soldiers will give their companions in arms such a welcome as this Grev (blue) Regiment are entitled to receive; and, as receptions are the order of the day, it might not be out of place for Councils to grant, as on a recent ever-memorable eccasion, the use of Independence Hall for them to receive their friends; after that a subscription banquet, say at the Academy of Music. This, we think, would be well, as these public manifestations of esteem (as on the occasion referred to) exhibit so honestly and truly the public regard and con-sideration. By all means let us have a reception, a review by his Honor the Mayor, and a banquet at the Academy.

INQUEST.

Coroner's Investigation into the Death of James P. Deputy.

This morning, at 11 o'clock, Coroner Daniels held an inquest on the body of James P. Deputy, who died on Monday night last from the effects of injuries received in being run over by a car of the Lombard and South street line on the 3d inst.

The following restimony was oblited.

ceived in being run over by a car of the Lombard and South street line on the 3d inst.

The following testimony was elicited:—

Mra Sherenbrein, living at No. 349 S. Front street, swen—Was just going into my house as car No. 6 of the Lombard and Sowth streets line came along; heard a lady cry cut, and I ran into the street; I thefe saw the man lying on the track near the hind dasher; it happened ten minutes after il o'clook P. M. on the 3d of July; I think the man was crossing the street; the car was going no faster than usual; when the man was carried on the pavement he said, "I blame no one but myself;" I heard him ray that he was a man that drank very hard; but I couldn't say that he was intoxicated on that night.

Mrs. Mary Faunce, living at No. 307 S. Front street, sworn and corroborated the foregoing, saying in addition that after the accident she saked the man how he came to run ahead of the car? he replied, "I thought I could get across ahead of it;" I then said to him, "you ought not to have tried it;" he answered, "No; no one is to blame but myself;" he seemed to be very sensible, and told me the car had "run over his legs;" I have heard no blame attached to the driver by any one around.

Police Officer Brian Feeley, No. 121, and Albert Burns, conductor of the car in question, sworn, and corroborated the foregoing evidence.

Mrs. Gilbert, living at No. 807 S. Front street, sworn—My cry brought all the people around; the man was running across the street when the car struck him; the driver put his brake on at once, and ran to the rear platform; he exclaimed, "My God, I didn't see the man!" I replied, "No, diver, you did not."

The jury rendered the following verdict:—That the said James P. Deputy came to his death by being accidentally run over by car No. 5 of the Lombard and South Streets Passenger Railway Company, at Front and Pine streets, on July 3d, 1869.

The following communication to Messrs. Robert S.
League & Company, Managers of the official Passport Bureau, at No. 135 South Seventh street, Philadelphia, sets forth the new regulations of the State Department in regard to the issuing of passports to native-born and adopted American citizens, and is worthy of the attention of all who propose visiting foreign countries, as they will save much trouble by complying with the laws of the land and procuring a passport. The Government receives a tax of five dollars upon each passport. Messrs. League & Company have, perfected their arrangements so that a passport can be received within twenty four hours after application. received within twenty-four hours after application, either in person or by letter, is made at the bureau in

Citizens of the United States visiting foreign cour tries are liable to scrious inconvenience if unpr-vided with authentic proof of their national charater. The best safeguard is a passport from this de-partment certifying the bearer to be a citizen of the United States. Passports are issued only to citizens of the United States upon application, supported by proof of citizenship.

Persons who leave the country expecting to obtain passports whilst abroad from diplomatic or consular agents of the United states are liable to disappointment, inasmuch as it is the duty or those agents not to grant documents of that character except to persons who are certainly known to be entitled to them; and it is sometimes difficult, if not impracticable, to procure proof of this fact in a foreign country.

Procure proof of this fact in a foreign country.

Certificates of citizenship or passports issued by State authorities are not recognized by the officers of foreign governments; and by the twenty-third section of the act of Congress approved on the 18th of August, 1856, it is made penal for such authorities and functionaries to issue such passports.

When husband, wife, and minor children expect to travel together, a single passport for the whole will suffice. For any other person in the party a separate passport will be required. A new passport will be expected to be taken out by every person whenever he or she may leave the United States, and every passport must be renewed either at this department or at a legation or consulate abroad

COUNTRYMAN ROBBED .- Deborah Mack, living at No. 341 South Front street, keeps a house of doubt ful reputation. On Wednesday evening a country man, with $83 in money in his pocket, went into th place, and while there was drugged and then turned into the street. A policeman came along and ar-rested the countryman and took him to the Third pistrict Station-house, on the charge of drunken-ness. Here he made complaint of being robbed of his money, and a descent was made on the house. Mrs. Mack, Ellen Bremen, Ida Cary, Mary Hooley, a man named Thomas Bennett, were taken into custody. The latter jumped from a second story window in order to escape, but was subsequently captured. The prisoners had a hearing before Al derman Capenter, and were held to bail to answer.

ESCAPED.—About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon eight boys escaped from the House of Refuge. They picked the lock of the inner gate, and then ran past the keeper of the main gate. The latter endeavored to capture them, but failed. Their names are Charles Schwigart, aged 17; owen Farley, 16; Samuel Walker, 12; John McFalls, 16; Mchael Hargraves, 15; John Sellers, 13; Cyrus Winsell, 14; Patrick McGahau, 16. This morning three boys were arrested at Forty-fourth and Lancaster Piks for attempting to enter a shoe store. They gave the names of Wilson, Walker, and Thompson. They proved to be the three lads who escaped from the House of Refuge. They will be sent back to the institation some time to-day. ESCAPED .- About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon stitution some time to-day.

For CHESTER,-An organization known as the For CHESTER.—An organization known as the Moyamensing Hook and Ladder Company has been formed in Oid Chester. For some time past a truck has been building in this city for the new company, at the expense of the Moyamensing Hose of Philadelphia. The latter company left the city this morning for Chester, to present the truck, which is pairted green, and cost the sum of $1500. The members of the "Moya" presented a fine appearance as they marched through our streets previous to their deparance. They were attired in dark suits, with white stats, white gloves, and white neckties. Chief white hair, white gloves, and white neckties. Chie Engineer Downey was in line, and Beck's band preeeded the company.

LEBANON CARD.—This great meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Church will begin on next Thursday, 29th Instant. Through trains will leave the depot at Thirteenth and Callownill streets at 8½ A. M. and 3½ P. M. Excursion tickets are furnished at the low price of 53-22. Board on the ground will be furnished at from 55-56-50-57 per week. The beauty of the site, the convenience of secess (being only one mile from the depot at Lebanov), and the large attendance of ministers and people, will make it a favorite camp meeting. It will no decot prove a grand success.

KELED ON THE RAILBOAD .- This morning at RELED ON THE RAILHOAD.—This morning at 1 o'clock a man named Jahn B. Milligan, 29 years of age, was run over by a train on the Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Baltmore Railroad, at Bell Station, and instantly killed. The deceased resided near the scene of the accident. He leaves a widow and two children. The Coroner will hold an inquest to-morrow at 11 o'clock A. M.

Malicious Mischief.—Some time last night the marbie-yard of Mr. Armstrong, at Twenty-third and Walnut streets, was cutered, and considerable damage done to property. The marble facings for the church at Twenty-second and Walnut streets were distigured. Mr. Armstrong estimates the damage at

THE CHAIRMANSHIP.—Hon. As Packer and Mr. Cyrus L. Pershing, to whom is committeed the selection of a Chairman for the State Central Democratic Committee, have not yet determined upon their man. Last evening and this morning they were in constitution at the Merchante' Hotel, but as, in addition to the delicate and important nature of their duty, a number of telegrams had been received from them from various prominent Democrats throughout the State, requesting them to give the matter most the State, requesting them to give the matter most the State, requesting them to give the matter most the State, requesting them to give the matter most the State, requesting them to give the matter most the State, requesting them to give the matter most the New Promited No.

them from various prominent Democrats throughout the State, requesting them to give the matter most serious consideration, they have yet hesitated to decide. It is generally understood that the principal aspirants for the position are Hon. Samuel J. Randall and Lewis C. Cassidy, Esq., with the chances in favor of the former.

Such has been the pressure of other matters engaing Judge Packer's attention, that he has not been able to draw up a reply to the formal letter of notification of his nomination, tendered him yesterday. It may, however, be prepared some time during the day.

NORTH AND SOUTH.

Views from an English Stand-point of Their Relations-Significance of the Virginia Elections. From the London Star, July 10.

We suppose it is quite certain, and the Virginia news confirms the view, that in any circumstances the South will for a long time be opposed to the Northern Republicans. Party and personal feeling drives the leaders into opposition, and on such points of difference the rank and file will be even more earnest than the leaders. The Republicans will obviously be at a disadvantage in influencing the South, as the party through whose agency the South was overcome. We need not be surprised, then, at reconstructed Virginia casting its vote for the Conservative party. It is quite intelligible, too, that a large number of the negroes, if the telegram does not misinform us, should cast their votes on the same side. In any free Southern election something like this must happen. Opinious go by persuasion and favor, and not reasoning, wherever there are large masses in action; and the negroes, fresh from slavery, remarkable as has been their display of political intelligence, must be largely swayed by the whites who live among them, who know them, and to whom they have been accustomed to look up. We doubt, how-ever, whether the Southern vote will continue steadily Democratic; this would almost mean the permanent estrangement of the South from the Union to which it is held. A majority of 20,000 in Virginia, considering its population, does not imply even now an overwhelming opinion on one side. The governing party in the Union is still able to maintain a fight and even return two negro radicals to Congress. If this can be the state of opinion a very few years after the war, it is at least possible that change of cir-cumstances and of social institutions, and the lapse of time, may disintegrate the majority. As new questions arise, and the old watchwords get out of date, the minority which is most in harmony with the new circumstances is likely enough to be the growing party. It is this last question which is perhaps the most important with reference to the Southern future. The important feature of the revival of Southern prosperity is the acceptance by the people of the social system of the North. There are too many testimonies to leave any doubt of this fact. For good or for evil, as they say, the Southerners are accepting the abolition of slavery as the basis of their industrial life. No other course, indeed, was left open, the precautions of the North being too stringent to prevent he immediate revival of slavery, and a single generation of freedom being enough to make the revival impossible. Still the cordial acceptance of the inevitable might have been long delayed. As it is, the Southerners are now making the best of the case, and plowing, sowing, and reap-ing with all the energy in the world. In spite, also, of some contradictory statements a negro idleness, they are mostly well satisfied with the results, even talking of the abolition of slavery as a good riddance. To quote the private letter of a gentleman which we published some days since:--"The slaveowners tell you, with the most brazen faces, that they are better now than they were before. One large slavcowner said to me, 'The Yankees whipped us out of slavery, but they could not whip us into it again.' Another told me he grew larger crops with twenty-five free negroes than he had done with seventy-five slaves. They have found out already than the Rebellion was economically a blunder." The question is whether, with the Northern social system, the South will absorb something of the Northern sentiment, or will retain the antagonism which was produced and was fed by a war for the retention of the opposite system. There are many signs that the South can hardly preserve its animosity, but the experiment will be every way a novel one, tried under singular conditions. The elasticity of the State system of the Union gives it an immense attractive force, but it furnishes facilities for attempts at organized secession, which may again prove as tempting as before the late war. Here, in Eng-land, our interest in the matter is mostly indi-We cannot follow without interest the political development of a portion of our own race, but there is, fortunately, no cause left for such fierce excitement as that which accompanied former contests.

"A whirlwind or miniature cyclone formed just below the suspension bridge, and continued its course with the bend of the river above the water-works. So powerful was the whirl and so great the suction force developed, that a regular water-spout six or seven feet in height was formed, and was swept along the river by the wind.

'Just above the upper landing there is a small bathing boat, which is fitted up with evergreens as a screen to the bathers as they perform their toilets. At the time when the storm came up, a party of about a dozen boys and men were pathing in the river, and had their clothes hung on the evergreens which formed the side of th boat next to Broad street. Along came the water-spont in its course, whisked the trees from the side, clothes and all, and sent the whole far up into the sky.

"Away went the raiment of the bathers before their astonished eyes, the spirits of the air crawling in and out of the different articles, and tryng all sorts of ways to feel comfortable and at nome in them, but without success. Away went he clothes salling through the air, and followed by the anxious gaze of the bathers until, having seen to a considerable elevation in the region of the water works, they disappeared from view The party swam, some to the boat, which had been drenched and partially filled with water. and the others to the shore. All called loudly for clothes, and each was eager to secure the services of some one to go for a change of attire A number of articles of apparel were finally secured, and then there was great swapping among the crowd to get fitted out. The whole crew finally succeed in getting sufficient cover ing to evade the law, and then started home. The whole affair partook considerably of the ludicrous, and caused much merriment among those who witnessed this freak of the wind.

"This is the first water-spout that has bee witnessed in this section of the country, and the rarity of the phenomenon renders it worthy of more than a passing notice. The regularity its movements in following the course of the river is certainly singular. The suction force or lifting power manifested was very considerable,

—St. Simon alleges, as a proof of the absolute power of Louis XIV, that for a period of ten years his edicts against duelling were scrupuously respected in France. Even the Grand Monarque could do no more than this, and no other French sovereign has been able to effect as much. The spirit of chivalry, as illustrated by a propensity to settle differences by the "Jugement de Dieu" (as single combat was termed in the middle ages) survives to the present day. The spring which has just termi-nated has witnessed in Paris no less than a dozen duels. This is perhaps an unsatisfactory total, if judged by the standard of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, when during the reign of Henri Quatre alone 3000 gentlemen are computed to have been slain in these encounters; but the halcyon days of chivalry are past, and we have perhaps no right to expect more in these degenerate times. It appears that the patrons of this national sport; sometimes an outsider is dragged into these little family affairs, but the quarrel generally originates in a per-sonal attack by a newspaper writer. Happily, fatal results are very rare, the seconds most laudably endeavoring to diminish, as far as in them lies, the perils which environ the man who meddles with cold steel or firearms; while the com-batants themselves seldom appear to desire the "death of the sinner." One gentleman, it is true, recently lodged a bullet in the hip of a fellow journalist; but in most cases the sword is used, and "Thonneur est satisfait" as soon as a hand has been scratched or a shoulder pricked. This system is not quite in accordance with the line of conduct which Polonius recommended to his son, but as long as the absurd practice of duelling is in vogue, it is well that it should be conducted on philanthropical principles, and that we should hear no more of people fighting
