

NEW YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent. NEW YORK, July 23, 1899. Possibly the readers of THE TELEGRAPH may remember a paragraph that a few months ago made the rounds of the principal newspapers in this country and in Europe, and which had relation to

A Beautiful Bouquetiere who had created a great sensation in Paris. The story was eminently a Parisian one. The bouquetiere was an embryo Cora Pearl. Every one said that the sensation could not have happened out of Paris. Every one was wrong, however. The sensation had happened out of Paris. It had happened on a ferry-boat between this city and Brooklyn. At 5 o'clock of any afternoon cross on one of these ferry-boats, the Union, for instance, at the foot of Fulton street, and you shall see a sight which will give you a high idea of one of two things—the wondrous depravity of male residents on Brooklyn Heights, or the ingenious tribute which our ferry-crossers pay to youth and beauty. At that hour a youthful bouquetiere of remarkable beauty, and not more than seventeen, is to be seen offering her nosegays for sale, and apparently unconscious of the warm glances showered upon her. She is not a blonde, she is not a brunette. She has brown hair and hazel eyes, and remarkably red sensuous lips. Her skin is as soft and sweet as petals of the magnolia. Her dress is plain and neat, and just short enough to reveal half an inch of white ankle losing itself in coarse but well-fitting shoes. The girl is a born coquette, virtuous as yet, but intensely vain, and on the road to ruin I said she was unconscious of the warm looks showered upon her. Close scrutiny, however, will detect that she is but too well aware of them, and that she knows how to distinguish between those whom it will be worth her while to remember, and those whose acquaintanceship can confer no sort of prestige upon her. The slight compression of the proud and pouting lips, the soft curl which sometimes moves them, an occasional almost imperceptible toss of the neat Greek head or shrug of the hidden shoulders, whose outlines are elaborately indicated beneath the thin tight dress, a momentary toying with the single rosebud plumed ostentatiously upon the centre of a bosom whose tender half-maturity belongs, as yet, neither to girlhood nor womanhood—these are little evidences of self-consciousness which prove that the damsel is not unaware of her very great attractiveness. No one knows her name, but she goes by the name of the Brooklyn Bouquetiere. She has the finest and freshest nosegays that are to be culled in the suburbs of New York; sells them for twice as much as other flower-girls, and gets her price without its being grudged. Already her pensive eyes are illuminated with sad glory, premonitory of a swiftly advancing fate. The life of a bouquetiere is not long for her. A few days, or a few weeks, and the ferry side will know her no more. I shall see her splendidly equipped driving through the park, and intoxicated with the entrance to a career from which there is no return, in company with hundreds of others. I cross that ferry at night, and gaze upon that sweet young thing—as pure, as fragrant, as fresh, as yet, as the flowers she offers for sale—the vista that is to be her future unrolls itself before me, and I survey her rapid transit through the various levels of a palace, a brothel, a hospital, and a grave.

This is the sermon read to me this morning by the bouquet I bought of her last night, and which now breathes forth its perfumed, moralizing from its vase of fresh water.

An Aggravated Case of Aurora Floydism has occurred down on Long Island. Miss Bradon has written in vain, and the notorious Deans-Boker case having resulted in the highest pitch of earthly happiness to the parties most interested, has utterly failed to point the moral which was anticipated from it. I regret to announce, therefore, that another young female of good family and great expectations has jeopardized her relations with society by falling in love and eloping with her father's coachman. In order to fully understand the incidents about to be mentioned, I must request the reader (as the novelists say) to step back with me for a period of six months. At that era a young man named Corson made his appearance among the then snow-clad verandahs of Glen Cove, and after wandering about in a demoralized and listless manner, succeeded in finding a situation as coachman in a family that shall be nameless. The first of these is that I have a great respect for the family whom the affliction has befallen; and the second is that I don't know what the name is. Mr. Coachman Corson was young, well-made, and not bad-looking. Ditto his employer's only daughter, who was likewise a girl of spirit, and as plump as a partridge. He thought of her in stable and out of stable, and the unstable nature of her possible regard for him formed the stable—the staple, I should say—of his conversation. He used to imagine that he was curling her hair, while he was only curling his mare, and on the frequent occasions when, as the young lady was going horseback riding, she gave him her foot for him to assist her in the stirrup, he used to wonder if the time would ever come when Alvernon (that is the young lady's Christian name) would offer him her hand. The time did come. A Mrs. Corson was recently created whose husband is no other than the coachman in question. Society at Glen Cove is scandalized. Considering the lowly position he held, young C. was extremely fascinating of manner. Being a coachman, there is no impropriety in saying that he wore the "livery" of heaven to serve the devil in.

The S. P. C. A. has got out a truck for the Removal of all Sick and Disabled Animals found in the streets. It is a four-wheeled wagon, elevated on springs about one and a half feet from the ground, and is quite large enough to comfortably hold an ox or a horse. The bottom of the wagon runs on rollers, and, when brought into use, is run out behind, receives its burden, and is then drawn up into the wagon again by means of a windlass in front. The six that are in process of building by the society will be completed by the beginning of August. One is intended for Williamsburg, one for Brooklyn, and four for this city. They would be admirable institutions for the relief of drunken men, who are frequently as ill-treated under the clubs of the police as the lower animals under the whips and bindgones of drivers.

New York Amusements. As is to be expected, everything in the way of amusements is extremely dull. The last nights of Lydia Thompson are announced, but the announcement has not quickened the pulse of the forlorn audiences at Niblo's Garden in any perceptible degree. Early in October a "thoroughly American opera" is to be produced at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Its composer is Mr. E. B. Moore; the theme is an Indian one, I think; the title is Montez; and Mr. E. de Noyse is the librettist. Madame Parpa has already wallpapered the city with the intelligence that on Sept. 15 her "Grand English Opera Company" will commence the season at the Academy of Music. Unfortunately for her, Miss Richings will be just two weeks in advance of her at the same place. Autumn will witness the commencement of a very marked change in theatrical taste. Serious French opera is talked of. A love of Shakespeare will replace the passion for opera bouffe and burlesque. Wallace is not going to forsake the legitimate. Miss Bateman will be here to neutralize the meretricious taste which the coarse anachronisms of Miss Western foster. After all, we are but going through an artistic education, and the day is advancing when all that is most excellent, in all departments of art, will become with us l'amour et la mode—a proverbial antithesis which is borrowed from Patti.

CITY ITEMS. GLENGARY CHEVROT BUTTS—Men's, $11. Do. do. Youth's, 8. Do. do. Boy's, 6. HALF WAY BETWEEN BENSSETT & CO. 17th and 18th Streets. 6th Street. And 609 BROADWAY, N. Y. C. FINERY CLOTHING in the city at CHARLES STOKES', under Continental. SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES On easiest possible terms, by O. E. DAVIS, No. 210 Chesnut Street.

PERMANENCE OF THE BOWELS—Judicious use of Spear's "Standard Wine Bitters" in cleaning the system, in tone, and preventing derangement of the bowels, is almost beyond belief. Try them, and you will be convinced of the fact. For sale by Fred. Brown, Johnston, Holloway & Co., and other druggists.

JEWELRY—Mr. William W. Cassidy, No. 13 South Second Street, has the largest and most attractive assortment of fine Jewelry and Silverware in the city. Purchasers can rely upon obtaining a real, pure article furnished at a price which cannot be equalled. He also has a large stock of American Western Watches in all varieties and at all prices. A visit to his store is sure to result in pleasure and profit.

THE WORLD GROWS WISER. The human stomach has been a shamefully persecuted organ. There was a time when, for every dereliction of duty, it was punished with huge doses of the most disgusting and nauseous drugs. In vain it rejected them, and (literally) returned them upon the hands of those who administered them. They were forced upon it again and again, until its solvent power was thoroughly drenched out of it. The world is wiser now than it was in that drastic era, when furious purgation and mercurial salivation were what Artemus Ward would have called the "main hold" of the faculty, in cases of dyspepsia and liver complaint.

THE GREAT MODERN REMEDY FOR INDIGESTION AND BILIOUSNESS IS HOTTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, a preparation which has the merit of combining a palatable flavor with such tonic, aperient, and antibilious properties as were never heretofore united in any medicine. It has been discovered, at last, that sick people are not like the fabled Titans, who found prostration so refreshing that, when knocked down, they arose from the earth twice as vigorous as before. When an invalid is prostrated by powerful depleting drugs, he is apt to stay prostrated; and the debilitated, being aware of the fact, retreats to the holding up to the knooping down system of treatment.

OWING TO THE LATENESS OF THE SEASON, THE ENORMOUS SIZE OF OUR STOCK, and ALTERATIONS ABOUT TO BE COMMENCED ON OUR BUILDINGS, we will reduce ALL OUR PRICES, and sell out our SUMMER STOCK, SUITS, COATS, PANTS, VEGET, EVERYTHING, at a HEAVY DISCOUNT. Those who know how very cheap we have been selling this season will be surprised at our being able to make a STILL FURTHER REDUCTION, but our object is to clear out the tables of the stock with which they are still loaded, notwithstanding the fact that our sales this spring have been 50 PER CENT. GREATER than ever before.
