AMONG THE IRON FURNACES.

The Iron Region of the Lehigh Valley-The Iron Works Near Easton-A Trip on the North Pennsylvania Railroad. From Our Own Correspond

GLENDON, Pa., July 29. The beautiful valley of the Lehigh, with its mineral wealth, its fertile fields, its lovely river, and its romantic scenery, has the eyes of all Pennsylvania fixed upon it at this moment, for is not Asa Packer, the money king of this region, the candidate of the unterrified for the Governorship? and are not his millions expected to carry the beggarly fortunes of the Democracy through the campaign and, to stimulate the activity of the party of "principles not men?" Asa Packer is reported to be worth some $20,000,000 at the present moment. It will be a curious calculation for him to be made to figure up his wealth next October, and find out how much there is remaining to him after the Democratic managers have gone through him, as they certainly expect to do. However, politics are not my present theme, and leaving Mr. Packer to dream of Gubernatorial honors, I will say something of matters of more permanent interest.

Did any of the readers of THE TELEGRAPH ever see a "cast" made at an iron furnace? If not, it would well repay them to make a trip to this place to enjoy the sight, independently of the beautiful scenery they will enjoy on the road. Day and night, year in and year out, the furnaces are roaring and flaming without intermission. All night long they give a magnificent illumination, flashing into the river that runs swiftly by, and lighting up the horizon for miles. Four times in each twenty-four hours a "cast" is made; the boiling, bubbling cauldron of fire is opened, the refuse is drawn out, and the pure iron malted from the ore is run off into moulds and made ready for the market. The spectacle afforded by a "cast" made at midnight is something worth a little enthusiasm for any one who has an eye for the picturesque.

An opening made in the bottom of the furnace by a workman permits the "slag" to run off by a side channel; and when all the refuse of the coal, lime, and iron ore, mingled into a hard vitreous mass, has passed off, out pours the liquid iron like water, throwing off brilliant showers of sparks as it runs along the channels prepared for it in the earthen floor of the moulding room, until the whole space is covered with glowing bars of liquid fire. These go by the unromantic name of "pigs," and are the familiar black pig-iron of commerce. The iron which fills the main channel is named the "sow." Not very poetical, it is true; for although the spectacle is magnificent, this is a very practical operation by which the metal is extracted. from the ores and put into a shape for future

The Glendon Iron Company has four furnaces at this place, and one at South Easton, a mile further down the Lehigh river. The largest and most recently erected of these furnaces is about eighty feet in height and ten or twelve feet thick in its widest part. They are built of common red brick, and lined with fire-brick. The new furnace is fitted with a magnificent blast engine built by Merrick & Sons, of Philadelphia. In the oldest furnace the blast engine is run by water-power. The furnaces are shaped like crucibles, or rather they are immense flasks, and with all the appurtenances each one of them is a complete and elaborate establishment of itself. In the process of manufacturing pig-iron, the ore-which is a mixture of hematite, or brown ore, found near this place, and magnetic, or black ore, found in New Jersey -is mixed with limestone and coal, and thrown in at the top of the furnace. The mass is kept Thompson was excessively (though, of course, in a state of ignition by a hot blast, and at the largest furnace every twelve hours, and at the smaller one every twenty-four hours, a "cast" is made. These furnaces are kept in operation night and day, and they use ally burn for about three years, when it is found necessary to "draw" them, for the removal of the slag and clinkers that choke them up, and to make other repairs. This district is the centre of an extensive iron trade. At South Easton is the Stuart Wire Mill, the most extensive establishment of the kind in the country. It sends wire of all kinds to every part of the United States, and it has just filled a large order from Brigham Young, who professes to want it for fences, but in all probability it is intended to cage in his wives. Another large establishment on the Delaware, about a mile below Easton, is the Warren Foundry, which is also one of the most extensive works of this character in the United States. From fifty to sixty-five tons of iron per day are poured at this foundry. Here was cast the large thirty-six inch main for the Philadelphia Water Works, During the past year the Warren Foundry has shipped several thousand tons of water-pipe to California, for San Francisco and Los Angeles. Besides these, there are a number of bolt works, sheet-iron works, rolling-mills, etc. Easton is about twelve miles from Bethlehem. on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and is beautifully situated in the midst of the hills. Indeed, the whole trip from Philadelphia to Bethlehem, on the North Pennsylvania Railroad, and from Bethlehem to Easton, is one that is well worth taking merely for the sake of looking at the country. The North Pennsylvania Railroad passes through one of the richest districts in Pennsylvania. Below Quakertown the landscape is softly undulating and beautiful, with ripening fields of grain, farm-houses bowered among the trees, and its stretches of woodlands.

attractive features of Pennsylvania sceneryscenery, by-the-way, that is not surpassed in the world, and that ought to be more famous than it is. Let some of the readers of THE TELEGRAPH give the fashionable summer resorts the go-by for the present, and invest half the money they usually spend in a visit to this delightful region, and my word for it they will have no cause to regret the change.

NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent. NEW YORK, July 30, 1869. Those wretched mortals who imagine that Count Johnnnes, one of the Most Notorious and Idiosyncratic Bohemians of Gotham, is dead, are miserably mistaken. He is alive, and, if not actually kicking, would like to be executing that toe-and-heel performance upon the persons of various New York editors whom he construes into having libelled him. All his spare time-and his time is as spare as his person-is now spent in visiting newspaper offices and requesting to see the back numbers on files. Those back numbers are supposed to contain libellous paragraphs relating to himself. Indeed, it is dangerous to say anything about Count Johannes in print-dangerous, at least, for those puny-souled editors who live in terror of libel suits. The Count has as keen a scent for libel as a crow has for carrion; and where the libellous paragraph is, there will Count Johannes be found gathered together. While so engaged in contemplating these abusive columns, his appearance is striking, not to say awful and profound. He wears a yellow straw hat, bound with a black tape border, a black bombazinelooking coat, and his florid and furrowed complexion is framed in with a wig, the positive degree of which would be brown, the comparative auburn, the superlative red. He enjoys his reputation modestly. He is stared after in the street, but passes on seeming not to mind it. He might be mistaken for an undertaker who can't get paid for his last funeral, or a Methodist minister obliged to pack up and leave comfortable quarters. He is never so happy as when talking of his daughter, the energetic and volcanic Avonia, or when penning the peroration to a column-long letter to an evening paper. Rumor says that he has on hand a work of unparalleled interest, entitled "The Law of Libel: an Autobiography. Theatrical Items.

Next Monday Joseph Jefferson commences an ingagement at Booth's Theatre. Various stories have gained credit in regard to the length of Mr. Jefferson's engagement and the amount of remuneration he is to receive. Here is the truth of the matter, which I guarantee to be correct. Mr. Jefferson's engagement will be limited to six weeks, terminating on Saturday, September 11. He is to perform seven times each weeksix evenings and at a Saturday matinee. He is to receive half the nightly receipts, and to be assured $500 every matinee. He is likewise to be the recipient of one benefit. The nightly receipts will average $1200, so that during Mr. Jefferson's six weeks' engagement he will make about $25,000, exclusive of his benefit. Fifteen years ago he was an insignificant actor; now, he can command these prices, not at Booth's Theatre alone, but wherever he goes in this country.

Miss Charlotte Thompson, who has been quite ill, and endeavoring to recruit at Long Branch, made her reappearance last night before an audience whose size and good nature were suggestive of the audiences that greeted her first appearance at Wood's Museum nearly a year ago. The programme was excessively long, the temperature was excessively hot, but Miss

NEVER ALLOW DIAMNHORA, DYSENTERY, or any Bowel Affection to have its ewn way, or the most serious consequences may result. By neglecting such complaints the system is often so rapidly reduced as to reach a stage beyond the help of medicines before the patient can realize the necessity of looking about him for a remedy. At this season of the year, therefore, everybody should be provided with the safe and certain curative for all Stomach and Bowel Complaints, DR. JAYNE's CARMINATIVE BALSAM, for with this remedy at hand, all such affections may be promptly and efficaciously treated. Sold everywhere.

ROUSE THE SYSTEM .- It is a sad thing to pass through life only half alive. Yet there are thousands whose habitual condition is one of languor and debility. They complain of no specific disease; they suffer no positive pain; but they have no relish for anythicg which affords mental or sensuous pleasure to their more robust and energetic fellow-beings.

In nine cases out of ten this state of lassitude and torpor arises from a morbid stomach. Indigestion desiroys the energy of both mind and body. When the waste of nature is not supplied by a due and regular assimilation of the food, every organ is starved, every function interrupted. Now, what does common sense suggest under these circumstances of depression? The system needs rousing and strengthening; not merely for an hour or two, to sink afterward into a more pitiable condition than ever (as it assu-redly would do if an ordinary alcoholic stimulant were resorted to), but radically and permanently. How is this desirable object to be accomplished? The answer to this question, founded on the unvarying experi-ences of a quarter of a century, is easily given. Infuse new vigor into the diges ive organs by a course of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. Do not waste time in administering temporary remedies, but wake the system up by recuperating the fountain head of physical strength and energy, the great organ upon which all the other organs depend for their nurture and support.

By the time that a dozen doses of the great vevetable tonic and invigorant have been taken, the feeble frame of the dyspeptic will begin to feel its benign influence. Ap-petite will be created, and with appetite the capacity to digest what it craves. Persevere until the cure is com-plete-until healthful blood, fit to be the material of flesh and muscle, bone and nerve and brain, flows through the channels of circulation, instead of the watery pabulum with which they have heretofore been imperiectly nourished.

PHILADELPHIA,

Softer than steep—all things in order stored, A haunt of ancient Peace."

Some of your readers are doubtless still cogitating where to spend a portion of the summer. Fashion demands that the city shall be forsaken by all but the regular can't-get-aways, the children need a chance to breathe the fresh air and have a run in the green fields, and there are a thousand-and-one reasons why the dwellers in the city should go out of town for few weeks at least during the hottest weather. It is a question whether the debate which is going on in some minds between the sea-shore and the mountains, the fashionable watering-places, and the less expensive summer haunts, might not be advantageously settled by a trip to this region. There are hundreds of pleasant farm-houses, many se cluded villages where those who really wish for the benefits of fresh air, healthful exercise, and wholesome fare can enjoy themselves in a rational and inexpensive manner, and be able to return to the city reinvigorated in body and mind. It takes but about two hours to run from Philadelphia to Bethlehem, and a trip on the North Pennsylvania road to that place is worth making for its own sake; and for those who have business in the city, the facilities afforded by frequent trains are such that no serious inconvenience would be felt by most citizens in spending the summer months there or at some of the intermediate places. Above Quakertown the country begins to get mountainous, but it still possesses the peculiarly

By means of this arrangement the alarm is sent out so rapidly on each circuit that the whole number of alarm-stations will receive one blow on the gong within one and a half seconds, although the force of the battery is thrown on only ten circuits at one time.

A good deal of kindly-meant but quite unnecessary sympathy has been bestowed upon the Widow of the Late N. P. Willis.

That lady, far from being left in needy circumstances, is situated so comfortably in regard to this world's goods that she would probably decline the subscriptions which the late purchaser of "Idlewild" proposed should be raised for her. "Idlewild," it will be remembered, was the property of Mr. Willis and for many years his place of residence. It has lately been sold, however, and has passed into the hands of Mr. Thomas George, a wealthy lawyer of Newburg, and a friend of the poet-editor. Mr. George proposes taking formal possession in next October, and will then rescue the estate from the neglect into which it has fallen. Nathaulel Parker Willis was not, perhaps, as prudent and saving a man as he ought to have been; but the sensible and accomplished woman who is his widow knew how to compensate nobly for the improvidence that was an integral part of his faster and impetuous nature. Though "Idlewild" is no onger her home, she is one of those few excepions to the list of poets' widows who are contented with a competency, and have a competeney to be contented with.

The entertainment presents amusement and variety enough to satisfy the most urdent pleasure-seeker, and the Arch Street Theatre is as cool as it is possible for such a building to be this hot weather.
