THE STATE WAS GIVEN TO US IN TRUST, TO HOLD AND CONTROL, BUT NOT TO BE TRANSFERRED TO ANY RESPONSIBLE BOARD OR TO BE PLACED UNDER THE CHARGE OF ANY CLOSE CORPORATION. If an effort to reform the management of the Girard estates should result in the total loss of all the property involved, and the heritage of the orphans should be seized by the parties who have long been striving to clutch it, Philadelphia would be forever disgraced, and the Directors of Trusts bill would be a permanent monument of the folly and iniquity of Pennsylvania legislation.

We hope, therefore, that the law will be proved to the bottom, not only in our own Courts but in the United States Courts, if possible, before Councils surrender the control of the property. As William M. Meredith has protected the Girard estate heretofore, we hope that, with the aid of his associate counsel, he may make assurance doubly sure by protecting it again from the dangers involved in the proposed new system.

THE GETTYSBURG REUNION.

The reunion of the officers of both contending armies for the ostensible purpose of locating exactly the position of the various corps, divisions, and regiments upon the field of Gettysburg does not promise to be a very great success. The first meeting was held yesterday, and the occasion was chiefly remarkable for the absence of most of the officers who signally distinguished themselves during the battle. Since the invitations to attend the reunion were issued, letters declining have been received from prominent officers on both sides, who pleaded various excuses, and General Lee and other of the Rebel leaders supplemented their refusals by expressing their disapprobation of the whole proceeding as calculated to keep alive memories that ought to be allowed to pass away. It is significant fact that yesterday only two Rebel officers were in attendance, and while other motives than delicacy and good taste probably prevented most of their comrades from putting in an appearance, the fact that they preferred not to come is rather to their credit than otherwise. The plan put in by General Lee, however, is one that will scarcely be admitted by Union soldiers or the loyal people of the country. The battle-field of Gettysburg represents to the Rebels the death blow of their hopes, and they would gladly forget it if forgetfulness were possible. We are perfectly willing to cultivate cordial relations with the people of the South, and to allow the bitterness and heart burnings occasioned by the war to die away, and it depends upon the Southern people themselves to say how soon bygones shall be bygones, at least so far as our social and political relations are concerned, but if General Lee or any other ex-Rebel expects that the scenes of the war will be forgotten; that the battle-fields where the great contest was fought out will leave any other than hallowed memories for the loyal people of the nation, they are mistaken. We can forgive those who attempted to destroy the nation, if they show a disposition to become good and patriotic citizens for the future, but it is impossible to forget either the Rebellion, or the men who originated and carried it on.

As for this reunion, it had a smack of humbug about it from the beginning, and just as the great serpent regularly put in an appearance every summer in the neighborhood of the seaside watering-places for the benefit of the hotel proprietors, so we may expect that there will be an attempt to make capital out of the Gettysburg battle-ground, by getting up some sort of an excitement to attract visitors who fail to be enticed by the fabulous virtues of a certain mineral spring that, by a singular coincidence, was discovered upon the field of battle, and which was immediately appropriated by a joint stock company for the benefit of humanity in general, and themselves in particular.

The most prominent portions of the battle-field are already known with sufficient accuracy, and unless all the officers and all the men of both armies could be gathered together, it is not likely that any additional information of importance could be elicited by the meeting of a few officers like that now in progress. Of course, no particular harm is done by such reunions, and in all probability next summer some other device will be adopted to bring Gettysburg into notice by means of the soldiers. Such reunions have their use, too, in advertising candidates for office, and it is important with more than one of the participants just now to be kept prominently before the public. What is to be deprecated is the attempt to give a national importance to an occasion that is of very little national interest or value, and that seems principally designed to benefit the pockets of a few individuals.

The ELDER WELLEN cautioned his hopeful son to "beware of the vidders." The warning has received a timely illustration out in Indiana. A worthy German took unto himself a wife of the daughters of his people, but she had tasted the joys of wedlock before, and her second spouse no sooner found himself a married man than his peace of mind was disturbed by vague fears that husband No. 1 would shortly turn up in the role of "Enoch Arden," to the utter demoralization of the household. There was no foundation for his fears, but he entertained them for all that, and so heavily did they press upon his mind that he did not even bethink himself of a divorce, albeit a resident of the paradise of marital insecurity. So the poor man drank whisky until he could not drink whisky any longer, and then varied the entertainment with a mixture of lager-beer, arsenic, and morphia, of which he also persuaded his wife to partake, and the twain will be buried in one grave. If this melancholy story is properly circulated and ventilated, there is not a widow in the land whose chances for engraving a second man to ruin will not be damaged fully ten per cent.

THE TRUE REMEDY.—A despatch from Washington states that a circular is about to be issued in the revenue marine service which specially prohibits, under pain of dismissal, the mixing of public and private business by the employes of that department. The object aimed at is the prevention of special favors to persons who possess, or are supposed to possess, influence among high officials sufficient to secure the promotion of the clerks who take particular trouble to facilitate their business with the department. Every branch of the Government is subject to the injustice of this system, and the true and only certain remedy for it and a hundred other defects in our civil administration is the creation of a civil service, on the basis of that in vogue in nearly every European country.

ISMAEL PASHA has given the Sultan ample assurance of his loyalty, and so the war cloud in the East blows over for the present. But for all that, the relations between the Sultan and the Viceroys of Egypt are on anything but a stable basis, and the time is not far distant when a fatal and final rupture will occur. If the Western powers were to hold themselves aloof, the Viceroys would soon pave the way for the utter disruption of the Ottoman dominion by throwing off the mask and the Turkish yoke without delay. All outside pressure removed, Egypt would be more than a match for the rest of the Sultan's dominions, rent with factions and bristling with discontent as they are.

A PRESS BALL is to come off at the White Sulphur Springs, in West Virginia, on Tuesday of next week. The affair will be made the great event of the season, and to insure its success such well-known journalists as M. Blackey Bey, the Turkish Minister, Generals Beauregard and Wise, and the eminently patriotic Jesse D. Bright, have been placed upon the list of managers. A rose by any other name would smell as sweet, and this Rebel conclave is just as unsavory, in spite of the presence of M. Blackey Bey and the disguise of a slight misnomer.

THE AMNESTY to political exiles by which the French Emperor sought to celebrate the centennial anniversary of his uncle's birth, has resulted in bringing some of them back to Paris. Such dangerous cases as Rochefort were not embraced in the decree, and Victor Hugo will continue to scorn the proffered pardon, as he has done in the past. Like nearly all Louis Napoleon's ostentatious concessions, the last will prove to be a mere shadow, without vital substance.

METEORIC.

The Celestial Phenomenon of Last Evening.—About seven minutes after 7 o'clock last evening a very unusual celestial display was observed here by people who happened at the time to be gazing skyward. A large meteor shot from the northwest towards the north, taking a course slightly downward and then upward, in a sort of serpent form. Starting like a ball of brilliant light, it gradually increased as it sped along, leaving a bright, lustrous tail after it, very much like that of a comet, and finally bursting like a rocket, scattering jets of light from every point in a direction resembling what the pyrotechnists call a pinwheel. What was somewhat remarkable about this phenomenon was the fact that long after what appeared to be the body of the meteor itself had disappeared the lustrous tail remained, now increasing and now diminishing in brilliancy, for at least ten minutes, when it commenced to gradually fade away. The time occupied between the commencement of the display and the bursting, as it seemed, of the meteor must have been at least twelve or fifteen seconds, and the whole time up to the disappearance of the tail covered some ten minutes. The phenomenon gave rise to quite a lively excitement in the city. The people who witnessed it gave various opinions as to its cause, some holding that it was really the expected comet which astronomers had expected would be invisible to the naked eye, and others contending that it was merely one of those occasional luminous nebulous displays which are known to occur at this season of the year, and which have little importance in the estimation of scientific folks. As a view to obtaining some reliable information on the subject your correspondent visited the Naval Observatory, but found that no one there had noticed the occurrence, for the very good reason that no astronomer was on the lookout in the dome of the observatory at the time of the display. Nearly all the astronomers are out of town, not having yet returned from their expeditions to observe the solar eclipse.—Wash. Cor. N. Y. Herald.

CARD.—At a meeting held on the return of an Excursion Party over the Philadelphia and Baltimore Railroad, and the Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Baltimore Railroads to Concordville, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, on the evening of the 18th instant, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted: Resolved, That in the unalloyed enjoyment we have this day experienced, we cordially recognize our indebtedness to Joseph Huddell, Esq., Treasurer of the Philadelphia and Baltimore Central Railroad Company, whose admirable arrangements and indefatigable attention to the comfort and convenience of each and all on this 15th day of August, 1869, are ever to be remembered. Resolved, That to the President of the Philadelphia and Baltimore Central Railroad Company, Henry Wood, Esq.; to the General Superintendent of the Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Baltimore Railroad Company, H. F. Kenney, Esq.; and to A. P. Danford, Conductor, we tender our hearty thanks for the many attentions received throughout the trip, and particularly do we recognize our obligations to J. J. Hocker, Esq., the proprietor of "Happy Valley," to whose generous proffer we were indebted for the use of his romantic grounds; and to Isaac N. Mills, Esq., the companies' efficient agent, at Ferryville, whose kindness whilst on board of the company's steamer Arctic, enabled us to enjoy the beautiful scenery of the Susquehanna and Chesapeake Bay. The beautiful and picturesque scenery lining the entire route of the Philadelphia and Baltimore Central Railroad, and the rapidly increasing facilities of this growing organization, render it a pleasurable duty on our part to invite the attention of our fellow-citizens to the many eligible and delightful locations for summer sojourns, and also to the tempting inducements which are published in the "North American" and the "Evening Telegraph."

THE GREAT FIRE AT YONKERS. HERRING'S SAFES AGAIN TESTED! YONKERS, N. Y., August 19, 1869. MESSRS. HERRING, FARREL & SHERMAN, New York—Gentlemen:—At the great fire here on Sunday night last (8th inst.), which covered an area of two blocks, we had two of your Safes in our building, which passed safely through the ordeal. When first discovered they were surrounded by burning lumber, and bear evidence of having had a severe test, as our place of business occupied seven lots, all covered with buildings and lumber, all of which were entirely consumed, and to this heat the Safes were exposed. It was with great satisfaction that we found, upon cutting into our Safes, as they were so warped and swollen they could be opened in no other way, that our books and papers and money were all saved; indeed, the bills came out of the Safe without a stain, and nothing is discolored but the binding of the books. Respectfully yours, ACKERT & QUICK.
