The Blondes at the Arch.

Last evening the appearance of Miss Lydia Thempson and her troupe of burlesquers attracted an immense crowd at the Arch, a large majority of whom, it is safe to say, were induced to invest their money solely for the purpose of seeing for themselves whether the blondes really appeared upon the stage in puris naturalibus, or whether report had be-Hed them. There was a general sensation of disappointment when it was discovered that the undressing was not quite up to what rumor had stated, that the indecencies upon which this class of performers rely for securing the ap-planse of the public were so reduced to mere innendo that it was not easy to see where the laugh came in, while such fun as the entertainment did contain was of a character likely to turn the stomachs of people that were at all squeamish. A combination of circumstances has excited a certain amount of curiosity about Miss Thompson as the original blonde, and the consequence was that the opening night attracted an overdowing house. It is to be presumed that those who were in attendance last evening got their money's worth, and it is tolerably certain that a good many were perfectly satisfied that the English, so-called, burlesque is a style of entertainment that it is well enough to see once in a lifetime, if only to find out how low, yulgar, and disgusting women can behave when they try, but which no decent man or woman will ever care about seein again. The piece performed last evenin was entitled Sinbad the Sailor, but it might as we have been anything else. There was no plot, no atsempt to travesty the well-known story, and instead of a burlesque it was merely a series of utterly mane attempts at wit, the entire pointlessness of which was certainly remarkable, combined with sill songs, a good deal of kicking, and other feature that, until the advent of the blondes, were confine to casinos of the lowest class, and never seen on the stage of reputable theatres. If such an enter tainment as this had even the merit of being mastily witty and agreeably indecent, it would not be diff. cult to account for its popularity with a certain class of people, but when indecency is only stupid and legs are bandy, they cease to be worthy of any kind of notice. Miss Thompson, apparently about forty years of age, was perhaps tolerably good looking at one time, but is now decidedly passes. Her voice is harsh, and she cannot sing, but she dances i break-down tolerably well, and this is her only merit as far as we were able to discover. The most attrac tive of the blondes is the good-looking Mis Weathersby, who will be remembered as the redeem ing feature of the Elise Holt troupe; but unfortu nately Miss Weatheraby does not have a leg part ; sh sings nicely, and her teeth are good, and, apparently, all her own; indeed, Miss Weathersby, as far as we can judge, is all herself, and owes little or nothing to artificial attractions. Miss Weathersby, however, is kept judiciously in the background, and the Thompson has no rival to dispute with her for the applause of her audience. Such an exhibition as this is not worth serious criticism, and it is gratifying, from our former blonde experiences in this city, to believe that the public esteem it as little as we do. It is well that the Thompson troupe has appeared here at the commencement of the season. Our playgoers can now see for themselves exactly what the most notorious of the blondes are like, and we hope that she experiences of the next two weeks will be such that managers, burlesquers, and public will be satisfied that yellow hair and pink legs have had their day in this city, and that it is time to try something

Below will be found a record of the changes of the thermometer during the month which expires to-day, as compared with the corresponding month of last year. The figures are taken from the daily record made at the Philadelphia Exchange. For the four weeks past the weather in this city, and throughout the "country, in fact, has been oppressively and steadily hot. The cool mornings and evenings by prescription always imputed to August have been almost unknown. The days were warm and the nights warmer. Of rain we have barely had half-a-dozen drops, and what little moisture remained in the earth the merciless sun has exhaled. Sweating has been the order of the time, straight drinks the only beverage. Who could get water enough to wash? In consequence of the lack of this useful article, while faces may have been kept clean, those portions of the cuticle hidden under yests have been washed only by their own perspira-tion. Particulars of the Dreadful Conflagration on Cupe Island-The Flames Meet with no Ob-stacle-Where the Fire Surfed and How it Forend-List of the Buildings Lost-The In-SHTRDCCS.

second Special Despatch to The Evening Telegraph. CAPE ISLAND, N. J., Aug. S1 .- The 31st of August will be a memorable day in the history of Cape May. At 21/2 A. M, the dreadful ery of fire was heard, and in a few minutes thereafter your correspondent was at the scene of conflagration. At that time it was confined to the small Japanese store of P. P. Boyton, the pearl divar, situated on Washington street, adjoining the Post Office. At this time a few buckets of water would have saved hundreds of thousands of dollars, but the inflammable nature of the ricepaper goods stored in the building, together with the want of organization, and the absence of backets or tools of any description, allowed the fire to obtain such a headway that, in a short time, the frame building on the east of Boyton's were enveloped in flames as far as Townsend's dry goods store, on the corner of Decatur street, opposite the La Fierre House. The La Pierre was closed for the season, and by the presence of mind of Mr. Edmund A. Souder, who directed the crowd, the house was broken open, carpets torn up, saturated with water, and spread over the roofs and out of the windows, not only saving the hotel but Riegel's new cottage adjoining. The wind, at first very light, soon blew pretty brisk in the direction of the sea, the citizens were soon on the ground, and the new hook and ladder truck was brought upon the ground. There was an immense tank holding seventeen hundred gallons in the loft of the United States all of which was used in the pearl diver's store and Post Office, but without effect. About 3:45 A. M. the United States took fire, and in fifteen minutes the whole structure was in rulas, the cupola having failen in about 4 A. M. Burrett's billiard rooms and ten-pin alleys soon following the United States, and the row of stores and dwellings in the old American House following in quick succession the whole block from Decatur street to Jackson street was destroyel. In about twenty minutes the wind carried the spacks across the intervening lot to the new Atlantic Hotel, and this, together with all the stores and stables intervening were destroved. The Centre Bouse was in imminent danger from the sparks, but trees in front of the house protected it somewhat from the intense heat. At this stage of the fearful drama the hose of Congress Hall was brought upon the ground, and with the aid of their engine suceeeded in saving the Centre, thus arresting the spread of the flames in that direction, as well as saving the Ocean House. The old Atlantic was on fire several times, but the flames were put out, and it was saved. The board-walk in front of the new and old Atlantic was burned. The Columbia House was saved by the amost superhuman exertions of Captain J T. Smith, Lewis Stillwell, and Alderman Massey, who, wrapped in wet blankets, kept their poston the roof of the Washington House, though everybody was driven off by the intense heat this being the nearest building to the fire. Had it ignited the Columbia would have been destroyed. The cottage opposite the United States Hotel, on the corner of Decatur and Washington streets, occupied by Hon. William L. Hirst, of your city, was destroyed. The scene from the Columbia House was terrifically sublime. The red flames checked the fall of the frame buildings, and the huge clouds of smoke interspersed with sparks floated out to sea, and hung like a pall above the surf. The buildings destroyed are as follows : - United States Hotel, Post Office, Boyton's store, Townsend's store, Young's bakery, City Surveyor's office; office of Gas Works; Greenwood cottage; Barrett's saloon and tenpin alleys; American House Row; Ellmaker's store; Loftus' saloon; Koenig's lager beer saloon: Sloan's store: Hufnal's drug store; M. Hall Stanton's new building; the old Reigel cottage: Mrs. Bridenthal's cottage; the "Canary Bird;" the old steamboat depot, the Atlantic Hotel, the Atlantic stables. The row of stores between Decatur and Jackson streets were partially torn down to prevent the spread of the flames. The loss of the fire is estimated at over $250,000. Mr. Aaron Miller has about $43,000 insurance on the United States. There was none at all on the Atlantic. M. Hall Stanton's loss is coverel by insurance. Mr. Adolph Proskauer's loss is about $6000; Mr. Bolton's loss in the American Row is covered by insurance. There are various rumors afloat about the origin of the fire. Some attribute it to accident, others to design. Boyton, the pearl-diver, has been arrested. and is now being examined before the Mayor upon the charge of incendiarism, though there seems to be no evidence to warrant the charge, The burnt district presents a desolate appearance. The Weccacoe, Independent, and Western Fire Companies from Camden have just arrived, and are on the ground putting water on the cinders. If the wind should veer round to the south there is great danger that the rest of the island would be destroyed. Estimated Losars.

Jackson street-Reigel's old cottage, $2500; Mrs. Brittethal's, $3500; The Canary Bird, $1000; three other stores, $3000; new Atlantic Hotel, $60,000.

The United States Hotel was sold last week by its recent occupant and owner, Mr. Aaron Miller, to Mr. Charles Conway, of Philadelphia, for $80,000.

Insurances on the United States Hotel. The United States Hotel was valued at about $90,000, on which there were insurances to the amount of $47,000, which were placed by Messrs, John Wilson, Jr., & Brother, of No. 121 South Fourth street, in the name of Mr. Aaron Miller, who owned the entire establishment, in the following companies:--- one thing worse than a great victory-a grea defeat, but in another sense it was an abuse the term "great defeat." Such was the defeat the handful of daring fellows who made a da of thousands of miles in order to meet their con-querers in their own domain. (Cheers.) A de-feat such as that which the Harvards had su tained. (Cheers.) He regretted the absence the Oxford men.

He could not say much of them, good or ba If anything was to be said to their disparage ment, it was that they had won so often I thought that they could afford to lose in th event of another contest. He was sure he o pressed his own feelings, the feelings of Oxfor and the feelings of Englishmen when he bad the Harvards a cordial welcome, and wishe them Godspeed in their homeward journey. Th victory might be the Harvards, the next time Meanwhile he assured them of an enthusiast welcome at home, which would find an echo every corner of England. He concluded am great applause.

Thomas Hughes then toasted the London Clu He referred to his own experiences and the glu-ries of the English universities. He asserted that the Harvard University, in producir Lowell, Motley, Emerson, and Agassiz, he reason to pride itself, and future generation would regard the sons of Harvard with the ven ration given to our Hampdens and others in pa generations. Mr. Clayfair proposed the toast, "Our Vis tors." He regretted that the Harvards had n used a coach or trainer. No crew could atta perfection without a coach. He urged them use one in their future training. After a toast to the London Club, Mr. Ric proposed to the Harvards only to give cheers account of the courtesy and kindness shown the club. They were given amid great applaus
