CANADIAN INDEPENDENCE. From the N. Y. World.

Some days ago the World published a paragraph upon the politics of our northern neighbors, which has now called forth a letter in the same strain from a gentleman with special means of knowing what Canadian wants and wishes really are. This topic is particularly timely just now, since some lewd Canadian fellows of the baser sort have been avowing themselves in favor of annexation to the United States, and holding meetings in furtherance of that design. It is certain that men who hold such opinions are of no appreciable importance in Canadian councils. Neither their numbers nor their characters are such that we can prudently build any expectations whatever upon their proceedings. Even if men of standing among their fellows should join them, as none such have joined them yet, the effect of such an accession would not be to raise the project, but to lower the recruits, in popular regard. Annexation is the least popular of all the many modes by which the Canadians propose to rid themselves of the unhappinesses of their present lot. It is impossible that it should be brought about for some years to come by the consent of the people chiefly concerned. And it would be very unwise in us to make any attempt to bring it about before that consent can be obtained.

The reciprocal attachment of Great Britain and her American dependencies is, it is true, altogether a matter of sentiment. The fine phrases about a common language and a common stock, which we are sure to hear when a party of Americans and a party of Englishmen dine together, tickle the Canadian ear with far more potoncy than that where-with they smite the American tympanum. The reason is that they are much truer in Canada than here. The dialect of Montreal is much nearer the pure Attic of the Seven Dials than is the speech of people in New York. And the Canadian blood, except the local infusion of French in the Eastern provinces-an infusion which is merely local and by no means leavens the whole Canadian lump-is much more homogeneous and much more British than our own. An Englishman who lands in New York feels himself a stranger. He is among a set of people who not only do not think with him or sympathize with him, but who neither look like him, dress like him, nor talk like him. But as soon as he has crossed the border he finds himself among a set of beings precisely after his own heart, accent, and trousers. They have not been transplanted long enough to have any trace of the soil or the climate to which they have been brought, and in the continual ar-rivals of British military and civic officers they are furnished with patterns to which it is the aim of their existence to conform themselves. The main difference between them is that the Kanuck is apt so to better his instruction that he becomes an exaggerated Englishman, and that, as the colonist is said to have been detected at Athens by the purity of his accent, a Canadian in London might be picked out by his superlative and unap-proachable cockneyism,

All this is doubtless very soothing to the souls of both Britons and Canadians. But, in this age, attractions of sentiment cannot, in the long run, prevail over repugnances of interest. Great Britain spends a large sum npon the colonies yearly and gets no appreci-able return for it, except the barren glory of

"Wars of violence and institutions of barbarism are gone. It is ours now to grapple and throttle class legislation and monopoly, to destroy the des-pollers of labor, to champion again the principles of demostratic expansion -not the expansion of irre-deemable currency or unrequited taxes, but the ex-pansion of territory and the establishment anew of local self-government. Let it demand the standard currency of gold and silver, and the repeat of the atrocious tariff which shackles commerce and para-tryzes industry." lyzes industry.

-All which reminds us that the orator was in Congress throughout the long struggle which resulted in the overthrow of "the institutions of barbarism," and noisily, with intemperate denunciation, resisted every step taken to make them bite the dust. "The de-spoilers of labor," by robbing it of its recom-pense and keeping it imbruted and degraded, had no more glib-tongued, unscrupalous pet-tifogger in their interest than this same Cox, and their "class legislation and monopoly" ever found in him a most facile tool. The "local self-government" he delights in would give all power in large districts to less than a quarter of the people, who do little work, while those by whose labor everything is work and a guard of the this the third the of work, while those by whose fabor everything is produced are allowed by this throttler of "class legislation and monopoly" no voice in framing or executing the laws under which they must live. And this he calls Democracy! Sunset would have us believe his party hos-tile to "the expansion of irredeemable cur-rency;" yet here is that party in his native Ohio supporting Pendleton for Governor, who insists on paying the national debt in green-backs, and applauding Ewing, senior, who wants fourteen hundred millions of new greenbacks issued on purpose to pay off that wants fourteen hundred millions of new greenbacks issued on purpose to pay off that debt as cheaply as possible. No "expansion of irredeemable currency," indeed! Then what means the greenback plank in your last national platform? The "standard currency of gold and silver"—that is just what your party in Congress have resisted every effort to re-establish. Their votes are on record against contraction against every contraction, against resumption, against every effort to harden the currency and return to the coin standard. What's the use in oratory, when the whole world knows that your party does all that you condemn, and upholds all that you say should be torn down.

SOUTHERN RESOURCES AND SOUTH-ERN IMPROVEMENTS.

From the N. Y. Times.

Attention has recently been directed, and not for the first time, to the city and harbor of Brunswick, Ga., as a point of first im-portance on the Atlantic coast, in view of its new railway connections, since the war. with the interior of Georgia and Alabama. As long ago as 1836 the United States Government surveys along the Atlantic coast of the Carolinas, Georgia, and Florida esta-blished the fact that no such harbor as Brunswick, for depth of water, safety of anchorage, and salubrity of climate, could be found from Cape Hatteras to the uttermost coast of Florida. Looking back to the first settlement of Georgia under General Oglethorpe, almost contemporaneous with the colonial grants to the two Carolinas, the surprise is that Wilmington and Charleston and Savannah should have then attracted the attention of commerce along the Atlantic coast, to the neglect of a harbor superior in its essentials for shipping and more directly on the sea than either or all of them. It may be said in explanation that these locations were selected because they were either upon or at the mouth of considerable rivers, running from the interior of the colonies to the sea, the consideration of the depth and safety of harbor to foreign shipping being overlooked or deemed of secondary importance, when the depth of water was ample the mother country and her colonies. Nor is it surprising that for fifty or sixty years after the independence of these colonies of Great Britain was declared and established, the Cape Fear to Wilmington, and the Cooper and Ashley to Charleston, and the Savannah river to Savannah, should have been deemed important to these locations. Railways were either wholly unknown or in their earliest infancy, after steam or other navigation was established. The very idea that depth of water should suggest itself, or that the bars and inlets at the mouth of the Cape Fear, or the bar and shoal water of Charleston, or the natural obstructions to navigation below Savannah, never occurred to the public of the Carolinas and Georgia in connection with the importance of deeper harbors, until the General Government ordered the survey referred to in 1836, when our great railway sys-tem and its connection with the seaboard were attracting especial interest in the Southern States. This movement had been anticipated by Georgia and South Carolina. They had made liberal appropriations, and put in active force their railway projects for the benefit of Charleston and Augusta on the one hand and Savannah on the other. And although the result of the survey was, as we have stated, in favor of Brunswick as by all odds the very best harbor on the coast, the Savannah and Augusta influence was too powerful in Georgia to suffer either aid or attention to be directed to it. Of late years the Georgia State policy has undergone a sensible change. Before the war certain New York capitalists took hold of the Brunswick and Albany Railroad, in connection with their interest in Brunswick city property. They expended several millions upon it, and were in a fair way to make the work complete to the intersection of the projected Florida Road when the Rebellion broke out. Everything they had done, including the road, its equipment, etc., was swept away by the war. The rails were taken up; the rails arriving at Brunswick in 1861 were seized, the equipment run off, and a general sequestration consummated by the so-called Confederate authorities, the State of Georgia being a party to the spoliation and conversion of this property. Since the war the wrong has been acknowledged by the Legislature of Georgia. About three and a half millions are acknowledged to be due to the Brunswick and Albany Road; the importance of the repair and revival of the road recognized, and its extension to the State line of Alabama, or the means of such extension, guaranteed. The line is direct to Eufaula, on the border of Alabama, and thence to Montgomery and Vicksburg. Fifteen thousand dollars per mile. State indorsement, on six per cent. bonds, principal and interest payable in gold, on two hundred and thirty-seven miles, is secured, the State acting as trustee to the general mortgage, and pledging the punctual payment of interest as well as the reimbursement of the principal at the end of forty years. Nor is this all that Georgia has done, or proposes to have done, for Brunswick. State aid has also been granted to the Macon and Brunswick Road, a line by all odds the shorter and more direct communication as between Macon, Atlanta, and Chattanooga, and the entire centre of the State and the seacoast, than the Macon and Savannah Road. A reference to any railway map will confirm this fact. This road has also been taken in hand by New York capitalists, and will soon be com pleted. It will harmonize with the Brunswich and Albany, and will assuredly be completed in all the present year. Both lines pierce the very richest cotton regions of Georgia; both

DEMOCRACY-NEGRO SUFFRAGE. From the N. Y. Herald.

The Tammany Tweed-Belmont muddle is settled. It was settled with the return of Sweeny-Peter the Great. The flare-up by the Tweed organizations in certain wards against Belmont was a trick from the beginning to work certain little wires for certain ward nominations, including aldermen and assistant aldermen, offices worth hedging and ditching for. The idea was to tickle the Grand Sachem at the expense of the bondholder of the Manhattan Club, who is not in the Tammany inside ring. The game was preposter-ous, and as it threatened to be dangerous Sweeney at once blocked it, and Tweed is satisfied. His particular friends in the premises, in the excess of their admiration and devotion, were getting him into a bad box, and he was thankful to be helped out of it. The contest, however, for the city spoils, fat places and lean places, waxed warmer, and the little party cliques of the wards and election dis-tricts of this island, which overflows with fricts of this island, which overflows with milk and honey at this season of the year, are all mining and pipe-laying for the spoils. It seems to be understood, however, that Tam-many will not make up her local slates till after the State Convention at Syracuse this week; for Tammany wishes to go into that gathering with an unbroken front. The sachems have discovered that the rural dis-tricts have taken the alarm and are likely to show some opposition to the Tammany pro-gramme for regulating—first, the Democracy of the State, and secondly, through the State, the National Democratic Convention of 1872 under the banner of Hoffman. The interior under the banner of Hoffman. The interior likes Hoffman, but does not like the idea of being gobbled up by Tammany. Conse-quently Tammany at Syracuse must present a compact front and be prepared to play a skilful game, or her story may be that of the maid with the milking pail. The Tammany leaders, we understand, had resolved upon fighting nigger suffrage on the fifteenth amendment, under the idea that as the Governor intended to forget to forward to Washington the ratification by our last Legislature of said amendment, it could not be counted, and that so, with the election of an anti-negro suffrage Legislature this fall, said amendment would be squelched perhaps entirely. But as the Governor's transmission of the New York ratification, on the application of the Acting Secretary of State at Washington, has settled the action of New York on said amendment, it will have to be dropped at Syracuse. There are red-hot Democrats, of the New Jersey school, who are in favor of fighting for a Legislature to repeal said ratification; but as the State Department, under Mr. Seward, has declined to recognize such proceedings, it might do so again under Mr. Fish. On the negro suffrage proposition of the new State Constitution, however, we presume that Tammany will take her stand, and that the Syracuse Convention will second the motion against the almighty nigger. And why? Because in the event of the failure to secure three-fourths of all the States to the fifteenth amendment proposed to the Federal Constitution, "the supreme law of the land," the action upon nigger suffrage in the State Constitution becomes a matter of some importance.

Butler, Butler county. SATURDAY, September 25, Harrisburg-Hon, C. Delano. In any event we expect an interesting fight for the class of vessels then trading between | in this State this fall on negro suffrage. Under the old state of things there would be no doubt of an overwhelming majority against the nigger. But the new departure of the Southern Democracy (Virginia leading off) in support of the fifteenth amendment, and the surrender of this question by the Wisconsin Democracy, have changed the whole face of things on negro suffrage. It is sure to come, and under this general belief the tide will probably be in favor of the everlasting nigger, even in New York. General Grant is emphatically in favor of universal negro suffrage, and it must not be forgotten by Tammany that now, for the first time since 1865, the national administration and all its retainers work with the Republican party. All this Federal power in New York city and State is a clear gain to the party since last year, and it will be felt in the election on this issue of negro suffrage. WINES. HER MAJESTY CHAMPAGNE. possessing them. This is a source of annual grumbles in Parliament; and these grumbles, though first emitted merely for the sake of grumbling, become real grievances in the course of time. On the other hand, the colonists chafe under the restrictions, trivial as they comparatively are, to which the home Government still subjects them, and under the fact that the quarrels which arise among themselves must be settled by an arbiter in Downing street. None of these questions can be so settled as not to leave a grudge on one side or the other. These reciprocal irritations are slowly, but surely, ripening towards an open rupture.

And, even in a purely sentimental view of the case, the position of our neighbors is not one of unalloyed bliss. The rising generation of Canadians have an uncomfortable sense that they are not citizens of a country, but only inhabitants of a colony. And they seem to think that that colony is old enough now to sever the unabilical cord which stretches over the Atlantic, and to make an effort, at least, to get on alone. In the present unsettled state of their provinces, they have no public careers open to them, for their country has no clear political future. The more adventurous of them emigrate to the States for the arena which is denied them at home, but which would be open to them there if Canada were once a nation.

But, with all these patriotic and intelligible aspirations for independence, there is none for annexation. And nothing can obstruct the attainment of Canadian independence more than threats or lures of American annexation. We have already, at the South, one discontented and depressed population, whom the reckless legislation of our radical rulers has made to feel that they are not citizens, but aliens. Let us not think of making another at the North. If the Canadians wish after they have attained independence, to become members of the Union, the question of annexation will be in order. It is not in order now. And any attempt to moot it will only bind the Canadian closer to the mother country, from whom the course of events would soon detach them, and make the mother country more reluctant than ever to let them go.

SUNSET'S SUNBURST.

From the N. Y. Tribune.

Hon. S. S. Cox has just returned from tour of desultory roaming about the Old World. It were superfluous to add that he has resumed speech-making. If he were brought to confession, he would doubtless "allow" that the lack of audiences was his chief privation while abroad and his strongest impulse to come home. There were heavy charges to confront in London and Paris, fighting and anarchy in Spain, and fleas in Algiers; but what, to the "spouting wretch," are these to a dearth of ears around the stand and an absence of cheers at the close of each well-turned period? Sunset resembles his great prototype, in that "his home is in the bright-setting sun;" and hither he turned his eager steps so soon as he had learned, by frequent trial ending in sore disappointment, that his most mellifluous cadences evoked no responsive shouts from the forty generations whereon the Pyramids look down in most invincible silence. Sunset, like his carpet-bagging compatriot, Jack Rogers, is nothing if not flatulent, and, having landed from the steamer, and been duly serenaded, he, on Thursday night last, harangued a bevy of his admiring constituents after this humorous fashion:-
