SATURDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1869.

TEN YEARS IN VIRGINIA.

TEN years ago to-day, Virginia was pursuing the even tenor of her way, according to the custom of half a century. By a false and short-sighted system of agriculture, her soil had been impoverished, and her inhabitants reduced to such desperate straits that they found the breeding of human chattels not only the most profitable, but almost the only profitable employment at their command. The entire State was given over practically to the slave-breeders: and the nation, in its turn, was given over to the sway of their representatives in the Cabinet and Congress. Henry A. Wise was Governor, John B. Floyd was Secretary of War, Hunter and Mason sat in the Senate, and Roger A. Pryor and "Extra Billy" Smith in the House. The public sentiment of the State was extremely patriotic and excessively consttiutional, but subordinate in all things and under all circumstances to the behests of the slave power, and the public sentiment of Virginia was still the unsavory leaven which tempered and controlled that of the entire country. Peace reigned throughout the land, except in "bleeding Kansas." But there were mutterings all around of the coming storm. Mr. Douglas' Kansas-Nebraska bill had aroused the people of the North in 1854, and the result was a general upheaval in the political world and the establishment of the great Republican party. The first noticeable triumph of the latter was the election of Nathaniel P. Banks, of Massachusetts, to the Speakership, in 1855. At the Presidential election of 1856 the Fremont and Dayton ticket polled 1,342,164 votes, and their warning voice nerved the slave oligarchy to fresh exertions in the effort to maintain and consolidate their threatened power. Then, in 1858, came the great speech at Rochester on the conditions and issues of the "irrepressible conflict" by Mr. Seward; and, as the Presidential contest of 1860 approached, it was felt on both sides that the final struggle was at hand.

But in the early part of the month of October, 1859, a small band of reckless and fanatical spirits were quietly preparing for a movement which was to result in the precipitation of this final struggle, to render its postponement no longer possible. John Brown, of Osawotamie, was their leader, and they numbered twenty-two men, white and black. Their hearts were as barren of fear as of prudence, their souls were fired with a fancied mission;—a new republic, based upon universal freedom and impartial justice, was the dream of their crazy brains; and to carve this new and true republic out of the old and false one, they raised their puny arms and faced Virginia and the nation. the night of Sunday, October 16, they fell like a thunderbolt upon the village of Harper's Ferry. Two men were killed by them, they maintained their position until the following Tuesday, and when the remnants of the band were captured, thirteen of them were already dead, and old John Brown, their leader, was covered with sabre and bayonet scars and fainting from loss of blood. The patriotic and constitutional Wise and his subordinates made short work with such of the fanatical crew as fell into their hands. Treason against the State of Virginia overshadowed the charge of murder in the indictment upon which they were tried, and for these joint offenses they suffered death upon the scaffold before the close of the year.

Ten years, lacking a few days only, have passed since the solemn quiet of that Sabbath evening in October was disturbed by the clamor of John Brown's band, and into this decade has been crowded a grand historical pageant, so momentous and imposing that each year seems like a decade within itself. The attempt at securing the stronghold of slavery by disrupting the Union has been made and failed, and the infamous and blighting curse has been utterly and thoroughly eradicated. The nation has undergone the terrible ordeal of purification and rehabilitation by the sword, has emerged from the ordeal the true Republic which was the bright and glorious vision by which John Brown and his followers were lured into the very jaws of death. And most noticeable of all the events which have marked this wondrous decade is the solemn assent given yesterday, just on the eve of the tenth anniversary of John Brown's raid, by the Legislature of Virginia to the amendments to the Federal Constitution which confirm the verdict of the war and declare in effect that universal freedom and impartial justice are the groundwork of our system, the corner-stone of the fabric which the founders cast aside.

THE TEMPERANCE TICKET.

A MORNING contemporary complains that this journal "unconsciously did the temperance cause a great injury by publishing a list of names as Temperance candidates" in the tabular and statistical statement illustrative of the coming election which we published yesterday. The article referred to was arranged as a matter of news, with a desire to avoid, as carefully as possible, a partisan bias of any description, and to give intelligible, impartial, and complete information. The ticket referred to is called the "Independent Reform Party Ticket," but as this name does not convey to the general reader a defiemanated from a so-called Temperance Convention, composed of delegates elected exclusively by temperance organizations, which, at its sessions in Concert Hall, passed a series of resolutions denouncing the "rum traffic" and the nomination of candidates identified with the liquor traffic; and affirming the necessity of a new party, "based upon temperance and moral principles," and advocating the election of candidates of "strict sobriety," and unequivocally in favor of prohibiting the liquor traffic. While it decided to call the proposed organization the "Independent Reform Party," it gave prominence in all its proceedings to the temperance idea; and even now, in its circulars, it announces that one of its main purposes is to "check the increase of immorality, drunkenness, and crime." We had, therefore, very good and sufficient reasons for calling it a Temperance ticket, and we cannot see that we either committed a blunder or injured the temperance cause. We are aware that many of the most active and earnest temperance men of the city will not support Messrs. Claghorn, Peirce & Co. The movement was a fizzle from its inception. Candidate after candidate declined to serve, and even the leading champion of the organization virtually acknowledged the desperate nature of his prospects by his recent statements that he will remain in the field even if he "should only get one vote." But whether he and his associate nominees get only one vote or one thousand, they are nevertheless candidates for the offices named, and their platform is more faithfully represented by the word we used, "Temperance," than by the title they had chosen, "Independent Reform."

VICE-PRESIDENT COLFAX ON THE MORMONS. VICE-PRESIDENT COLFAX, who has availed himself of his summer vacation to make a trip over the Pacific Railroad, took occasion, during his recent visit to Salt Lake City, to denounce polygamy in strong terms, quoting from the Book of Mormon to prove that the practice was unwise and illegal, and that it ought to be abolished. The official position of the Vice-President will give his words greater weight with the people of Salt Lake than those of an ordinary citizen, and that such utterances should be made in the stronghold of Mormonism by the second officer of the United States is a significant sign of the times. Heretofore Brigham Young and his followers have managed to brave the whole power of the Government, and to manage things after their own fashion, without much fear that they would be interfered with. They were intrenched behind the mountain fastnesses and the great deserts that intervened between them and civilization, and were able to defy both law and public opinion. The Pacific Railroad, however, has now destroyed their isolation, and the future of Mormonism is an interesting problem. Brigham Young, who has kept the system from falling to pieces by the force of his determined will and undoubted genius for organization and command, is now advanced in life, and serious trouble has already commenced in the Church through the attacks upon polygamy made by the sons of Joseph Smith claim as their own the position that Brigham

It would seem from the signs of the times that Mormonism can scarcely last, under its present system of management at least, for many more years; but the whole career of the Church of the Latter Day Saints has been so exceptional and so outside of ordinary rules, that it is impossible to predicate anything of its future. One thing is certain, that as the United States is able now to assert its authority in Salt Lake valley, a determined effort should be made to break up the practice of polygamy, even if it causes another exodus; and if the Mormons do conclude to make another move rather than abandon their beastly practices, they should be driven beyond the limits of the United States, and given to understand, for themselves and others, that hereafter no plea for religious liberty will be admitted in extenuation of crimes and degrading customs such as they are guilty of.

The speech of Mr. Colfax is a timely warning to the Mormon leaders as to what they may expect in the not far distant future; and if Brigham Young is as far-sighted as he has the credit of being, he will make preparations to meet the inevitable onslaught of Terribly Severe. Down in Delaware they have discovered what they fondly believe to be a severer punishment than the whipping-post. It is doubtful if outsiders will share the delusion. A notorious thief was lately arrested at Milford, and a local paper exclaims:—"What terror has the whipping-post to such black rascals as this? We hope the next sentence will be that he leave the State under penalty of death!" Possibly even the black rascal will think that perpetual banishment from Delaware and consequent escape from its whipping-post is not the worst fate that could befal such as he.
