THE LIBRARY QUESTION.

The Social Aspects of the Rush Bequest. To the Editor of the Evening Telegraph.

I suppose those of your yeaders who have no speciai interest in the Philadelphia Library are getting pretty tired of the discussions in your columns and those of the other newspapers in this city on the Rush question, and are glad that there are only two or three days left for the purpose. There is, however, one aspect of the subject in which the whole community is interested, on which I beg leave to touch briefly.

The Philadelphia Library was founded by Franklin as a lending or circulating library-an unknown thing at that time, though now, of course, quite common. He saw that while public libraries, as then conducted, were useful to professional or amateurstudents who could spend whole days within their learned precincts, to the mass, and especially to the young, the busy, and the infirm, they were practically closed. The idea was, and for more than a century it has been faithfully carried out, to have a collection of useful and attractive books which could be taken to the counting-house, the workshop, or the home, and read in the intervals of labor or the periods of rest. That a vast benefit has been thus conferred on our city there can be no doubt. If it has created for us no eminent scholars, it has diffused among the people at large an amount of general knowledge, and an acquaintance with current literature and science, unequalled, I believe, in any other community. And how much incidental good it has quietly done ! How many young men and women has the home use of the library kept from the haunts of dissipation and vice! For how many of the sick and aged has the enforced seclusion o the chamber been relieved and brightened by its cheerful literature; how many in their solitude and grief have found companionship and consolation during "slow, sad hours" of the night in its graver books. For its shent help in all these several ways to myself, and others dear to me, I, for one never be too grateful; and the day which will the final closing of its venerable doors, if it occur in my lifetime, will be one of the saddest in it.

To choose wisely for such varied purposes, and to satisfy such different tastes as I have above alluded to, is a matter which requires the exercise of a con-scientious and careful judgment on the part of the ubrarian and directors. They feel, I believe, that as their shelves are open to all, they ought not to permit in their collection works that parents would not desire in the bands of their sons or daughters. Not that there has been any wish to exclude books from mere sectarian or prudish motives, but the directors have acted on an honest desire to deserve the confidence reposed in them by the shareholders, even ejudices they are bound to respect.

nnd, on reading Dr. Rush's will, that the library he wishes to endow departs very much from the characteristics of our own. Among the condi-tions on which we are to take the devise, and the non-observance of which by us would create a forfeiture, I find some of importance in this respect. He directs the rejection of "epheme al biographies, novels, and works of fiction or amusement, newspapers or periodicals, which form so large a part of the current literature of the day" (p. 13 of will); and in another place (p. 27), "every-day novels, mindtainting reviews, controversial politics, scribblings of poetry and prose, biographies of unknown names, nor for those teachers of disjointed thinking, the daily newspapers." I fear this would drive away, if acted on, most of our young readers, and many of the older ones, too. On the other hand, he says on the older ones, too. On the other hand, he says on the older ones, too. 13):-"I do not wish that any work should be excluded from the library on account of its difference from the ordinary or conventional opinions on the subjects of science, government, theology, morals, or medicine, provided it contains neither ribaldry nor indecency."

Yet I fear that parents may think that a good deal of harm may be instilled into their children's mind of harm may be instilled into their children's mind without the actual use of "ribaldry or indecency," Prussic acid is, I believe, much more agreeable to the taste and smell than assafordita, yet it is not the less dangerous to leave about. As I observe on the list of shareholders the name of the Sunday-School Union, and of several churches, I hardly hardly think this will be agreeable to them either.

If it is clear that the library to be bought with Dr. Rush's money can be lawfully kept separate from our own, in a separate building, of course I should see no objection to our library company acting as its mere custodian. Its location will be such as to put it out of the reach of harm to our young readers and to mere students a little more or less free think-ing and liberality of ethics will not be of importance. But if the two collections are to be run into one, and boys and girls are to be allowed to range at will over the latitudinarian aggregate, I do most certaisly object, both as a shareholder and as A CITIZEN.

F: CIRCULAR.

The stockholders of the Library Company of Phiadelphia are required, on the 19th of October, to vote on certain resolutions proposed at a meeting of stockholders held on the 6th instant.

We beg to call your attention to what we deem the material questions. Every one recognizes the importance of an adequate building for the library, and also of an endowment for the purchase of books. especially those of the character recommended by Dr. Rush.

If this company shall fail to accept the provisions of the will, the only consequence will be that a building will be erected, endowed, and administered by persons not constituting the directors of our company. Every one will have the same use of the building and books that he can have if this company accepts the trust. And unless we are prepared to remove our whole collection to Broad and Christian streets, we can perceive no one motive for an acceptance.

For we must still maintain two establishments; one at which our members can resort, and the other as a receptacle for books not intended for ordinary use, to be kept at the new building, which is to be in a remote place suitable for students to retire to, but so entirely out of the range of common people, as to practically destroy such use of it as we have been accustomed to.

The resolutions numbers 1, 2, 3, do appear to imply that our acceptance is conditional on our retention of the liberty to maintain a library at another and convenient place.

But when it was proposed to vary these so far as to make that an express condition of acceptance, it was not agreed to, and we therefore call-your attention to the fifth resolution, and ask you to vote for that, if you deem the right to select a location dis-tinct from Broad and Christian for any purpess important, and you should think it desirable to accept the trust, before required to do so under the directions of the will.

We call attention to the fact, which no one will dispute, that our right to maintain a separate building, after acceptance, cannot depend on the assent of the executor, but on the meaning of the will. He has no power either to impose or release the obligations there defined.

There are other considerations we deem most weighty in determining whether to accept this trust now. The will gives to the executor the absolute right to select the location and to construct the building, and this discretion has been exercised by selecting Broad and Christian streets as the most witable spot in the city for the purpose.

When he has completed the building, the whole details of which he is bound to retain under his discretion, and which discretion he cannot trammel for the future by any agreement, even if he desires to do so, the will directs him to convey it to the company as trustees, when they are to assume certain obligations. If they violate them, the building will pass into other hands, and with it, all books, if there shall be any, which have been purchased with the funds coming from Dr. Rush.

There are some of these conditions which deserve consideration, out might be submitted to as the price of a liberal endowment fund, if that were certain to exist. Such as, 1st, A prohibition to increase the number of our shareholders, which may result in the elective franchise being monopolized by a few who elective franchise being monopolized by a few who think they see some advantage in controlling this corporation and its funds. 2d, A restriction on the qualification of directors, which may result in great inconvenience. 2d, The doubt whether the testator has not made it imperative that if we accept we shall use his building as the sole depositary for our books. That he expected it is pretty certain. Whether he makes it obligatory is a serious question; and this cannot be waived or pretty certain. Whether he makes it obligatory is a serious question; and this cannot be waived or reicased. But there are both express and implied conditions which we greatly fear may be ruinous, of which it is absolutely out of the power of any man now to decide the effect, seeing they depend on a state of facts as they will exist many years

The will certainly in terms directs the whole of the estate, except a fund adequate to pay annuities, to be expended in the purchase of the lot and erection

There are those who think this is not the meaning of the will, and we hope they may be right. But we fear that as the words are express, so does it appear to have been the final intention of the testator this be so, there will remain a fund yielding about $10,000 per annum, which the company will begin to receive when and as the annuitants die, to maintain the expenses of this spiendid edifice and purchase books. If it be not so, there will remain so much as is not expensed in building. The futility of esti-mated expenses of such an undertaking need not be

This company are now asked to assume these obligations, certain in liability, with absolute uncertainty of means, and a duty to publish at least five editions of five hundred each, of all Dr. Rush's works, and keep them for sale at cost, and keep them for sale at cost, we respectfully ask, should we, the representatives of the charitable contributions of several generations that have built up the present library, hazard these unnecessarily, by assuming these obligations before the time that we are required to decide, and before we can possibly know wherewithal we shall perform them. And for what are we asked to do this? Not to save property from being lost to the cause of literature, but to prevent the existence of a distinct institution under a separate management. This is the worst that can happen, for all that the executor asks can be attained without this peril. It executor asks can be attained without this peril. It s the advice of our Directors that he wishes, and hat only; he does not agree to be governed by it.

He could not do so, for he, as trustee, must act on his own discretion, and how far he will regard these wishes may be inferred from the attention paid to the universal and earnest entreaties on the subject se questions are grave, and should be considered carefully. dered carefully.

In asking you to vote negatively on the first resolution, we are doing what the Directors, in conformity with the opinion of counsel, advised at the meeting of June 29, 1869. A copy of the resolution then offered by Mr. McCall, on behalf of the Directors, and of the arising of convenience which if we have the second of the principle of convenience when it is not to be all the convenience of the process. tors, and of the opinion of counsel upon which it was based, are hereto annexed.

The effect of such a vote is not to bind the company ultimately to reject the trust, but only to leave the question open till the proper time, viz.: when the building having been erected and offered, we can ascertain if there are any funds left to maintain it. and what are the conditions and obligations we will ssume by acceptance.

If you think there ought to be an immediate acceptance, then we ask you to consider whether you are prepared to agree that all the books of the com-pany shall be kept at Broad and Christian streets; if ot, and you wish to reserve the right to have some

To sum up— We would advise that you vote upon the first four we would advise that you vote upon the first four resolutions, No, and upon the fifth, Aye.

The result of this will be, that if, contrary to our expectations, a majority should vote to accept the legacy, then the fifth resolution, if carried, will make the acceptance conditional on the right of the Library ompany to control the location of its own collection of books. On the other hand, if a majority vote to reject the legasy, the passage of the fifth resolution will be merely harmless.

We are of opinion that the time for the Library Company to accept the devise under the will of Dr. James Rush has not arrived. Until the executor shall have completed a building, and tendered a con-veyance, the company could do no more than to agree to accept at a future time; and we think such an agreement should not be made until the real position of the affair, and the plans of the executor. are better ascertained, and the consequences con-we think, therefore, that it is expedient to postpone, for the present at least, any action by the com-pany in reference to the will, other than the observ-ance of those provisions which they are required to observe to avoid disabling themselves from accepting in accordance with the terms of the will. W. M. MEREDITH.

D. C. MCMURTRIE, GEO. W. BIDDLE. Resolution of June 29, 1869, offered by Peter Mc-Call, Esq., on behalf of the directors:-Resolved, That the directors of the library be and they are hereby authorized to accept the bequests and devises in Dr. Rush's will, if and when they shall deem it advisable so to do, and be authorized to procure any legislation no

To the Editor of the Evening Telegraph. In the recently-issued circular, signed by five gentlemen who are in favor of accepting the elephant bequeathed to the library by Dr. James Rush, the objection that "books might be introduced of questionable morality" is pronounced "an imaginative danger," probably meaning an imaginary danger, for, as dangers are not possessed of imaginations, they cannot be imaginative. And why is it an imaginary danger? Because "no books can be placed on our shelves, except by the consent and with the an probation of the directors, the high social and moral character of these gentlemen is a guarantee against such an imaginative danger."

The high respectability of the present directors is freely conceded, and it is to be hoped that their suc-cessors to the end of time will be equally worthy; but the question is not one of respectability but of power. In the first codicil to the will, Dr. James Rush lays down a number of "conditions, restrictions, and directions, under and sphicet to which the equest is to be accepted, if accepted at all, and this is one of them:-"Fifth, I do not wish that any work should be exchilded from the library on account of its difference from the ordinary or conventional opinions on the subjects of science, government, theology, morals, or medicine, providing it contains neither ribaldry nor indecency."

Whether this be a condition or a direction, it deprives the directors of all power to exclude irrell-gious and immoral books from the shelves of the ibrary. As far as the decision of such an admission is concerned, except as to the presence of ribaldry or indecency in the books presented, they would be powerless. Ten or twelve wax-figures borrowed m Barnum would have as much centrol over such

The directors in the past have also been of high social position, and yet that has not prevented the intrusion of improper books. Some of the vilest nowels in the French language were in the library a few years ago. I do not name them, but it is no secret that many of Madame Dudevant's works are highly immoral. One of the worst was among the books four or five years ago. The directors have their own business to attend to, and they serve without pay. It cannot be expected that they should know in advance the character of the many hundreds f books added yearly to the library. Philadelphia, Oct. 16, 1869.

A Presidential Tr.p to Antictam. The President and his party left Frederick this morning, accompanied by Marshal Goldsboro, Dr. Schley, Colonel Vernon, Colonel Trail, and others, including several ladies, for the Antietam battlefield. They travelled over the mountains in carriages. On the way Secretary of the Interior Cox and Colonel Vernon pointed out the several scenes of conflict in which they were both engaged, the South Mountain being of peculiar interest to the President and General

e party arrived at Antietam Cemetery at half-past 2 o'clock, having travelled a distance of about twenty miles in carriages. Judge Weisell, of Hagerstown, received the President in a brief address, in which he spoke of the eminent services the President had rendered to the country, and concluded his speech by saying he had been instructed by the citizens of Hagerstown to invite the President and party to visit that seat of the county.

The President returned his thanks, and said he had been highly gratified by his visit to Western Maryland, but as they had to take the cars at half-past 3 o'clock they would not have time to visit Hagerstown, General Sherman, Secretary Cox, and Postmaster-General Creswell were then severally introduced to the crowd. Cheers were given for the President and General Sherman. A number of ladies and children crowded into the presence of these gentlemen and engaged in hand-shaking, which evidently afforded them much pleasure. After a survey of the grounds the party re-entered their carriages on their return to Keedysville, when cheers were spontaneously given for the President and Generals Sherman and Cox. A special team was in waiting at Keedysville, several miles from the conetery, and brought the party direct to Washington, where they arrived at nine o'clock to-night. The people of Frederick and elsewhere in Western Maryland profusely extended their hospitalities, and the party express their pleasure at the manner of their reception.
