Additional school accommodations are yet required in several of the sections, and the Committee of Schools of Councils have now under consideration a proposition to create an additional loan of one million dollars for the erection of school buildings. A singular accident occurred on the Albany and Boston Railroad, yesterday, through the wilful misplacement of a switch. Nobody hurt.
The power of the President to establish pro-railway from Sasa to Bardonneche, the southern opening of the tunnel; a guarantee, it is understood, being given that the grand opening will be com-pleted, and the whole property walled and strength-ened by the time this railway is finished. The French Government has given similar pledges as to the northern opening at Modane.

Foreign Items.

-One of the French papers reports that the journeymen butchers of Stettin have lately been on a strike. The strike was not caused by any desire for an increase of salary or for a diminution of working hours, but they ob-jected to a practice which prevailed among the master butchers of addressing them as "thou" and "thee." It appears that this practice as from superior to inferior has existed from time immemorial in the corporation of butchers. It is, however, objected to at Stettin, and a compromise has been effected. The master butchers urged that it was far more lowering to the self-respect of the journeymen to receive the tips which it was their habit to give them on New Year's Day than to be addressed by the familiar epithets which had given so much offense. They therefore proposed to give up the system of making presents to their men and to address them in future as "you." This arrangement gave satisfaction to all concerned, the journeymen returned to their work, and the masters are quite consoled for the privilege they have lost by the pecuniary advantage they have gained.

- It is stated by the Bishop of Montreal. who is at present at Rome, that when a Cathoic missionary was preaching to an Indian tribe in the extreme north of America a packet of letters was given to him, on opening one of which he burst into tears. The chief of the tribe asked him the reason of his grief. The missionary replied, "It is because I learn from it that my father is dead, and many other misfortunes." "But," said the chief, "thou hast told us that in such circumstances we should not weep, but submit with resignation to the will of the Great Spirit; so to give us an example smoke this pipe with us and be comforted." The, missionary did so at once, and went on opening his letters, among which was a copy of the Bull of Conamong which was a copy of the Bull of Con-vocation for the Council. "You have also good news," said the chief, seeing the priest's joy in his face. "Lot us hear that also." "The good news," said the missionary, "is that the Grand Master of Prayer has called the other Masters of Prayer to aid and counsel him." "What is his name?" said the chief. "Pins IX." "Am I worthy to name that name?" said the simple warrior. "Yes," said the priest; "rise, all of you, and call upon the Great Spirit to bless him." The savages all did so with the deepest testimonies of respect and reverence, and, in imitation of the missionary, one after the other kissed the name of the Holy Father printed at the foot of the Bull. The missionary then explained to them what the council was, and how the crimes of the world had made it necessary; and the chief, raising his hands to heaven, exclaimed, "May the Great Spirit aid Pius IX in all his designs." -One of the subjects which is to engage the attention of the Œcumenical Council is the price of masses in France. At present an ordinary mass (messe basse) costs 1s. 25c., that is, just one shilling; a sum which the French clergy complain is too low by half. Several cures have memorialized their bishops on this vexed question, and their reports afford some revelations which are curious as showing that our neighbors, however skeptic in speech, are much less so in action than is usually supposed. It seems that owing to the cheapness of the terms the number of people who apply to have masses said for them or for their departed relatives averages nearly 4,000,000 yearly. his own income while he is in his high position. A Singular Life. In a recent Congregationalist, Dr. Tarbox, who was once paster of the Congregational Church in Framingham, tells briefly the story of a singular life among his former parisitioners. In the summer of 1850 an infant about a month old was left at the door of a farm house in Framingham, carefully and even richly clothed, but without name or clue to its parentage. The worthy couple concluded to adopt the little girl and bring it up among their own child dren, as a child of their own. Last year there came to the young woman a valuable gold watch and a brief note, dated June 15, 1865; and in December of the same year, a costly set of furs and some rich velvet garments, but nothing to indicate the source from which they came. In the spring of 1860 the mysterious child, then grown up into an at-tractive young woman, sickened, and in August diet of consumption, in the family of her foster parents, in the last hours she spoke freely of the mystery of of consumption, in the family of her foster parents. In her last hours she spoke freely of the mystery of her life, and said she had never from any quarter even a hint of her parentage. She died supported by the hopes and consolutions of the Christian faith. Her funeral was attended by a large concourse of the people of the town, who manifested a deep sym-pathy with one who through life never knew a sin-ele relative. gle relative.

A PROTEAN PRINCE.

Albert Edward as a Churchman and a Dancer. The Chester (England) correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 20th of October, says :-

General Knollys has written as follows to the

that your lordship will accept for yourself, and con-vey to the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral Church and the clergy of the city, his sincere Church and the clergy of the city, his sincere acknowledgments for their address and cordial wel-come to Chester, as well as for the loyal attachment which they have expressed to the person and family of the Queen. It has afforded his Royal Highness, the highest gratification to have received from any portion of the clergy of our Church such an expres-tion of their fording the such as expression of their feelings towards him, and he desires to thank them from his heart for their prayers and good

The ball at the new Town Hall was numerously The ball at the new Town Hall was numerously attended, of course. The guests were too many to dance, as a regular ball-goer would understand dancing, and it was a long time before there was much comfort for the crushed beauties. It could not be otherwise when all were anxious—determin-edly anxious, some—to see the Prince open the ball with the Mayoress. This formality was gons through soon after eleven o'clock, and by and by the lookers on began to remember that they had engagements pencilled on their dairty cards. pencilled on their dainty cards.

The Prince is a most pleasant ball-room compa-nion, and his case and natural, unpretending man-ners soon prove fatal to any trepilation to which the Chester fair ones might happen to be victims. The Prince danced often, and without allowing himself to be monopolized by any one "set." He chose his artners promiscuously, and, like a sensible fellow, ried to enjoy himself during the little time he was leff alone. About midnight the Prince and some friends came out upon the balcony, when the crowd, which happened then to be particularly dense, gave him a very hearty reception.

everal death warrants are expected from the Executive Department in a few days. Dr. Schoeppe's case seems to excite unusual interest, the medical fraternity appearing in his be-half. It is probable that James Field, of Ly-coming, William H. Dr. Schoeppe's case is in the same condition.

The Mont Cenis Tannel.

The underground works of Mont Cenis are catried on with increasing spirit and energy. The opening of the great tunnel for the locomotive before July, 1811, is confidently predicted. The Italian Minister of Fublic Works is hastening the construction of the women who have invested money and are afraid of ruin, all these classes are represented, and make up a good third of the total. The result is that in large towns, and especially in Paris, there are more masses ordered than could be recited by twice the number of priests in the diocese, granting even that they officiated incessantly from morning to night; so that it has become a practice of late years positively to sub-let or farm out the masses to country priests who have more time to spare. For instance, when a person orders at a Parish church one, ten, or, as the case may be, several hundred, masses, he pays his money and gives his name, but unless he be a rich man and pays generously his masses are not said in Paris. The order is remitted to some poor cure in the provinces, who takes, as it were, a wholesale commission, and recites the masses for about forty centimes apiece. It thus often happens that a tradesman who dies in the Rue St. Denis is prayed for day after day in the wilds of Languedoc, where nobody has ever seen or heard of him. However, a good number of provincial cures are growing tired of saying masses at second-hand prices; and, as the urban priests maintain that it is impossible to allow them more than one-third of the original fee-the rest being required to defray the great expenses incumbent upon town churches -it is thought that the Council may take the matter into consideration and suffer the fees to be increased. GENERALITIES.

How French Nobles Grow Rich. A correspondent of the London News writes from "A piece of land near Nantes brought its owner in "A piece of land near Nantes brought its owner in 4000 francs a year. An entrepreneur bought it from him for building upon, and paid him 400.000 francs— his income is quadrupled in one day. A very poor 'old noble' had a strip of ground at Asnieres, near the river side, so useless he had almost forgotten it; but manufacturers 'squatted' there, and a fabrique of 'chemical products has made the bit of ground worth nearly two millions to the 'poor old noble.' Recently a family of old name, but slender purse, had to sell to the town of Paris an old house, one side of which opened on a principal thoroughfare, sne of M. Haussmann's new grand streets. The family were advised—they stood out on the price, and the portion of one of them (they were two brothers and a sister) was 700,000 francs (£25,000). In these and a sister) was 700,000 francs (£25,000). In these and many other ways the old noulity have become rich, and it astonishes them. Some of them are still so used to the notion that they must be poor, that they still go on saving, and date not live up to the wealth that they are now possessed of; others spend lavishly and squander, because they really scarcely know the true value of money yet. But they have come to be a power in the community; and particu-larly in the provinces, their influence is greater now then it has ever been since 1759 than it has ever been since 1789."
