The Obsequies of the Late Admiral Stewart-The Body in State at Independence Hall-Our Fublic Schools Clesed-General Appenrance of the City-The Great Funeral Procession.

of the City-The Great Faneral Procession. To-day will be one long remembered by the citi-sens of Philadelphia. Time, in its ever-rapid flight, is fast carrying of those staunch, noble-hearted men who, when their country was struggling in its in-fancy, boldly went forth in her defense, and added instre not only to the pages of its history but also prowned their own names with imperishable glory. It is to the last earthly remains of one of the most eminent of these that the people of Philadelphia are called upon to pay the last sad tributes of respect, and, from the extensive arrangements made, there is every propect that, in point of numbers and solemnity, the funeral pageant of to-day will far ex-ception-that of the late President Lincoin. THE SERVICES AT BORDENTOWN.

THE SERVICES AT BORDENTOWN.

Early vesterday morning the remains were placed Early yesterday morning the remains were placed open for the inspection of the people of Bordentown, to whom the late Admiral had endeared himself by many acts of charity and kindness. Gray-haired men and stald old women, themselves almost on the brink of the dread dnknown, jostled with the crowd and seemed to have been imbuned with, for the time, new life, in order that they might catch the last glimpse in death of him whom they revered and lowed and the reports of whose noble deaks of valor the time, new life, in order that they high catch the last glimpse in death of him whom they revered and loved, and the reports of whose noble deeds of valor had so often sent the life blood tingling in joyous courses through their veins. Men whose counte-nances were indicative of anything but kindly feel-ings, whose worldly buffetings had dampened, as it were, the natural impulse of the heart, broke forth in unrestrained sobbings, and for the time being the wave was unmanned: gray-halfed matrons, too, who had coaxed their children, now fathers and mothers themselves, to sleep by the recital of the valiant deeds of "Old Ironsides," bedewed their glasses with tears, and wept freely over the one they in common loved so well. The body of the deceased was laid a state in the parlor of the family mansion, and an immonse throng kept pouring in and out all day; people for miles and miles around gathered to the spot as though it were a second Mecca, and the various roads and by-ways leading into Bordentown were peopled from early dawn until after dusk. The body was laid out in the full-dress uniform of a Rear Admiral, and enclosed in a metalle coffin.

The body was laid out in the full-dress uniform of a Rear Admiral, and enclosed in a metallic coffin. At 4 o'clock the funeral service was held at the house, in the presence of the family and the citizens. In accordance with the request of his son, there was no sermon, and the service was conlined to the ritual of the Episcopal Church. Rev. Mr. S. Coxe and Rev. Mr. W. Pettit officiating in reading the ser-vice of the dead and the prayers. Rev. Mr. Coxe was the former pastor of the church at Bordentown, but is now stationed at Newton, Long Island, and came to Bordentown for, the purpose of assisting at the funeral ceremonies. It was expected that at the close of the services, which took place at 4 o'clock, the guard of marines which took place at 4 o'clock, the guard of marines would be in readiness to escort the body to Philadel wend be in readiness to escort the body to Philadel-phia. Owing to delays in consequence of grounding in the stream, the escort did not reach Bordentown until 6 eclock, when it was decided to take the cars, instead of the boat, on the passage to the city. The scene at this time was a most impressive one. Night had already fallen, and the house being situated upon a high hill, it was found difficult to transfer the Temains to the depot. The escort was under the guide of those who knew the path and who used fanterns to light the way. There was no music, no drums, but quietly and withcut any of the ordinary pomp and ceremonials of a military display, the body was carried by the sailors to the train. The guard consisted of twenty marines and eight sailors, the whole under the command of and eight sailors, the whole under the command of Captain J. G. Corbin, with Lieutenant-Commander Rowland and Lieutenant Meade in charge of the ma-rines and sailors. The body, with the guard of honor, left Bordentown in the train, to which a spe-cial car was attached, about 7 o'clock. The son of the deceased and a number of the personal friends also accompanied the remains. From Walnut street wharf to Independence Hall the body was under the same escort, and in the hall was placed on a pe-destal erected for it and draped with the American flags. The hall was hung with black, and all the fags. The hall was hung with black, and all the prominent objects in the room were clothed with the same emblems of mourning. The cofiln was so ar-ranged that the face of the deceased was visible through the glass covering the face. On the lid was a silver plate containing the inscription:--"Rear-Admiral Charles Stewart, U.S. N. Born July 28, 1778 Died Nov. 6, 1869." 1778. Died Nov. 6, 1869."

When arranged in Independence Hall, the coffin had upon it the chapcan of the deceased, as well as the sword presented to him by the State of Pennsylvania, and containing the inscription:--Pre-sented by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to Captain Charles Stewart, March 6, 1816." Last evening the body was in charge of a guard of marines, and many persons visited it, the concourse pouring in until a late hour.

WHAT OUR PROMENADES REVEAL .- To a thinking

mind nothing is more repulsive than gaudiness, nothing more despicable than tawdriness, and, yet of late years both have walked hand-in-hand, and as of late years both have walked hand-h-hand, and as if it were, gained sustenance from each other. In the days of the Roman Empire the people thereof yied with each other in the display of that with which nature had blessed and favored them. Styles, fashions, and modistes were things unknown and unresorted to, the hair was left to its own growth, and the shears were never used thereon except as means of numbers. Wearing-anneal was a thing and the shears were never used thereon except as means of punishment. Wearing-apparel wis a thing of secondary consideration: but with the steady in-crease of years these things changed, and soon the idle and illiterate sovereigns of Europe, seeking for means to dispose of the rapidly accumulating wealth in their coffers, chose to invest it in useless and timusy apparel. Leading this class were the females, But it was left to the women of this, the nineteenth accumulation of the rapidly accumulation of the senter the sector of the sector of the sector of the sector. century, a period rendered illustrious for the rapid and glorious strides of science and art, to gain the sublimity of ridiculousness in dress.

sublimity of redictionsness in dress. Our grandmethers, and the mothers of some of us, its true, lavished money freely in the purchase of dry goods, but only to secure the most handsome and endurable fabrics that the looms of the manufacturer could produce, and once having secured these she rested satisfied. But the majority of the these she rested satisfied. But the majority of the women of the present day pursue directly the oppo-site course. Now the sole aim appears to be to cast aside nature's beautifications, and establish in their place something more attractive by means of a su-perabundancy of dress. The peacock is a bird of handsome plumage, yet its flesh is worthless. So the plumage of a woman of the period may be entic-ing, but the same stamps the mind as shallow. Beauty does not consist of all the colors of the

ing, but the same stamps the mind as shallow. Beauty does not consist of all the colors of the rainbow blended together without the slightest de-ference as to the mode of their arrangement. Nother does to substant the upper bland of the period seem so to think. The young Quakeress, whose nights are spent in the midst of a happy family circle, clad in her plain gurb, presents to us as event a contrast to her plain garb, presents to us as great a contrast to the woman bedecked in finery, and powdered, and nainted, after the previous night's riotousness, as does gold to dross. These reflections were caused by a half hour's view of the passers-by on Chesnut street. We remember the time, and it is not far back, that the distinguish-ing mark between the pure and the impure was the style of dressing, but we must confess that from what we have seen it would puzzle a Solomon now to judge. It has long been acceded that the woman who lives by sin choses that part principally to satiwho lives by sin choses that part principally to sati-ate an overweening desire for display. In this the members of her sex who occupy the higher sphere are rapidly following, and the consequence is that, like mixing milk and water, the purity of both is de-stroyed, and a fair resemblance of each is all that is left. For to-day, in nine cases out of ten, the wife is are more distinguishable from the mistress than the no more distinguishable from the mistress than the mistress is from the wife, so far as one can deter-mine from their appearance upon the promenade Nor is this all ; the evil does not stop here, for the pernicious example of the elders pervades the minds of the younger, and being by nature apt, the seeds, that may perhaps lead to depravity, soon take root. We ask in all candor, is it not time for the women, wives and mothers of the present day to stop in this their sinful career, and reflect? Think of the this their sinth career, and redect. Think of the evil, mind-distorting example you are setting; think of what you are subjecting yourselves and your children to, independent of physical aliments and deformities; think how your hearts would throb, your pulses beat, and your blood tingle, were you te hear the remarks of those pests of the world, unfor-tunately created in God's own image and likeness, the remarks of those pests of the world, unfor-tunately created in God's own image and likeness. styled men, who rejoice in the application of the term blase; think how your whole nature would revolt at being placed in the same category with the harlot who perchance sits beside you in some public place: for we can assure you that your gaudiness and tawdriness lay you open to just such compari-son; and, thus thinking, resolve to change your ways, and devote the surplus cash that thus finds ways, and devote the surplus cash that thus avenues to hie itself away in relieving the miseries of

To-day, at 2 P. M., the Yantic arrived at this port. On the 31st of October experienced a heavy gale from the northward. Hove the ship to for thirty hours. The remainder of the passage clear weather and light northerly winds. The Health Officer of this port has placed the Yantic in quarantine, which is to continue until the 19th instant.

Mayor Fox has detailed from the force five hun-dired picked men, and they are posted all around the neighborhood, some on Chesnut street, a double line neighborhood, some of Chestar streng a double line of them guarding the hall-way, another double line in the hall proper, and the remainder are scattered the command of High Constable John Curley. The force on Chesnut street is employed in forming the assemblage into a single column, a performance atassemblage into a single column, a performance ac-tended with much difficulty, every now and then the outside pressure being so great as to break the line, producing great confusion.

SCENES IN THE CITY,

All over the city the flags are bung at half-mast, and many of them are draped in the symbolic em-blem of death. Some of our prominent business houses have been closed since morning, and many others suspended business operations at noon. The children in our public schools were all dismissed at 12 o'clock, and the day seems to be given over to the one main object...the funeral. Our streets are one main object—the funeral. Our streets are thronged with pedestrians, and all the avenues lead-ing to the neighborhood of the State House are densely thronged. All the banks, banking institu-tions, and public places closed at noon, and there ap-pears to be a general observance of the day. The best of order prevails, and the persons where best of order prevails, and the persons whom we meet seem to enter into the impressiveness of the occasion, and desire to add to its solemnity. Everything that could be done to make this a most memorable event has been done by those in charge. THE HALL PROPER.

A WHOLESALE AFREST-ALL AROUT A COAT.-Last inght there was a ball at the American Mechanics' Hail, Fourth and George streets. Among the at-tendants there were just forty-two young fellows, who came all the way from Manaynuk. All things went along merrily until two s'clock this morning, when one of the "fellers" missed his overcoat. He secured the services of Police-Sergeant Heiss, who made an effort to discover who the thief was. The crowd was "mum" as mice, and the Sergeant told them that the culprit must be produced. However, crowd was "mum" as mice, and the Sergeant told them that the culprit must be produced. However, these Manayunkers wouldn't think of doing such a thing as to "squeal" one of their number, and seve-ral of them quietly told the Sergeant to go to a far hotter place than that in which he was. He waited patiently for some time, and the thief not being forthcoming, ordered all in arrest. He was again directed to visit the place to which the wicked of this life go, but two furniture cars were provided, and the forty-two were taken to the station, where Alderman Eggleton gave them a hearing. They were then fined for a breach of the peace.

On motion the minutes were approved and or-dered to be printed. Rev. E. W. Anthon, Corre-sponding Secretary, read the annual report. The report shows that this was the first year in which the receipts exceeded the expenses. A reduction of the work was, however, necessary to produce this result.

The society holds a bond for the support of a seminary in Rhinebeck, N. Y., for $20,000. Also, for a church and parsonage at Rhine cliff, $10,000. $1000 more have been promised for support

Marriage and Funeral Services.

A few days since Rev. Mr. Tinlow, of East Cam-bridge, was called to perform a double service of opposite character. It was both a marriage and a neral service at the same hour and in the same house and family. The mother was dead, and at her request the daughter was to be married as soon as possible. It was so arranged that the marriage cere-mony was performed at the side of the coffin, and was followed by the funeral services. There sat the father alone, the sacred the having been broken, and there was the daughter forming the new the while and there was the daughter forming the new tie, while deeply mourning her mother. The services were strangely solemn.
