NEW-FORRISMS.

ses Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26, 1869. The present generation is not as fully informed the history of its own country as it might be. nstance, when the streets at an early hour yesterday morning gave evidence that a public procession and celebration of more than ordinary interest were in progress, what is the matter? was the first well-informed fossils who give the tone to all the infor strata below him, happened to hit upon the idea of its being Evacuation day. The hit was extremely successful. Evacuation day it was, and right martially and patriotically was it observed. For the eighty-sixth time flags were simultaneously run up all over the city in honor of that event; the fire epartment and the military turned out. The northwest corner of Fourteenth street and Fifth avenue was particularly noticeable in this connection. A gayly-draped stand was erected there, for the accommodation of the Mayor, who reviewed the troops.

Sown His Wild Onts. Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., has been so considerate as to write and send to one of the daily papers for publication a denial of some statements bearing rather hard upon his character. This letter is a model of modesty and humility. Upon reading it, you wonder how it happens that so shamefaced a youth could possibly have so far forgotten his blushes as to rush into print. According to the tenor of this letter, which is published for the information of the public, Mr. Cornellus Vanderbilt, Jr., is made the subject of false reports that "run like wildfire over the city." His acts "are scrutinized and villfled as though he were some distinguished character," and he asks the "indulgence of his friends and the public until he can prove to them by his actions that he is better than they think him. In fact, all his wild oats are sown, "and he is trying to earn a espectable living like any other private citizen.' All this is very charming, but it is intensely like crying before one is hurt. So far from the young Mr. Vanderbilt's acts being scrutinized and vilided, not one reader of a newspaper in ten thousand is aware of his existence, and would only identify him as a living reality by the accident of his name. When the public takes a profound interest in the question as to whether or not he has sown his wild oats, it will be quite time enough for him to be forthcoming with his explanation.

Philadelphia Students. Let the Philadelphia students take heart. They are not alone in the world. Bellevue Medical College has produced their prototypes. Some of the "boys" there, gathering courage from the Philadelphia example, hissed the female students at "that same," and threw spitballs at them. This furnished the text for several homilies and philippics at the Woman's Sufrage Association. Mrs. Hallack indulged in a diatribe against men generally, and Mrs. Blake and Mrs. Somerly put in their little platitudes. Mrs. Norton disdained the episede altogether, and thought that Congress ought to assume the power of conferring the franchise upon women. Mrs. Wilbour quoted the recent speech of Mr. Sumner in Worcester, wherein he said, in advocating the fifteenth idment, that Congress had power to confer suffrage upon all citizens. She dwelt upon the virtues of the Dwight Street (New Haven) Debating Club, a lety of leading citizens of that city, and of the New Haven Law School, both of which, in their dissions, had decided in favor of woman suffrage. In conclusion, the meeting's attention was turned to those medical students again, and a resolution was passed against those in Philadelphia who had so dishonored their manhood in seeking to dishonor manhood. It was decided that their names should be obtained for the purposes of publication, besides those of any other student, here or in Philadelphia, misbehaving in future.

Lost his Wig.

Messra. Steinway have an extremely affable clerk, whose only misfortune is the necessity which compels him to wear a wig. On Wednesday he came out of the store to hand two ladies to their carriage. Both are distinguished belles. One of them offered him her hand, and (the wind blowing furiously at the time) gave a wicked wink to her companion, who him her digits. Embarrassed for a moment, he finally took their hands in his, leaving his wig at the mercy of the wind. It was a capricious wind to submit to, for a sudden blast, as though in confederacy with the two ladies, in a moment whisked it from his head and bore it off in the direction of the Academy. Mr. - would have willingly lost his head to oblige the ladies, but his wig is a different matter, and he has not yet forgiven them.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

"Garrick" at the Chesnut. play produced last evening at the Chesnut is one of Robertson's earliest dramatic efforts. It is an daptation from a French adaptation of a German adaptation of a pretended incident in the life of the great English actor, so that it will be seen that the plece is as far removed from originality as it is from any just claim to its title. The main incidents of the ot rest upon a tradition to the effect that a young lady from the country fell in love with Garrick on ng him play "Hamlet," "Romeo," and other romantic roles, and that on the solicitation of her friends he undertook to dispel her Illusion and cure her of her sentimental fancy for him by playing the part of a drunkard. In the play Garrick is made to ceive an attachment to the young lady also from ng her intently watching his acting, and repent of his promise to cure her when he finds that she and his unknown admirer are one and the same person. He, however, goes through with his task, but the damsel discovers the trick, and also that "Garrick" is in love with her. She therefore runs away from home to escape a marriage with a drunken squire that her father ild force upon her, and puts herself under Garick's protection. The father follows and finds her n the actor's apartments, and overhears him advisng her to return home, and at the same time he overs the unworthiness of the other suitor, and the curtain comes down on a good old comedy dement-the lovers clasped in each other's arms, nd the aged father murmuring over them "Bless e, me children." This piece was first produced in onden by Sothern, for whom Robertson wrote it. Mr. E. L. Davenport and other actors have perormen it a number of times in this country, but it has not been represented so often as not to be a novelty to most playgoers. It is not any means equal in merit to of Robertson's subsequent efforts, but it is neatly written, the situations are effective, and it presents number of good acting characters. The heroine, "Ada Ingot," was creditably personated by Miss Jenule Anderson, and Mr. Jack, who excels as a repreentative of a solid English merchant or tradesman acted the part of "Simon Ingot" injexcellent style There were some very good points about the "Garrick of Mr. Sheridan, but this gentleman is too slow and abored in his manner, and he would improve greatly If he could put a little more animation and ease into his acting. The other parts were reasonably well onated, and the piece went off with much ap-

The amusing little comedietta of Two Can Play at That Game commenced the evening's entertainment, and it was admirably acted by Miss Keene, Mr. Morint, and Mr. McManus. Indeed, of the two pieces uls was decidedly the best, and at the conclusion the curtain was rung up in answer to the hearty applause of the audience.

On Wednesday, December 1, Hon. Charles Sumner will discuss "The Question of Caste."

"Kwere Kompany."—Mr. B. F. Duane, who has the reputation of being a rare humorist, will give an entertainment at Natatorium Hall, Broad street, below Walnut, to-morrow evening, which he styles "Ninety Minutes in Kweer Kompany; sr, Song and Chit-chat, with Sketches of X-centrick Karacter."

From the specimens of humor before us in the shape of the programm for to-morrow evening, the enterof the programm for to-morrow evening, the enter-tainment will be something out of the usual line, and very amusing. Lovers of fun can safely venture difty cents on Duane, with the assurance that they get their money's worth in mirth and laughter

-However much opinions may vary concerning the theological importance of the delibera-tions of the approaching Council at Rome, it seems likely that they will produce at least a philological result which, to some profane outsiders, may appear even more interesting than the solemn affirmation of the Papal infallibility. The deliberations are to be carried on in Latin, but the pronunciation of this language differs so in different countries that it was foreseen that if each of the numerous prelates gathered together from the four corners of the earth were to adopt his national mode of nunciation, the assembly would degenerate into a modern Babel. A committee has, therefore, been appointed to fix a standard pronunciation which each prelate will be obliged to learn and use during the debates. If one could hope that their decision might eventually be adopted in all European schools, the problem of a universal language for the educated classes would at last be solved. At present a German and a French-man, each ignorant of the other's language, are debarred from meeting on the neutral ground of Latin, except in writing.

NOTES FOR DECEMBER, ADDRESSED TO THE FREBLE AND DEBILITATED. - This is a trying season for invalids. indeed for all who are not blessed with robust constitutions and iron frames.

Cold has come upon us suddenly, sealing up the open pores, and scaling in, as it were, any seeds of disease that may have been lurking in the system, but which remained undeveloped so long as the waste matter of the body and all acid and unwholesome humors were freely discharged by evaporation from the surface and through the bowels. A tonic, aperient, and alterative medicine is now needed to invigorate the vital powers depressed by a low temperature; to stimulate and purify the secretions, and to fit the body to endure, without inconvenience, pain or danger, the sudden climatic change which ushers in the winter. The only preparation which will fully meet this almost universal need, and will thoroughly and safely perform the important work, is the leading tonic and alterative of the age, HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular specific improves the appetite, invigorates the digestive organs, regulates the flow of bilthe blood, calms the nerves, relieves constipation, pronotes superficial circulation and evaporation, and being composed solely of wholesome vegetable elements, with a pure stimulant as their diffusive vehicle, may be taken by the weakest without fear. The flavor is agreeable, for although the BITTERs are a potent medicine, they contain no nauseating element. WHILE WAITING FOR A COUGH to go as it came, you are often laying the foundation for some Pulmonary or Bronchial Affection. It is better to get rid of a Cold at once by using that sure remedy, Dr. D. JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT which will cure the most stubborn Cough, and relieve you of all anxiety as to dangerous consequences. THE DEMAND TELLS THE STORY.—From all directions orders for PHALON'S VITALLA OR SALVATION FOR THE HAIR come pouring in. All the noxious Dwes, etc., go down before it. THE NEW STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

AUTHOR OF

"The Moonstone," "Armadale," "The Woman to White," "No Name," etc.,

Just commenced in

HARPER'S WEEKLY.

No. 673, date of Nov. 20.

ILLUSTRATED.

HARPER'S WEEKLY SENT FROM THE COM-MENCEMENT OF "MAN AND WIFE" TO THE END OF 1870 FOR FOUR DOLLARS.

Those who are acquainted with Mr. Collins' inimiable skill in weaving a plot, or in investing all his characters with a fascination which renders the reader rejuctant to part with them, will not need to be assured that this story promises to be by far the most attractive of the year. There is no one equal to Mr. Collins in the power of sustaining the interest of any tale he undertakes to relate. All his heroe and heroines live in the memory, and the forthcoming story will be even richer than any former production of the same pen in this great feature .-N. Y. Times.

Wilkie Collins has scarcely a living superior in the higher realms of imaginative sensationalism. The plot of his stories, though always intricate and apparently involved, is constructed with such consum mate knowledge of dramatic effect, that the reader's curiosity is kept constantly on the alert without being wearied or perplexed. From a perusal of the advance sheets of a portion of "Man and Wife," we are led to anticipate a novel second in interest to none of his previous works .- N. Y. Tribune.

It is some time since the public appetite has enjoyed the excitement of a novel by this master. From the opening of this one, we should say that it will be equal to its predecessors in strange and impenetrable interest .- N. Y. Sun.

Like all of Wilkie Collins' stories, it is interesting from the start. It is evident in the initial chapter that the plot will turn upon that infamous law upon the British statute-book which invalidates, under certain circumstances, marriages performed by Roman Catholic clergymen. Undoubtedly it is the design of Mr. Collins to make his novel the instrument for breaking down this abuse-just as Dickens has used his pen to effect social and legal reforms in England. Two scenes in the beginning of this new story, written in an intensely dramatic manner, draw the interest of the reader to a few characters boldly and sharply limned, while the promise is fairly held out of a feast for the lovers of the "realistic" in modern fiction.—N. Y. World.

Wilkie Collins has, beyond question, no rival in the art of telling an exciting and absorbing story. There s a positive fascination in the art with which he compels his readers to follow him through the mazes of some subtle plot, in which human passions and crafts take the place of the supernatural mechanism of the earlier days of story-telling. Wilkie Collins new tale, "Man and Wife," promises, so far as one may venture to guess, to have somewhat deeper purpose than most of his other works, while it will doubtless be as interesting and absorbing as any. N. Y. Independent.

Judging from the four opening chapters, this story will even surpass in effective interest all the other works of the author, and will cause Harper's Weskly to be looked for with more eagerness than ever by its myriads of readers." * Suffice it to say, that those peculiarities of construction that characterize the author, and in which he excels all the povelists of the time, are here displayed in full force, and that they indicate his intention to command the utmost attention of his readers. - Boston Traveller.

Mr. Collins is a writer of rare fascination .- N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

It is said to be the best effort of the author. -Bos-

The novel opens very spiritedly and dramatically. Unquestionally it will find millions of readers in this country.-Philadelphia City Rem. Wilkie Collins' new serial story in Harper's Weekly will add a special attraction to this all-popular periodical .- N. Y. Evening Mail.

Long looked for, come at last,  For some months to come, this tale will be a great attraction in Harper's Weekly .- Philadelphia Press.

After Dickens, there is no living novelist who enjoys a popularity which approaches that of Wilkie Collias. Those of his novels which have been for some time before the public retain the favor which they received at their first appearance, while a new serial from his fertile pen insures a wide circulation to the periodical in which it may appear. Even so popular a publication as Harper's Weekly has just received an immense increase in its circulation, simply in consequence of the announcement that Mr. Collins' new novel, "Man and Wife," will appear ex-clusively in its columns. " " The first chapters of his new novel promise exceedingly well, and there is little doubt but that it will prove as interesting and popular as its predecessors. The very peculiarities of Mr. Collins' style render his novels admirably adapted for publication in serial form. The sicady, onward movement of the story keeps the reader in constant expectation, and the pleasure which he derives from reading one installment only increases the interest with which he looks for the forthcoming chapters.-Citizen and Round Table, Harper's Weekly, in its issue of the 20th instant, adds to its already powerful combination of attractions a new novel by Wilkie Collins. The story is entitled "Man and Wife," and is one of thrilling interest. It exposes, in the author's masterly style, the great anomalies in the Irish and Scotch marriage laws, and the individual suffering which results from them. Considering the absorption of the attention of the public at present in subjects of this nature, we predict for the work an unexampled success,-Home Journal.

FROM THE SOUTH.

A Split in the Virginiu Republican Convention -Proceedings of the Secodors. RICHMOND, Nov. 26 .- A meeting of the soceders from the Republican Convention took place to-day at the office of the State Journal, the Republican organ. Sixty members were present, about one-half of the original convention. James H. Clements, former candidate for Lieutenant-Governor on the Republican ticket was chosen chairman. J. H. Platte, member of Congress elect, recited the causes of withdrawal. which, he said, were mainly found in a determination of a party in the convention to choke of by fair or unfair means a large number of members present. He thought the majority report, adopted by force, was a direct censure on the President and Congress, and in opposition to the Republicas party of the country. He believed that if the Republican party of Virginia could be put in accord with the Republican party of the country, and made so that men of liberal views could join it, it could carry the State. The declarations in the address to Congress about the dan ger to Republicans in the State were untrue and Congress would discover the deception, to the ultimate injury of the Republican party. John Jenkins, Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, stated that the things. stated of the people of Virginia in the address were untrue, and that the life of a Republican was as safe in Virginia as in New York.

O. A. Hine, leader of the Republicans in the Constitutional Convention, said this movement was not wholly the result of yesterday's proceedings, but of a growing desire among the people that the Republican party in Virginia should be put upon a liberal and a respectable basis, by which it might be enabled to carry the State.

The general drift of the speaker was, that the times had changed, and that the Republican party of New York must be put in accord with the Republican party of the country. Proscription and reckless denunciation of the people of the State must be dropped as an obsolete idea. and the party must be made strong and respectable enough to carry the State on its own merits, as the party does in other States. All the speakers disclaimed the idea of forming another party, and only desired to reorganize the one now existing. A committee of sixteen was appointed to call a Republican Convention, at such time as it may think proper, for reorganization.
