Giulla Cetal. The death of this celebrated tyric artist at Berlin is reported by cable. She was born in Milan, Italy, on the 22d of May, 1812. Her father was an officer of engineers in the army of the first Napoleon. Her family, however, was of a decidedly musical turn, ahe being the niece of Grassini, an eminent singer, while an elder sister named Giuditta, who died young, achieved a high reputation on the Italian atage. She was educated in a convent at Girizia, and was induced to enter upon a musical career by Auccess of her sister, although her musical training had been very meagre, and her voice at the outget gave but little promise. Her untiring industry, quickness of apprehension, and ambition for operatic success rapidly developed her powers, and when she made her debut in Bologna, at the age of seventeen, in a contraito part, she created an extremely favorable impression. She subsequently appeared at Florence, and in 1832, on the first repreentation of Bellini's Norma, in Milan, achieved a marked success as "Adelgisa," sharing with Pasta, who personated "Norma," the honors of the event. She had, previous to this occasion, entered into a contract with an impressario of Florence to serve a

Bix years' engagement at a very moderate salary. The great success achieved by her in Milan induced her to believe that she could command a higher comensation elsewhere, and to prevent a compliance with her obligations she left Italy in a secret and nurr (dmanner, hotly pursued. She barely escaped afling into the hands of the Florentine's emissaries, rossed the frontier into France, and, arriving in Paris, secured a position as prima donna of the Italian opera, through the influence of Rossini. Her first Parisian season was one of almost unexampled brilliancy, and successful beyond her expectations. In 1834 she appeared in London as "Ninetta" in Ros-Sini's La Gazza Ladra, achieving a success quite equal to her Parisian triumph. Every part which she attempted witnessed a fresh triumph and contributed to her reputation, so that she soon achieved a position second to none of her contemporaries. Among her greatest early triumphs were ner personations of the parts of "the Queen" in Ros-Bini's Semiramide, and "Donna Anna" in Mozart's Don Giovanni. But her grandest success was reserved for the role of "Norma," with which she became so completely identified that nearly all of her successors in the role have borrowed to a considerable extent both her expression and action. By her magnificent personation of this part, she earned the lasting soubriquet of La Diva, which has in later years been bestowed upon Adelina Patti. In Semiamide, Lucrezia Borgia, and the part of "Elvira" in Bellini's Puritani, which was written expressly for her, she displayed dramatic capacities almost on a par with her wonderful vocal powers, while in the buffo parts of The Barber of Seville, Don Pasquale, and La Cenerentola, she was almost as successful as in her great tragic roles. In August, 1854, she visited the United States in company with Signor Mario, appearing with great success in the principal cities of the Union; but her stay was a short one, and in the early part of 1855 she returned to Europe. The principal scenes of her triumphs were Paris and London. In the latter city she appeared regularly every season, with the exception of that of 1842, singing at Her Malesty's Theatre until 1846, when she transferred her services to Covent Garden, taking a formal farewell of the stage there in 1861. For several years she did not sing in public, except on one or two special occasions; but in 1865, and again in 1866, she sang brief engagements in London, returning, in the latter year, to Her Majesty's Theatre, the scene of her early triumphs.

In 1836, Madame Grisi was married to a French gentleman, M. de Melcy; but the marriage proved to be an unhappy one, and for some years previous to her death she lived with Signor Mario, the celebrated tenor singer, to whom it is said she was also married, and by whom she had four children, three of them

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

The Saucy Housemald" at the Chesnut. Le Malade Imaginaire was the last of Mollere's works. He was in very feeble health when he completed it, but, in spite of the solicitations of his wife, his physicians, and his friends, he insisted on playing the leading role in order to ensure the success of the the leading role in order to ensure the success of the comedy. On the third representation he was scarcely able to go through with his task, and before the performance concluded he was seized with an apoplectic fit, from which he died the next day. This piece, therefore, is the crowning effort of the great comic genius who maintains his place on the French stage, in spite of the lapse of time and the mutations of taste, with a surer hold than does Shakespeare on the boards of England and America, for Moliere is always appreciated and Shakespeare often is not. Racine, Corneille, and Voltaire, with their wailing tragedies written under the inspiration of a perverted taste for the classics, and weak as all mere imitations must be, never had a healthy life upon the stage. A great actress like Rachel might possibly give them a fictious vitality by infusing into them some of her own magnetic energy; but when Rachel died French classic tragedy died with her, and the works of the writers mentioned have passed away from the theatre and are only interesting to students.

Moliere, on the centrary, studied human nature.

Molicre, on the contrary, studied human nature. His characters are drawn from the various phases of life by which he was surrounded, and in spite of some conventionalities his comedies are as bright today as when they were written; for human nature does not change essentially, and true wit and humor are always fresh and entertaining. A piece like L: Malade Imaginaire will appear forced and unnatural in some of its features to an English or American Malade Imaginaire will appear forced and unnatural in some of its features to an English or American audience. It is more farcical in style and spirit than most of our regular comedies, but it should be remembered that it belongs to a different school of art, and that its incongruities are not greater in reality than those of our own standard comic pieces. Mr. Reade has followed his original with reasonable fidelity in the version of Le Malade Imaginaire produced last evening at the Chesnut under the absurd title of The Saucy Housemaid. In translating a masterpiece like this, the original title ought always to be retained, and in this instance the change is the less excusable, as the name adopted does not at all represent the character of the play. The Saucy Housemaid, however, is so brimful of real wit and humor, so vivacious and thoroughly entertaining, that we can afford to forgive minor sins of omission and commission. If well performed, this comedy cannot fall to keep an audience in a roar of laughter from beginning to end. It is to be regretted that the Chesnut street company fell very far short of doing justice to their subject last evening. The performance was exceedingly inartistic, scarcely any of the actors being perfect in their parts, and some of the most amusing situations were badly spoiled by the confusion that was caused by the insufficient rehearsal of the play. Mr. Jack mistook entirely the character of "Mons. Argan," the hypochondriac, and made him a raving maniac iinstead of a queralous, testy, and selfish old man. In the early scenes Mr. Jack was so vicient that he completely exhausted himself, and he was as much too tame towards the conclusion as he was too furious in the beginning. Miss Keene's "Toinette" was more easy and natural than some of her personations, but she falled to represent the part with the vivacity that belongs to it, and it did not make the favorable impression that it should. Some of the other characters were tolerably well personated, but there were so many inequaliti of the other characters were tolerably well personated, but there were so many inequalities in the performance that it would be useless for us to undertake a detailed criticism of them.

The advertisements pro used that this comedy should be placed upon the stage with new scenery. This promise was not kept; but it would have been matter of less consequence if the scenery used had should be placed upon the stage with new scenery. This promise was not kept; but it would have been a matter of less consequence if the scenery used had been appropriate. The apartment where the action is supposed to take place is in the house of a private citizen of the time of Louis XIV, and for this the gorgeous drawing-room scene that does duty on nearly every occasion at the Chesnut when an interior is to be represented, is palpably inappropriate. It is by attention and good taste in matters of this kind that the reputation of a theatre like the Chesnut can be made quite as much as by good acting, and it is certainly worth while to take a little pains to have such a play as The Saucy Housemaid well mounted. This comedy is so amusing in itself that it afforded a good entertainment last evening, in spite of the defects of which we have spoken; and it is to be hoped that some care will be taken in the future to remedy the inequalities, and to bring the performance up to a reasonable standard of excellence.

The City Amusements. AT THE CHESKUT the comedy of The Saucy House-aid will be performed this evening, to be followed an amusing comedicity. by an amusing comedictia.

At the Walnut the drama of Enoch Arden and the farce of The Happiest Day of My Life will be given this evening.

At the Arch Colley Cibber's comedy of She Would and She Would Not will be performed this evening, with the farce of Betsey Baker.

At Dupkez & Benedict's Opera House an amusing programme of negro minstrelsy will be presented this evening.

AT THE BAR ENTH STREET OPERA HOUSE the Chinese Giant, the Quarter Sessions, and other comicalities will be offered this evening.

Sienon Blitz will give one of his magical entertainments at the Assembly Building this evening.

THE "STAR" COURSE OF LECTURES.—The sixth lecture of this course will be delivered to-morrow evening, at the Academy of Music, by Hon. Charles Sumner, who will discuss the "Question of Caste." On Friday Rev. Robert Collyer, D. D., will lecture on "Clear Grit," and a most entertaining discourse may be expected.

JOHN B. GOUGH, Esq., will lecture on Monday evening next on "Circumstance," under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association.

THE CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC will give the second matinee of the season at the Academy of Music tomorrow, at 4 o'clock P. M. A fine programme of first-class music will be presented, and the entertainment will doubtless be of a most pleasant character.

MR. ADAM EVERLY.—This gentleman is now per-forming at the Varieties Theatre, New Orleans. The Picayuns of that city makes the following apprecia-tive mention of him, which will be read with interest by his many friends in this city:

rest by his many friends in this city:—
"An actor who unites to talent the medest deportment of a cultivated gentleman commends himself to our respect and highest consideration. Such an actor is Mr. Adam Everly, of the Varieties Theatre. We have taken much pleasure in watching the development of this gentleman's ability, as opportunity served him, since his appearance on the Varieties boards. While we cannot pronounce him a brilliant actor, we can award to him the possession of qualities which will outwear mere brilliancy, to wit a studious habit, a clear and appreciative judgment, industry, the faculty of giving to his idea of character in celligent interpretation and consistency, and the courage to resist the temptation to intrude egotistic liberties, which barren spectators, in their ignorance, appland as evidences of independent genius. With anything like generous encouragement, we are much mistaken if Mr. Everly does not leave an enviable reputation behind him, as the result of his New Orleans engagement."

PREPARATORY MEDICATION,-The human system, the most delicate and sensitive of all created things, should be duly prepared to meet the shock occasioned by a sudden change in the temperature of the air. Even the solid metals contract and expand under cold and heat-so tha if a man were composed of iron, instead of frail tissues and fibres, circulating fluids and brittle osseous matter his frame would not be proof against the vicissitudes of climate. As it is, it behooves every one, especially the feeble, to fortify the frail tenement of mortality against the inclemency of the present season. A wholesome strongth-supplying vegetable tonic and alterative is the preparatory medicine required, and among medicinal agents of this character Hostetter's Stomach Bitters stand supreme. In a successful career of nearly a quarter of a century, the preparation has never been equalled or approached, and its sales are now larger than those of any half dozen articles purporting to belong to the same class that have ever been advertised in this country. As a remedy and preventive of Dyspersia, and all its complications, it may be said to have lived down competition and to be the standard specific of the Western Hemisphere. A course of this genial restorative at the commencement of winter is the surest safeguard against all the complaints which are caused or aggravated by exposure to cold. WHILE WAITING FOR A COUGH to go as it came, you are often laying the foundation for some Pulmonary or Bronchial Affection. It is better to get rid of a Cold at once by using that sure remedy, Dr. D. JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT which will cure the most stubborn Cough, and relieve you of all anxiety as to dangerous consequences. WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.—The advantage of this compound over the plain oil is that the nauseating taste of the oil is entirely removed, and the whole rendered entirely palatable. The offensive taste of the oil has long acted as a prominent obection to its use; but in this form the trouble is entirely obviated. A host of certificates might be given here to testify to the excellence and success of Wilbor's Cod Liver Oil and Lime. TEMPLE OF FANCY.-One of the handsomest and most conspicuous buildings in Sixth street, cerner of Commerce, Philadelphia, is the new and splendid edifice erected last year by the well-known importers of toys and fancy goods, Messrs. GEORGE DOLL & CO. The structure is located at Nos. 10 and 12 North Sixth street, as many of our readers are aware, and has a front of thirty-two feet on that street, and extends back to the depth of one hundred |feet. It is four stories in height, and the entire front is of iron, beautifully finished, while the internal ar rangements are perfect in every particular. The entire edifice is devoted to the business of the firm.

GEORGE DOLL & Co. are among the oldest importers of toys and fancy goods in this country. By enterprise and integrity in business transactions their trade so rapidly increased that it became imperatively necessary to have more extensive quarters in which to exhibit their elegant and varied stock of goods; hence the above-men-tioned building was erected. On the second, third, and fourth floors the goods are sold at wholesale, and there are now exhibited there all kinds of toys, fancy goods, china ornaments, meerschaum pipes, ambers, canes mounted with gold, silver, and ivory, together with many novelties not found elsewhere, which will be sold at very myderate
