-From Turner Brothers & Co. we have received "From the Creation to Moses" and "From Joshua to Danial," in words of one syllable. Published by George A. Leavitt. In these books the exact language of the Bible has been retained as far as practicable, and they are well adapted for the purpose of interesting children in the narratives of the Seri >tures. These two volumes give a complete Bible history from the creation to the time of Daniel, and, with the exception of the atrociously poor engravings, they are entitled to hearty commendation.

The same house sends us Appleton's Journal for December 18, which is full of entertaining reading matter.

- From J. B. Lippincott & Co, we have received "The Divisions in the Society of Friends," by Thomas H. Speakman. This little work is in reply to an article that appeared in The Friends' Review, and it is designed to relieve the "Hicksite" Friends from the imputations of their "Orthodox" brethren. The work will be read with interest not only by the members of the Society of Friends, but by those who wish to understand clearly what the differences between the rival factions of that body really are.

The same house sends us several of Lee &

Shepard's recent publications.

"The B. O. W. C.," by the author of "The Dodge Club," is a very amusing book for boys, that will certainly excite the juvenile imagination to the highest pitch of emulation. It relates the adventures of the members of a secret order who gloried in the title, represented by the mysterious initials, of "The Brethren of the Order of the White Cross,' The haps and mishaps of these youngsters are related in entertaining style, and the book is one that will find plenty of appreciative "Sabbath Songs for Children's Worship, by Leonard Marshall, is an excellent selection of hymns and tunes for Sabbath-schools.

-From the American Sunday-School Union we have received "Bread from God," a handsomely illuminated series of pictures and verses, bound in attractive style suitable for the holiday season; also "Mabel; or, the Bitter Root," and "How Paul Became an Artist"-a couple of religious stories for young people.

-Porter & Coates send us "Little Rosie's Christmas Times"-a pleasantly written story

-"The Guide Book of the West Chester and Philadelphia Railroad" gives an excellent description of one of the most beautiful and interesting sections of the State of Pennsylvania, and it will be invaluable to those who travel on the road, whether for business or pleasure. The book is illustrated with a number of excellent lithographs of scenery and points of interest, executed, we understand, by one of our leading artists. The "Guide Book" is for sale at the depot of the company and on the cars. Printed by Sherman & Co.

-The Philadelphia Photographer for December concludes the sixth volume of a very useful and interesting publication. Its specimen photograph is a view of the Mount Washington Railway, by Kilburn Brothers, of Littleton, N. H., and it contains a number or valuable papers by practical writers on photographic subjects. The conductors of the magazine announce a number of improvements for the new volume. Published by Benerman & Wilson.

-Godey's Lady's Book for January commences the eightieth volume and the fortieth year of one of the most popular publications in the country. A more appropriate frontispiece could not be given than the fine steel-plate portrait of the genial editor, which will certainly be appreciated by his multitude of lady admirers. In this picture Mr. Godey looks as if he was likely to continue in charge of The Lady's Book for another forty years and more. A number of other illustrations are given, including fashion plates and patterns, and the reading matter is up to the usual mark of excellence.

-The Gardener's Monthly for December is filled with articles on horticultural subjects that will be appreciated by farmers, gardeners, and florists. Published by Brinckloe & Marot, No. 23 North Sixth street.

-Peters' Musical Monthly for December gives an excellent selection of popular vocal and instrumental pieces.

-From the Central News Company, No. 505 Chesnut street, we have received the latest numbers of Punch and Fun.

NEW-YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10, 1809. Votes and Virtue. A hard struggle do the leading ladies of the Woman's Suffrage Association have of it to keep themselves before the public. Unlike actresses and public singers, they are not placarded from one end of the city to the other, nor constantly advertised in the newspapers. The institutions which they support are not yet recognized as standard and legitimate places of amusement, and consequently such notices as they do get from the newspapers they have to work for. Very hard work it is, too. Take my word for it, ladies, the labor would be less and the rewards sooner and sweeter, if you would apply the same amount of energy to glorifying the fireside that you do to disfiguring the lecture hall. If you would learn that easting votes is not necessarily synonymous with advancing in virtue, and that you will not grow weaker in sentiment the less you meddle with the question of suffrage, you would be showing a new phase of character which the public and the papers would alike respect. "Keeping before the publie!" I know how necessary that is in your eyes, and how manfully you put your feminine shoulders to the wheel. But the cart sticks fast in the rut of Woman's Rights, and Providence don't seem in a hurry to help those who are femininely struggling to help themselves. Mrs. Croly is one of these strugglers, and having a husband who holds a position of some influence among the newspapers, she manages to hold her own - or rather his - with a tolerable grace. Mrs. Norton is another slowly arising from the obscurities of wedded life, by dint of a sharp voice, incisive manners, and the p pretty-imperiousness which is not-altogether unpleasant in a young and smart woman. At a recent meeting of the Woman's Suffrage Association, she has been enunciating some opinions which prove how rapidly she has advanced in a few short months. Upon Mrs. Blake's remarking upon the shameful condition of things during the French Revolution, when scarcely a woman could go to a public assembly without seeing six or eight husbands, she remarked that for her part she thought such a set of circumstances much better than that under which we now lived, when a woman was obliged to live with a husband she detested. Dr. Hoeber, a woman's-rights man, who believes that Eve was created some centuries before Adam, and had the bringing up of that hen-pecked Aroglodyte, said that the present system of marriage was nothing but legalized prostitution. At this point several ladies got up and went out in silent indignation. Mrs. Norton contended that when she used the word free-love, she merely meant it in contradistinction to love which was purchased, and that the children of divorced parents were a great deal better away from those parents than with them, although their natural guardian was their mother. Mrs. Somerby-who is one of those steady-sailing little vessels that like to make straight for the port of woman's suffrage without stopping at any of those interesting but out-of-the-way little havens which her sister-craft delight to weigh anchor in-Mrs. Somerby was the only woman present who made any sensible remarks. These were to the effect that the question of suffrage was the question before the Association, and perhaps it would be as well to stick to the point in hand, and not go flying off to every point under the sun except that question. As might be expected, she was talked down.

Art Notes. The bad storm on Monday night prevented a large attendance at the first reception of the tenth season of the Brooklyn Art Academy, which was to have been held at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. A very few ladies were present, and those were of the number comprising the committee of reception. Last evening Mr. Constant Mayer gave a private view of his paintings at Clinton Hail, Astor place. Next Saturday afternoon, between the hours of 2 and 4, the bronze statue for the Seventh Regiment Monument will be exhibited at the studio of Mr. J. Q. A. Ward, No. 9 West Forty-ninth street. Amusements

It is understood that the troupe of Russian concert singers who have been giving entertainments at Steinway Hall will shortly appear in Russian opera at the Academy of Music. We have had English, German, Italian, French, and American speras-it is time for a change; the Russian is to be that change. Apropos of English opera, Mrs. Bernard has been giving the Huquenots, with Mr. Peakes as "Count de St. Brio," Mr. Arnold as "Count de St. Nevers," Mr. Haigh as "Raoul," Mr. Drayton as "Marcel," Mrs. Drayton as "Margaret," Mrs. Bernard as "Valentine," and Mrs. Bowler as "Urbain." Mrs. Bernard was careful and cold, as she always is. Mrs. Drayton was worse-she had a cold, and that is an offense which people never pardon in a prima donna. Mr. Drayton bore away all the honors of the evening, redeeming in fact the performance from becoming liable to the charge of being indifferent. Mrs. Bernard's attempt to give Les Huquenots was dashed with that audacity which bespeaks for such enterprises a favorable hearing. Its very daring to some extent disarmed her critics, and made them eager to treat her with consideration.

Le Pere Hyaclathe's Lecture. The great lecture came off last night, and the Academy of Music presented such a spectacle as has been very rarely witnessed within its walls, The regular price of seats was two dollars, but hundreds were glad to give ten, and the sa around the ticket offices have only been equalled during the furore attending the visit of Jenny Lind and that of Mr. Dickens. At 8 o'clock precisely Le Pere Hyacinthe appeared upon the stage, and was saluted by a burst of applause almost as startling as the roar of cannon, had several seats in the parquet been occupied by them instead of by human beings, and all had simultaneously been discharged. Nothing, however, ruffled the serenity of the priest's phlegmatic presence. He made one slight, long, respectful obeisance, and thereupon took his seat without making other response. His lecture was of course delivered in French, and was listened to with profound interest by hundreds who did not understand one word of the language. I must confess I was more interested in watching the countenances of the multitude than in that of Le Pere. His eloquence was faithfully mirrored there. It was like beholding the reflection of an august panorama, by turns beautiful and tender, at intervals startling and sublime. Writing thus hastily, I can only say that if I had been as ignorant of all spoken language as the majority of the andience was of French, I should have been in no doubt as to the general drift of his discourse, so lucid were his majestic pantomime and the marvellous intonations of his voice.
